BRYAN BRINGS ABOUT TREATY —WITH ROGER

Gives Local Lesson in Peace Making.

William Jennings Bryan has presented his own formula for Democratic conduct toward securing immediate treaty ratification; let it be known that he has no intention of becoming an "active" candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, and established the entente cordiale with Roger C. Sullivan and the other Illinois Democrats whom he read out of the party in 1906.

All of this happened in Chicago yesterday—a day that may or may not be as important to Mr. Bryan politically as that July occasion in 1896 when he was first nominated for the presidency.

Plan to Aid Treaty.

Mr. Bryan's proposal, which, he said, is the natural second step in the development of his Washington speech, is twofold. He suggests first that Democratic senators proceed to confer openly and frankly with Republican senators, seeking a give-and-take agreement, whereby the treaty can be ratified with compromise reservations. The compromise conference failing, he proposes that the Democrats withhold enough votes on the roll call, whereby the existent Republican majority in the senate, now committed to the Lodge reservations, becomes the actual two-thirds vote required for ratification of the treaty.

"Can any man say what President Wilson will or will not accept?" Mr. Bryan demanded. "In either of the foregoing events it will be up to the president to approve the action of the senate or to refuse to forward its action to Europe. In that case the responsibility rests solely and personally upon the president."

Travels with Sullivan.

Mr. Bryan came from Washington with Mr. Sullivan. In fact, they occupied the same compartment for much of the journey. Real political business was transacted on the way hither.

The immediate result is that Mr. Sullivan, Carter H. Harrison, Robert M. Sweitzer, and Edward F. Dunne are now agreed on as the four Chicago delegates at large to the San Francisco convention, and there will be no primary fight among Illinois Democrats on April 13. Mr. Bryan will not be a presidential primary entry.

Mr. Bryan's present purpose is to remain aloof from going into any direct primary state as a presidential candidate. He didn't say this himself. He will be a delegate at large from Nebraska, and if the nomination comes to him eventually he will be in position to accept the same.

Keep Treaty Out of Campaign.

Meantime—that is, between now and June 28 when the Frisco convention begins business—Mr. Bryan's policy requires that the Democrats eliminate the Versailles treaty and the league of nations as a 1920 campaign issue.

He presented his own plan—as an American and as a Democrat—yesterday in a two hour speech before the Iroquois club, at a luncheon that was arranged after the unexpected arrival of the Nebraskan in Chicago yesterday morning.

Says There's No Split.

"The president and I only differ in method and not in purpose," Mr. Bryan said. "There is less reason to talk about a split here than in any other conceivable case. I am an American citizen and I yield to no other American in my interest in my country's welfare. I am a Democrat and I yield to no other Democrat—not even to the president of the United States—in my interest in my party's welfare. I take no orders from the president or from any other man as to what I shall do and I do not rely on honors conferred upon me by my party to bind my conduct.

"But when I get through the Republicans and those who are anxious to believe that there is a Democratic split will find nothing in my actions or speech hostile to my party's welfare.

"Who has the authority to say that the president will or will not accept a reasonable compromise? My idea simply is to suggest a way out. I have left the beaten track and I only apply old rules to new conditions. We must compromise, if possible, to put this question out of politics, and if we cannot agree, the minority must recognize the right of the majority to rule. After free and open discussion, when concessions may be asked and

EX-INSTRUCTOR AT GREAT LAKES HELD FOR INQUIRY

J. J. Kuvnoski, former physical director of the athletic department of the Great Lakes Naval station, is under arrest at the station. His name has been mentioned in the mysterious disappearance of $2,000 worth of exchange coupons from the athletic department.

A preliminary hearing was held yesterday in Waukegan and the case was continued until next Saturday. Kuvnoski's arrest was ordered by Rear Admiral Frederic B. Bassett.

Several enlisted men were arrested yesterday in connection with disappearance of $1,000 worth of officers' pay checks from the hospital. Naval officials refused to give out names.

N. J. WILL BE ONE BIG COLIC AFTER ANOTHER JAN. 16

Wet Governor Says He Is Against Drys.

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 10.—Gov.-Elect Edward I. Edwards, New Jersey's "wet" chief executive, who takes office Jan. 20, today predicted an epidemic of stomachache would sweep the state Jan. 16, or shortly afterward, and its victims would prove incurable.

"Under the federal laws gin, whisky, and other alcoholic liquors can be manufactured in New Jersey for medicinal purposes," said Edwards. "Anybody selling these products for beverage purposes will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. But there are plenty of doctors in New Jersey—anybody can have a stomachache, and it's one ailment you can't diagnose."

State Rights Trampled.

Declaring that he believed the rights of his state were being ignored, Edwards said the constitution gives New Jersey the "right to decide the question of prohibition for itself."

"This is most decidedly a question of state's rights," he exclaimed. "It is clearly a police power in which the state has complete authority.

"I was elected governor on a wet platform. If that isn't an indication of the desire of the people of this state to have their personal liberty, I don't know what is.

Well, What Is the Law?

"The legislature will pass my bill to permit the sale of light wines and beers, and we will call the turn on the federal government. They will have to render a definite decision as to what constitutes 'intoxicating liquor.'

"But if they do decide against these beverages, our fight will not be over. I made my pledge to have New Jersey a 'wet' state and I was elected on that pledge."

Edwards said he sent a man to Washington to investigate the report that the prohibition proclamation had not been legal because some of the states in ratifying voted on "alcohol," while others voted on "intoxicating liquors."

Refuse All Information.

"At every turn my man was thwarted," Edwards said today. "He was informed the states on many of the ratifications had been changed and that he 'couldn't get them.'

"However, I can say with assurance that there was a lengthy discussion in the state department as to whether the proclamation should be issued—at the time of its issuance—and that it is now illegal because of the votes by state legislatures having been taken on two different measures."

POLICE RAIDS PUT HUNDREDS BEHIND BARS

Garrity Supervises a City-Wide Drive.

In his office in the city hall Col. John J. Garrity, chief of police, spent some happy hours last night listening to the voices of his captains calling over the wires.

They were telling him of the progress of a great drive on criminals which he had planned, of the arrest of hundreds of gunmen, burglars, highwaymen, thieves and others, of the cleaning up of a murder, the killing of a fugitive gunman by a detective, and the wounding of another.

Garrity's plan was working well. He smiled into the transmitter every other minute and voiced words of commendation. All over the city his men were working, dressed in civilian clothes, riding in automobiles—some furnished by the department, some by members of the police reserve, some by citizens. They were cleaning up Chicago to the chief's liking.

Phone of Killing Bad Man.

The voice from Deering street station was the first to bring the cry of "Bully."

"We've just shot and killed a crook," it said. "Man by the name of John Chuckalowski, known as 'Chuck.' Got a record. Bad fellow.

"About 10 o'clock Kelly, Adams, Creed, Carney, and Neary saw him run into an alley. They knew him. They called to him to stop. He wouldn't. They ran after him, firing shots in the air. At Thirty-seventh and Wallace streets Detective Tom Mangan heard the shots and joined in the chase. He's a detective bureau man.

Four Shots; Four Times Hit.

"Well, they found 'Chuck' in the basement of a tumble down vacant shanty at 3822 Parnell avenue and called on him to surrender. He ran across the street to the rear of 3817 Parnell. Mike Kelly and Mangan were right on his heels. They fired at him. He dropped—hit four times."

"How many shots?" interrupted the chief.

"Four shots. He was dying when they came up to him. He had a gun in his hand, loaded, a pocket full of cartridges, and $42. All he said was, 'Well, you got me at last.'"

Hints at Promotion.

"If there were any vacancies," said the chief, "I'd make some promotions right away."

"This man," went on the voice, "has been seen coming out of 3740 Lowe avenue quite frequently. That's the home of Mrs. O'Brien, mother of Jack O'Brien, who is to be hanged for killing Detective Richard Burke. She has two other sons in jail—but 'Chuck' didn't live there."

Tells of Second Shooting.

Hardly had the chief said good-by to Maxwell street's voice when he heard it again, telling of the shooting of Frank Prate, 1645 West Madison street, a man with a police record.

"Sergt. George Lyman and his men went into Arrigo's poolroom, 715 South Racine avenue," it said. "They had a bunch of suspects corralled, when one of them broke away and started to jump a fence. One of the men shot at him and hit him in the head. He's at the county hospital, and they say he's dying."

"That's the stuff," said the chief. "Call again."

Then came the voice from West Chicago avenue—"We've had a murder over here, garage man, name Sommerfield. We know who did it, but we haven't got him yet"—and from Maxwell—"We've just cleaned up that West Chicago avenue murder."

"Fine," said the chief. "Bully!"

"Mug" 125 at Bureau.

The voice from the Bureau of Identification—"Capt. Michael Evans has 'mugged' 125 men since 6 o'clock, 60 per cent of them with records, and about twenty-five of them good crooks and badly wanted."

"O, great!" bellowed the chief. "That means there's about 300 or more arrested. Fine haul."

The voice from the Central detail: "We've got thirty prisoners, some good ones with blackjacks and guns and knives on 'em, and some like Ed 'Spike' O'Donnell, out from the pen on a writ of supersedeas, sent down on that Stockmen's bank robbery job. We've got John Burkhardt, ex-morals

EASTMAN IS 'MR. SMITH' WHO GAVE TECH $11,000,000

Institute's Mystery Is Cleared by Felton.

Massachusetts Tech's Haroun-al-Raschid—the "mysterious Mr. Smith"—guiding spirit of the school's recent $8,000,000 endowment fund drive, was made known yesterday with the announcement that the entire fund has been successfully obtained.

He is George Eastman, head of the Eastman Kodak company, millionaire philanthropist extraordinary.

Mr. Eastman's identity was disclosed simultaneously in Boston and Chicago last night; in Boston at a banquet of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's alumni association, in Chicago by S. M. Felton, president of the Great Western railway, a member of the organization and a leader in the drive.

Help Dates Back to 1910.

"Mr. Eastman has been the good angel to this great technical college more than once," said Mr. Felton. "Ten years ago, when the school was moved from Boston to Cambridge, he gave toward this move, incognito, $7,000,000, which made possible the erection of a number of the fine buildings.

"When the recent movement for an endowment fund toward the raising of teachers' salaries, etc., was started, Mr. Eastman announced that he would give $4,000,000 toward such a fund if the alumni would raise a similar amount.

"Well, we now have toward our endowment fund $4,000,000, raised by the alumni; $4,000,000 given by Mr. Eastman, and $5,000,000 left us by Mr. Frick. So we are pretty well fixed for a time at least, and our professors may expect to receive that much talked of 'living wage.'"

Cornell Gets $2,136,004.

New York, Jan. 10.—Cornell university's endowment fund gained in the present campaign thus far $2,136,004, according to an announcement at the national committee luncheon in the Cornell club today. The goal is $10,000,000. Contributions have been received from 997 persons.

STEAMER SUNK BY MINE; 700 DIE, RUMOR IN LONDON

LONDON, Jan. 10.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Genoa today says the Italian steamer Principessa Mafalda is reported to have struck a mine and sunk with the loss of 700 lives.

The owners of the steamer have no confirmation of this report and it is discredited by Lloyd's shipping agency here.

The Principessa Mafalda has not been reported since it left Buenos Aires, Dec. 31, for the Mediterranean. It is not due to pass Gibraltar for several days yet, the average time of the run from Buenos Aires to Gibraltar being twenty days.

The Principessa Mafalda is a steamer of 9,210 tons gross, built in 1909. It is owned by the Lloyd Italian line.

SEVEN SPANISH SOLDIERS SLAIN AFTER OUTBREAK

Pledges Germans to Pay All, but Seeks to Save Wilhelm

PARIS, Jan. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The outstanding comment tonight on the signing of the peace treaty is that it leaves the United States the only power which was actively at war with Germany not now on a peace basis. That was the note sounded by Baron Kurt von Lersner, head of the German peace delegation, in a statement to the Associated Press immediately after the ceremony.

Hopes America Will Act.

"I am naturally happy that peace has finally become effective," Baron von Lersner said. "My great regret is that the United States is the only country with which Germany is still in a state of war. I hope, however, that this situation will soon be changed.

"Execution of the treaty of Versailles imposes on Germany the heaviest sacrifices ever borne by a nation in modern times. We lost in the west and in the east territories that belonged to Prussia for centuries. We have assumed enormous economic obligations. Nevertheless, I am glad that peace is at last reëstablished, because it will give back to Germany her beloved sons still prisoners abroad."

Will Meet All Terms.

Asked as to the execution of the terms of the treaty, Baron von Lersner declared that Germany was ready and determined to do her utmost. He continued:

"We have already, even without being obliged by the terms of the treaty, delivered a considerable quantity of products, including 2,500,000 tons of coal, to France, and I can say that Germany will go to the utmost limit in fulfilling all the obligations she has incurred. It will mean hard times for Germany, but with the recovery of our ardor for labor and production we hope to meet every emergency.

"The recovery of our economic prosperity is as much to the interest of the entente as it is to us, on account of the great economic difficulties that threaten all Europe. It is obvious, speaking chiefly of France, that her economic prosperity depends upon the economic recovery of Germany."

Trials Give a Problem.

Baron von Lersner said he had had several satisfactory conferences with Louis Loucheur, French minister of reconstruction, regarding the resumption of trade relations between Germany and France, and added that he hoped the European nations, working together, would solve the great economic problems.

The most thorny remaining problem appeared to Von Lersner to be the question of the extradition of a considerable number of German officers, officials, and soldiers to be tried for crimes alleged to have been committed during the war.

"'I do not want to give up hope," continued Baron von Lersner, "that among the allies the conviction will prevail that, by availing themselves strictly of rights conceded in the treaty for the extradition of those accused, they may cause the gravest consequences, not only for Germany, but for all Europe.

"We pointed out the harmful consequences that might ensue if the allies' right to demand extradition should be executed literally. We submitted written suggestions for the solution of the delicate problem.

Promise Trial in Germany.

"The principal features were that Germany would undertake to arraign before the Supreme court of Germany all persons accused; would except all such from the law of amnesty, and would consent to the presence of representatives of entente as public prosecutors. Your conviction must be the same as ours, that the desire of the entente is not to satisfy revenge, but to punish the guilty with equity and justice.

"The entente proposal far exceeds the demands made by Austria on Serbia for the punishment of the assassins of the archduke, plans which were rejected by Serbia with the approval of the entente. I cannot believe our former adversaries have any interest in compromising the reëstablishment of normal life in Germany by insisting in this question of extradition upon availing themselves unsparingly of rights, the real end of which might be attained otherwise."

ARREST OF MAID BARES EXTENSIVE JEWELRY THEFTS

Did you, O trusting madam, employ recently a 14 year old colored girl named Thelma? Then you may find some of your jewelry tomorrow morning in the city custodian's office, room 403½ city hall.

Thelma, arrested by Policewomen Julia Cunningham and Mabel Rockwell, was taken to the Juvenile home yesterday after she confessed stealing thousands of dollars' worth of valuables and cash from various homes. In one place she worked three hours at $400 an hour.

When the policewoman went to her home they found a flashlight. They accidentally knocked off the end and found it filled with pawn tickets. Some of the tickets were redeemed—and many fine diamonds were recovered.

The police are withholding the girl's last name, hoping to find the man who disposed of what she stole.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Announces a Reduction in Price to the Newsboys of Chicago.

To assist the newsboys of Chicago to meet the increased costs of food, clothing and living essentials, The Chicago Tribune announces that, effective Monday, January 12th, the price of The Chicago Daily Tribune to newsboys in Chicago will be reduced to $1.20 per one hundred copies.

The Tribune takes this action after careful consideration of the problem confronting the newsboy. It realizes that the Chicago newsboy can increase his income only in one of two ways. Either he must buy his papers more cheaply or sell to the public at three cents.

In the face of increased expense of print paper, labor, and every element of its product, The Tribune is unwilling to impose upon the public a higher rate at a time when every effort should be made to stop the vicious circle of rising costs. Consequently, in answering the newsboys' problem, The Tribune has decided to reduce the wholesale price of The Daily Tribune to newsboys, newsdealers and carriers in the City of Chicago.

The Price of the Daily Tribune in Chicago Remains at 2 Cents

FRANCE, PREPARE! FOCH WARNING AS PEACE IS SIGNED

PARIS, Jan. 10.—Marshal Foch in an interview today pleading for a policy of preparedness, warned France against "ingenious persons who believe that to leave the key in the door is the surest way to prevent entrance of thieves."

Peace, as brought to France by the final ratifications to the treaty of Versailles, is no guarantee that war has been banished forever, the old warrior declared.

"War is not always avoidable," Foch warned. "It can begin upon the frontiers of the most pacific peoples. Indeed, it often seems to begin easiest in such places.

"It would be foolish to believe there will be no more war merely because we do not wish to fight. France and the world must learn a lesson of prudence, as well as good will, from the great struggle."

Foch warned it should be France's policy to be "ready for any unfavorable event."

"War no longer may be called an 'art,'" he said. "It is now a 'science,' and an 'industry' and will continue to be evolved as long as there are peoples to fight.

"Those who wish to avoid violence canot afford to ignore anything in the way of scientific and industrial progress," Foch concluded.

REPORTED UPSET OF EBERT REGIME DENIED BY BERLIN

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 10.—The report that the German government has been overthrown is untrue, according to a dispatch received here from Berlin.

The foregoing dispatch apparently proves false the earlier reports from Brussels that revolutionists had upset the German government.

PEACE SIGNED WITHOUT POMP, OR CEREMONY

Allies Cut Payment for Scapa Flow.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, Jan. 10.—The allies and Germany are at peace. The world war ended formally this afternoon, when representatives of the powers which had approved the Versailles treaty deposited their certificates of ratification and signed the proces-verbal which put the treaty into effect.

The United States took no part in the proceedings, and remains in "a state of war" with Germany.

Simplicity marked the ceremony in the Clock hall of the French ministry of foreign affairs, where the final act of the great struggle was staged. Fourteen allied and associated powers, on the one hand, and Germany, on the other, made peace and are again friendly nations.

Pledge of Reparation Made.

The events of today were without ceremony or pomp. First the representatives of England, France, Italy, and Japan met the two German envoys in the office of the French foreign minister, and the Germans signed the protocol binding their nation to pay for the sinking of the German fleet in Scapa Flow and to carry out the unfulfilled terms of the armistice.

That done, the premiers and the Germans were escorted to the Clock room, where were gathered the diplomats of nearly all the nations of the world, for, besides those signing, other invited statesmen attended the ceremony.

The allied premiers and foreign ministers, gathered around the long green covered tables with Baron Kurt von Lersner and Herr von Simson, Germany's representatives at a separate small table, arose one by one as they were designated by the master of ceremonies and affixed their signatures to the proces-verbal spread on a stand in the middle of the chamber. There was nothing of the dramatic in the actual proceeding; it was dramatic only in its great significance.

Signing Is Done Quickly.

Baron von Lersner arose and, walking quickly to the stand, affixed his signature to the document. It seemed scarcely two seconds when Mr. Lloyd George was on his feet. He signed quickly and was followed by M. Clemenceau and then by Signor Nitti and Baron Matsui. Then the delegates of the following nations signed, in the order named: Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Guatemala, Panama, Peru, Poland, Siam, Czecho-Slovakia, and Uruguay.

The United States, China, Greece, and Roumania, not having ratified the treaty with Germany, did not sign.

It was 6 minutes after 4 o'clock when Mr. Lloyd George signed; ten minutes later all had signed.

Will Be Enforced in Full.

Then a letter from the supreme council promising Germany that the allies would reduce from 400,000 tons to 275,000 tons their demand for maritime equipment to pay for the Scapa Flow sinking was handed to Baron von Lersner. This done, M. Clemenceau arose and said:

"The protocol between the allied and associated powers and Germany has been signed. The ratifications of the treaty with Germany have been deposited. From this moment the treaty enters into effect. It will be enforced in all its terms."

That was all. The diplomats filed out, and Europe was at peace.

Regret Absence of Wallace.

The absence of Ambassador Wallace, representing the United States, was a distinct disappointment to the allied statesmen. They had invited all the diplomats, and hoped that Mr. Wallace would attend. A formal invitation was received last night by Mr. Wallace from Premier Clemenceau, who had insisted that he attend. The American ambassador waited until a late hour for instructions from Washington. When none arrived he returned his invitation to M. Clemenceau.

It is announced that the first trains carrying German prisoners will cross the border tonight, thus giving evidence of the good faith of France in promising to give up her prisoners of war as soon as Germany allowed the peace treaty to go into effect.

League Effective Jan. 16.

The putting of the league of nations into being, which will be one of the immediate consequences of the exchange of ratifications of the treaty of Versailles, will occur in Paris at 10:30 o'clock the morning of Friday, Jan. 16, the supreme council decided today.

Ambassador Wallace cabled this decision of the council to President Wilson so that the president might issue the formal notice of the meeting of the council of the league to be held on the date named.

The first meeting of the council will be called to order and presided over by Leon Bourgeois, the representative of France in the council. He will deliver a brief address. Earl Curzon, the British foreign secretary, who will represent Great Britain at the meeting, also will speak.

Premier Clemenceau has telegraphed Argentina, Chile, Colombia, Denmark, Spain, Norway, Paraguay, Holland, Salvador, Sweden, Switzerland, and Venezuela that the treaty is effective and inviting them to membership in the league of nations.

PROMISE TO GERMANS

PARIS, Jan. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—After the exchange of ratifications of the peace treaty today Premier Clemenceau handed to Baron Lersner the following letter:

"PARIS, Jan. 10.—Now that the protocol provided for by the note of Nov. 2 has been signed by qualified representatives of the German government and in consequence the ratifications of the treaty of Versailles have been deposited, the allied and associated powers wish to renew to the German government their assurance that while necessary reparations for the sinking of the German fleet in Scapa Flow will be exacted, they do not intend to injure the vital economic interest of Germany.

"On this point, by this letter, they confirm the declarations which the general secretary of the peace conference was charged with making orally to the president of the German delegation on Dec. 23.

Changes Which Are Made.

"These declarations are as follows:

"First, the general secretary has been authorized by the supreme council to assure the German delegation that the interallied commission on control and the commission on reparations will conform with the greatest care to the statements in the note of Dec. 8 relative to safeguarding the vital economic interests of Germany.

"Second, the experts of the allied and associated powers, believing that part of the information on which they founded their demand for 400,000 tons of floating docks, floating cranes, tugs, and dredges may have been inaccurate on certain points and details, think they have committed an error as concerns 80,000 tons of floating docks at Hamburg.

"If the investigation to which the interallied commission on control will proceed shall show that there has really been an error, the allied and associated powers will be prepared to reduce their demands proportionately in a manner to lower them to 300,000 tons in round numbers, and even below that if the necessity of such reduction shall be demonstrated by convincing arguments.

Not a "Crime of War."

"Third—The allied and associated governments do not consider that the sole act of sinking the German ships at Scapa Flow constitutes a crime of war for which individual punishment will be exacted in conformity with article 228 of the peace treaty.

"On the other hand, the allied and associated powers wish to point out that they have presented a demand for 400,000 tons on the inventory established by them. German experts have furnished details, which we will verify, and which give a smaller figure. Consequently there will eventually be deducted from the 400,000 tons of floating docks, cranes, tugs, and dredgers claimed by the allies a tonnage of floating docks which, after verification, we will recognize as having been included on the interallied inventory by mistake. Such deduction shall not exceed 125,000 tons.

"The allied and associated powers add that the 192,000 tons proposed by the German government, of which a list was handed over during the deliberations of the technical commissions, must be delivered immediately. For the balance of the tonnage a delay will be allowed which cannot exceed thirty months."

STAND OF AMERICA.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Formal notice has been served on Germany by the United States, in connection with the deposit at Paris today of ratifications putting into effect the treaty of Versailles, that conditions of the armistice still govern relations between the United States and Germany. Announcement of this action was made tonight by the state department.

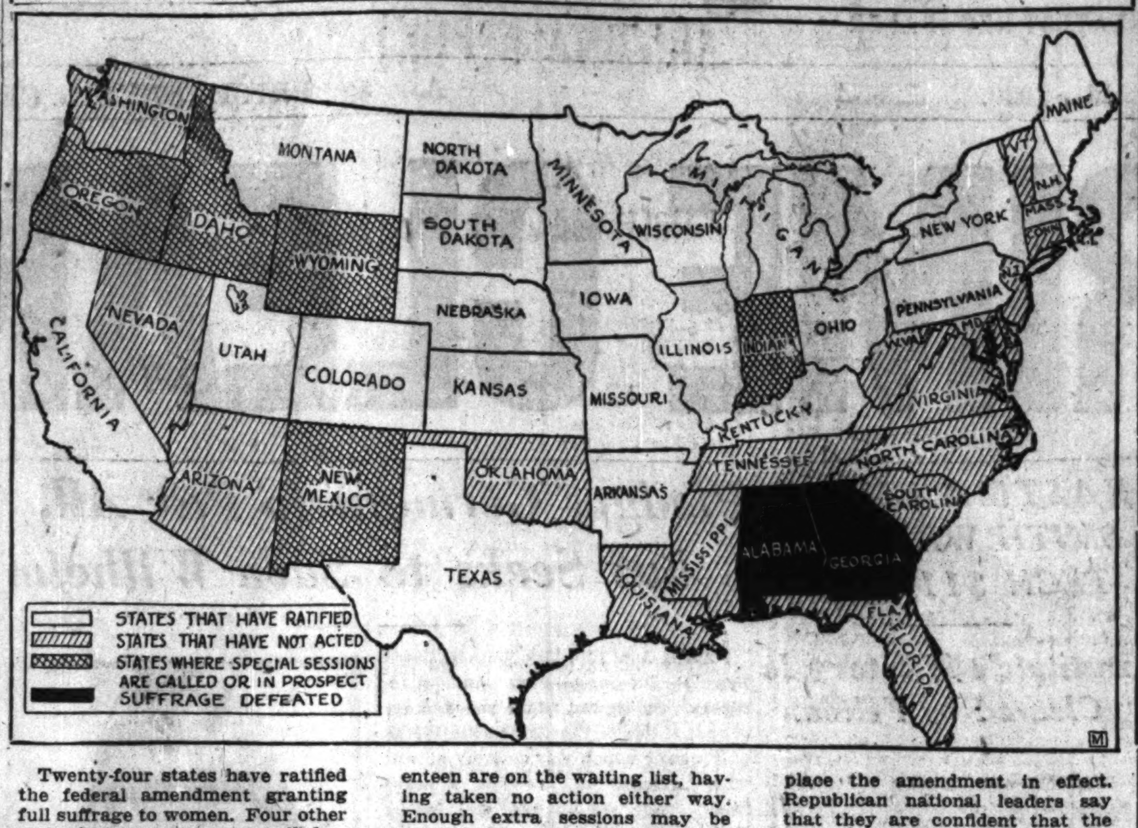
President Wilson is expected to sign the call for the first meeting of the league of nations council immediately after receiving notice from Ambassador Wallace that the first session has been fixed for next Friday.

PANAMA RATIFIES PACT.

PANAMA, Jan. 10.—The assembly has unanimously ratified the peace treaty of Versailles.

Progress of Suffrage Told by Map

Status of Constitutional Amendment Giving Full Voting Privileges to Women Shown So It May Be Seen at a Glance.



Twenty-four states have ratified the federal amendment granting full suffrage to women. Four other states have extra sessions called or in immediate prospect; two states have defeated ratification, and seventeen are on the waiting list, having taken no action either way. Enough extra sessions may be called of the seventeen states that are included in the last category to furnish the necessary thirty-six to place the amendment in effect. Republican national leaders say that they are confident that the thirty-sixth state will have ratified before March 15.

PICK ON WILSON A LITTLE, LODGE ADVISES CRITICS

Boston, Mass., Jan. 10.—Senator Lodge in a letter made public today by the Massachusetts joint committee for a league of free nations advises those who are anxious for prompt action on the treaty to direct some of these suggestions to the president.

The letter from Senator Lodge says: "The incessant demand that is made in certain quarters for further concessions by the senate is not helpful to the cause of agreement because the president has not only failed at every point to consult the senate in any way but he still stands immovable in his demand that we ratify the league of nations without any change at all, which the senate has refused to do.

"It seems to me it would be well for those who are anxious for the immediate action to direct some of their suggestions to the president and his followers whom he called upon to reject the reservations which are offered and which I believe to be absolutely sound in principle."

Lord Cecil Warns Europe League Depends on Public

LONDON, Jan. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Whether the league of nations is to be "the real thing or an imposture" depends on the attitude of the peoples, especially the British people, in the opinion of Lord Robert Cecil, who, as chairman of the executive committee of the League of Nations union, issued the following statement today:

"The peace treaty comes into force today, and with it the league of nations. We of the league of nations welcome its advent, but we must not think that we have achieved our ends.

Will It Be Effective?

"The league exists, but what is it to be? Is it to be the real thing, or an imposture? Are we going to make it an efficient instrument of peace, or is it to become a meaningless addition to the cumbrous forms of old-fashioned diplomacy?

"All depends upon the attitude of the peoples, and, not the least, that of the British people. Are they going to show themselves worthy of this great opportunity, or not? If they are, there is no time to be lost, for there is much to be done. Schemes for the limitation of armaments must be worked out; terms of the mandates must be settled and mandatories appointed; an international court of justice must be established.

Many Perils Exist Now.

"Beyond these and other duties directly imposed upon the league by the covenant and treaty there are many circumstances at the present time which, in the words of article XI., 'threaten to disturb international peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends.'

"There is the Russian situation, economic chaos in many European countries, and controversies left unsettled by the peace conference, defects in the peace treaty itself and particularly its financial provisions. It will be the duty of the league to formulate a policy on these matters."

Gen. Wood in New York; Tells Why King Resigned

New York, Jan. 10.—Gen. Leonard Wood arrived in this city tonight for his first visit since he became an active candidate for the Republican nomination for president.

An explanation of the recent resignation of John T. King of Connecticut, campaign manager for Gen. Wood, was given tonight by Fred Moore, Wood's publicity manager.

King wished to handle the activities of the campaign committee alone, but this was refused by the committee with Wood's approval and King withdrew, Moore said.

LEAGUE MAY BE MADE ALLIANCE TO HELP FRENCH

Paris Seeks Military Pact with the Allies.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—All the evidence points to the fact that the league of nations will degenerate into a mere interallied entente and protective association for France. Viewing the United States senate's hostility to the Versailles treaty, the French see that a defensive military treaty between France and the United States, upon which is hinged the Anglo-French military agreement, is practically hopeless of being passed in Washington.

They now turn to the league of nations with or without the United States to cement the British, Belgians, Italians, Roumanians, Czecho-Slovaks, Polish and Jugo-Slavs into a solid block aligned against the Teutons in the case of future hostilities.

Italy Is Holding Off.

Since Great Britain evinces no desire to change the Franco-British military guarantee, the French are extremely anxious to get the allied powers lined up with her again.

Italy is holding off from committing herself on any Franco-Italian military alliance, especially since there is a strong undercurrent throughout Italy in favor of reëstablishing the old German alliance. The disappearance of Austria and Hungary from the world powers strengthens this opinion in Italy and it is believed that a violent outcry would follow any open attempt by Rome to make a defensive agreement with Paris.

However, the league of nations, which excludes Germany, would camouflage this big alliance, at least for a term of years until the question of admitting Germany into the league became pressing and the Teutons were taken in.

British Want Turk Capital.

The British appear lukewarm regarding the league of nations, as it is no secret that London was chiefly interested in getting the covenant accepted because of article 10, which practically guaranteed that all of the nations would respect and even help enforce the integrity of the British empire. Since the United States senate has been attacking article 10, the British have lost interest rapidly in the league and a certain element in London is advocating admitting Germany into the league in the near future in order to frustrate the French designs to make the league a purely military defensive instrument.

Furthermore, until the British finally decide that they cannot obtain a mandate to administer Constantinople, they prefer to take chances of trying to obtain this concession, especially as they already have obtained the support of a number of small powers.

Urge Turk Mandatory.

Realizing that they will be unable to obtain a mandate for Constantinople, the French already are urging that it be made a league of nations mandate, and a strong element in the foreign office favors giving the Turk the mandate, and letting the sultan remain in Europe.

If all these diplomatic tangles can be straightened out without the league of nations the British are perfectly willing to throw the league overboard, as this yould give Britain the former German colonies without any mandatory strings tied to them. But the French are fighting vigorously for the league as a military weapon.

SEEK TO COMPEL TREATY STAND BY DEMOCRATS

G. O. P. Leaders to Force 'Em Into Open.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Republican senate leaders decided today to force the Democratic senators to choose between standing by President Wilson or following William Jennings Bryan in the peace treaty controversy.

Senator Lodge conferred with Senators McNary of Oregon and Colt of Rhode Island, mild reservationists, and Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin. They decided to reject the Democratic reservation program, submitted under the inspiration of Mr. Bryan several days ago and to call on the Democrats to present a "real" compromise along with a statement of the number of votes it would command on a showdown.

The Republicans hope to find enough Democrats opposing President Wilson's attitude to enable them to send the treaty to the White House, ratified with the Lodge reservations unchanged, and compel the president to "take it or leave it."

Revolt in the Cloakroom.

The capital today began to hear impressive rumblings of Democratic discontent, largely from the Democratic press, over President Wilson's message to the Jackson day banqueters. The talk of rebellion grew stronger, but skeptical observers characterized this as "a manifestation of cloakroom courage," which would largely run to cover if the Democrats were faced with the question of deserting President Wilson.

"We are having a rather difficult job of it trying to follow Mr. Bryan and stand by President Wilson," said one Democratic senator.

Mr. Bryan has gone out to the country to appeal to the Democratic voters to support him against President Wilson, but he left a competent agent in Washington in the person of ex-Gov. Joseph W. Folk of Missouri. Mr. Folk visited the senate today and began an active campaign to make converts to the Bryan cause.

Appeal Made by Folk.

"We can never go to the country on the treaty issue," he told the Democratic senators. "It would mean disaster to the party. Ratify by whatever means you can."

Privately, a large number of Democratic senators agreed with the governor, but it still remains to be seen whether they will come out in the open against the president's position.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina, former chairman of the finance committee, produced a brand new scheme for patching up the wide differences over article X. The Simmons plan, it was stated, was looked upon favorably by Senator Hitchcock, the Democratic leader, and Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, who favors strong reservations.

CLEMENCEAU TO COME TO U. S. TO HELP LEAGUE?

PARIS, Jan. 10.—Georges Clemenceau is said to intend, if he is elected president of the republic, to cross the Atlantic to carry on in the United Staes a "vigorous campaign" in behalf of the league of nations, according to the newspaper Evenement.

Two hundred and forty senators out of a total of 300 in the upper house of the French parliament will be elected tomorrow. Of this number 105 will be for seats, the occupants of which should have been elected in 1915; 97 to which senators have been elected in 1918, and 24 will replace senators who died. There will in addition be 14 new senators from Alsace and Lorraine. Ten deupties are candidates for the upper house and 120 former deputies have been carrying on vigorous campaigns for election.

French senators are not elected by popular vote, but by a college comprising deputies, members of general councils, arrondissement councils, and delegates from municipal councils.

PERSHING DENIES WASTAGE OF LIFE ON ARMISTICE DAY

Clears Charge in Letter to House Body.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—Charges made before a house war investigating committee that lives of American soldiers were wasted in needless attacks on armistice day are denied in a letter from Gen. Pershing, made public today by Representative Fuller, Republican, of Massachusetts.

Gen. Pershing said the American forces were acting under general instructions issued by Marshal Foch to all allied commanders on Nov. 9, 1918, and that orders for attacks were withdrawn as soon as possible after he was advised of the signing of the armistice. He also said statements that American troops were ordered to the attack while French divisions remained stationary were "wholly erroneous."

Reply to Captain's Charges.

The general's letter is dated Nov. 11, 1919, and is in reply to charges contained in a letter to Mr. Fuller from Capt. George K. Livermore of Winchester, Mass., formerly operations officer of the 167th field artillery brigade of the 92d (Negro) division.

Mr. Fuller explained that he made the letter public in view of statements recently made before the investigating committee by Brig. Gen. Sherburne, commanding the artillery division of the 92d division, about which much of the controversy regarding armistice day losses has centered.

Here Is the Letter.

The letter follows:

"I had no knowledge before 6 a. m. Nov. 11 that the armistice had been signed and that firing was to cease at 11 a. m. Nov. 11.

"The armistice, effective at 11 a. m. Nov. 11, was not signed until 5 a. m. Nov. 11, hence the information which Capt. Livermore states he received about midnight of Nov. 10 was only a rumor, although that rumor proved to be correct.

"For several days prior to Nov. 11 false rumors of the signing of an armistice were prevalent in all the armies. You may recall that at least one of these rumors even reached the United States, and that Nov. 7, I think, was made a day of celebration on account of a false report.

Take Steps to Correct Rumors.

"All armies took steps to correct these rumors, and at 8:45 p. m. Nov. 9 the following telegram was received by me from Marshal Foch:

"'The enemy, disorganized by our repeated attacks, is withdrawing along the whole front. It is important to maintain and hasten our action. I appeal to the energy and initiative of the commanders in chief and their armies to secure decisive results.'

"All of the allied commanders received similar telegrams from Marshal Foch.

"Neither British nor French headquarters ordered firing to cease prior to the going into effect of the armistice—that is, at 11 a. m. Nov. 11—and in general firing by all the allies and by the enemy continued on the whole front from Switzerland to the sea until that hour. In places the firing died away prior to 11 a. m. and in a few places firing continued until after that hour.

Attacked According to Plan.

"Capt. Livemore stated; 'Another point of interest in this matter is the fact that the 92d division was operating under orders to advance along the Moselle, while the French on its right flank were ordered to mark time until the 14th—the French well knowing that the chances strongly favored a termination of hostilities before that date. If the French worked on that basis, why couldn't the American command have done as much?'

"From July 15 to the armistice the allies attacked in accordance with a general plan.

"On Nov. 11 the necessary movements of concentration of both French and American troops were under way, but none of them were in position. Capt. Livermore appears to be under the impression that on Nov. 11 Gen. Mangin was in command of the French troops on the right of the 92d division and that that division was scheduled to attack on the immediate left of the French on Nov. 14. Both these impressions are wrong.

"Gen. Mangin would have commanded the French attack of the 14th, but on the 11th none of his troops were in the line and Gen. Gouraud commanded the army on the right of the 92d division.

"On Nov. 11 parts of the French, British, and Belgian lines, as well as parts of the American line, attacked and advanced. The implication that the Americans were the only troops which advanced or attacked on Nov. 11 is wholly erroneous.

No Wastage of Lives.

"With reference to your question as to 'whether it was true that the French were as regardless of the wastage of men with the armistice in sight as we were,' I must say that I think the language used appears to contain implications which are unwarranted.

"Neither the French nor the Americans were regardless of the wastage of men on Nov. 11 or at any other time. Neither on Nov. 11 nor at any other time were 'American lives needlessly wasted because some of our officers were not as considerate of their men as the French were,' nor were American lives needlessly wasted for any other cause, unless it be that we had not adequately prepared for war in time of peace."

Pershing Tells Legion to Curb Radical Acts

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 10.—Hailed as the "victorious Missourian, fresh from the battlefields of France," Gen. John J. Pershing today was greeted by thousands of his "fellow Missourians."

The general led a parade through the city, was guest of honor at various luncheons and meetings.

In his address to the American Legion Gen. Pershing referred to radical activity.

"It is up to the American Legion to meet the situation actively, not passively. If we haven't the laws now it is up to us to get them."

investigator, charged with disorderly, and Rob Cheatam, who was in a poolroom."

So it went. The bureau reported 38 arrests, Desplaines street, 35; West Chicago avenue, 30; Warren avenue, 15; Marquette, 20; East Chicago avenue, 25; Maxwell, 12; Fillmore, 6; other stations various numbers.

The bureau reported, too, that it had cleaned up the robbing of B. J. Hagamann's jewelry store and the shooting of South Park Policeman J. J. McNamee by the arrest of "Haddock" Hadad, H. T. Rich, room 727, 30 North La Salle street; James "Jazz" Wheatley, and Dr. John B. Matheson, 4710 Grand boulevard.

Tells of Shooting Policeman.

This followed the confession of Harry Olson, who admitted shooting McNamee and taking part in the robbery of the jewelry store with Wheatley. Their auto overturned while they were making their getaway. Wheatley's leg was injured. McNamee was taking them to a hospital when he was shot. "Haddock," who had been in the car that overturned, stayed "to guard it."

Wheatley was taken to a room on the south side. Dr. Matheson is said to have attended him and not reported the case to the police. He denied it.

At 11:30 o'clock the chief left for St. Louis, smiling broadly, and leaving the carrying out of the rest of his plans to First Deputy Alcock.

Today all the men with records and all the suspicious characters not identified as criminals will be taken to the Desplaines street police station, where victims of recent robberies may look at them. And today the drive will go on.

Decided on Cleanup Friday.

Garrity decided last week that the time was ripe to clean Chicago thoroughly. He called to his office all the captains on Friday and outlined his ideas.

"There is too much crime in the city," he said. "There are too many holdups, too many pay roll robberies, too many burglaries. Especially there are too many daylight crimes. They happen between 11 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

"During these three pay roll hours we have but 15 per cent of our men on duty, and some of those are at lunch. It is our low ebb. We've been following the wrong shift system.

Four Eight Hour Shifts.

"Hereafter there will be four eight hour shifts. The first will be from 8 a. m. to 4 o'clock; 4 to midnight will be the second, and midnight to 8 the third. The fourth will be a floating shift, and I want each of you to employ that floating shift at the hours when your record sheets show there is the most crime in your district."

"It may be from 11 to 2. It may be after midnight. You, each of you know the hours, or should know them, when you most need men. Use your floating shift then, to double your usual shift during those hours. Thus you will have 50 per cent of your men at work when more crooks are abroad than at any other time.

"But you must clean up your districts, and keep them clean. You are responsible for your territories and I will hold you responsible."

Outlines Drive.

Then he outlined the drive, the preparations, the furnishing of automobiles, half the available men to be in civilian clothes, the captains and lieutenants in civilian clothes also, and working with their men, and the roundup of all known crooks, and all suspicious men.

"We ought to have about 300 in the net by midnight Saturday," he said.

At midnight there were about 300 in the net.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

MAYOR OFFERS IDEAS FOR NEW POLICE SYSTEM

Chief Lists Transfers and Promotions.

Mayor Thompson, it was learned yesterday, is taking a personal interest in the framing of the administration police reorganization ordinance.

Suggestions from the mayor transmitted to Assistant Corporation Counsel Hervey C. Foster, who is drawing the ordinance, will probably cause radical changes in it.

The final draft is to be ready for a conference between Chief Garrity and President Coffin of the civil service commission at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. If approved it will be submitted to the mayor and go to the council Wednesday when the Guernsey reorganization plan will be up for consideration.

In any case the ordinance will do away with the rank of detective sergeant, in accordance with the Supreme court decision in the Loftus case recently, which held that the ranks of sergeant and detective sergeant creates a distinction without a difference.

Chief Garrity's plan for three police districts headed by assistant chiefs is still under consideration. It is understood that police captains are to be given power to select their own plain clothes men.

In general orders issued last night, Chief Garrity promoted Lieut. Charles M. Atkinson of the traffic division to a captaincy, sending him to the Warren avenue district to fill the place of Capt. W. W. Cudmore, who has resigned. The order also promotes Sergt. Paul A. Wheeler of the Cottage Grove station and Sergt. Martin A. Mullen of the detective bureau to lieutenancies. Patrolman Kazimir Wistert and Thomas H. Cassidy are promoted to the rank of sergeant.

As was expected, Chief Garrity relieved Capt. James Madden, brother of Congressman Madden, of the Englewood command. He was sent to Hyde Park and Capt. Max Nootbaar of that district was ordered to Englewood to clean up vice and gambling conditions about which the chief has received a sheaf of complaints.

The order transferred the following lieutenants:

Edward Grady, Chicago avenue to the detective bureau; John Martin, detective bureau to Chicago avenue; Michael Lee, Town Hall to Fiftieth street; Charles E. Burns, Cottage Grove to Fiftieth street; Eugene J. Sullivan, Fiftieth street to Englewood; James F. Day, Deering to Cottage Grove; and Michael J. Crane, Englewood to Deering.

MEXICANS SLAY 'GUNNER' DEPEW, ARIZONA REPORT

Famous War Veteran on Fatal Prospecting Trip.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 10.—Albert N. ("Gunner") Depew was recently killed near Maricopa, Ariz., by bandits, believed to have been Mexicans, according to word received here by friends of the dead man.

Depew, according to letters received here, was prospecting when attacked, and defended himself successfully for some time.

After Depew was discharged from the foreign legion he visited southern California and made numerous appearances as a lecturer and motion picture actor.

He was also in receipts for a time of large royalties from a book recounting his adventures in the war, but when the taste for war stories passed Depew had spent his earnings, and it was then he turned to prospecting.

Tires of Mexico's Capers.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—High authorities here declare that "there will be a reckoning" with Mexico. They say that a forward policy is waiting for execution on President Wilson's recovery.

Another cause for delay in aggressive action, these authorities say, has been the unsolved European problems arising out of the incomplete state of peace negotiations.

But there is insistence that there is something at last to be done and there are strong hints in some quarters of an American receivership over Mexico, which would take the form of military intervention and occupation, to be followed by American or joint Mexican and American administration of Mexican affairs for a term of years.

Today the state department announced that the embassy in Mexico City had been instructed to renew representations to the Mexican government for the speedy and adequate punishment of the murderer by a Carranza soldier of James Wallace, an American citizen.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 10.—Robert O. Martinez, Villa chieftain, who has been operating in Hidalgo and Vera Cruz, has surrendered conditionally with 800 men, according to advices today. The terms will be arranged between Martinez and President Carranza.

Santiago Hernandez, another rebel leader, has also surrendered, it is reported, on the same terms.

Cardinal Gibbons Again Denounces Divorce Evil

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 10.—"Divorce is a cancer eating into the very vitals of our life," said Cardinal Gibbons in an address today at the fifth annual conference of the Maryland chapter of the International Federation Catholic Alumnæ. The cardinal lauded the work done by American women during the war, and deplored the existence of legislation which makes divorce possible.

Steel Strike at Pittsburgh Cost About $348,157,210

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—It has been conservatively estimated that the cost of the steel strike in the Pittsburgh district was $348,157,210. The loss in wages was $48,005,060 and the property loss $152,150. The steel tonnage loss will not exceed $300,000,000, as the mills were working a part of the time.

PERSHING WRITES CHIEF TO PRAISE CHICAGO POLICE

Chief of Police Garritty received a letter yesterday from Gen. Pershing congratulating him on the efficiency of his police force, and complimenting him on the deportment of the men on the occasion when he was in Chicago. He also inquired after and expressed his sympathy for Policeman Daniel Daly, a mounted policeman who was thrown from his horse in front of the reviewing stand where Gen. Pershing was standing.

The letter follows:

En route to Omaha, Neb., Jan 8.—Mr. John J. Garrity, Chief of Police, Chicago: Please accept my thanks for the efficient service rendered by the police force of Chicago on the occasion of my visit there. I was much impressed by the smart appearance and courteous attention displayed by each member of the force, and wish to express my compliments.

"I trust that the member of the escort of honor, who was accidentally thrown from his mount during the parade, has entirely recovered.

"Cordially, yours.

"JOHN J. PERSHING."

FATAL BULLET ENDS QUARREL OF GARAGE OWNERS

Chain of Minor Incidents Leads to Tragedy.

Edward E. Sommerfeld, married, father of four children, owner of a garage at 2300 West Division street, was shot and killed last night by Leo Weinberg, owner of a garage at 1709 Washington boulevard.

EDWARD SOMMERFELD.

A man named Moskovitz asked Weinberg and his brother, William, to come outside and repair his car. They told him they'd have to tow it inside and there would be towage charges.

"Then tow it to Sommerfeld's," said Moskovitz. "I keep my car there."

The garage auto towed the car to Sommerfeld's, but in going through the door some projection struck a steam pipe, tore it loose, and damaged the door.

Shot Ends Argument.

Sommerfeld insisted Weinberg would have to pay for the damage. A hot argument followed, a shot came suddenly, and went through Sommerfeld's heart.

Sergt. Hugh McCarthy went out to get the slayer. But he got only his brother, William, 925 South Ashland avenue, partner in the garage. The Maxwell street police found Leo Weinberg. He confessed.

Sommerfeld lived at 1700 North Western avenue. His widow, Minnie, was waiting up for him when the policeman came with the news. Raete, 5 years old, the oldest child, was asleep. Teddy, 20 months, and Robert, 5 weeks old, were in their cradles. But Jean, 3 years old, had insisted on staying up until daddy came home. His mother was trying to rock him to sleep, singing a lullaby.

Proud of His Family.

Mrs. Sommerfeld was stunned with the news—and after a long while she said:

"He was so proud he could give the census taker another name. He gave him a cigar and went with him to a few other houses. It was only a few days ago. Poor Eddie."

IOWA GOVERNOR BOOSTS LOWDEN AT CLUB DINNER

"Back to Constitution," Hamilton Day Keynote.

GOV. W. L. HARDING

"Back to the constitution" was the keynote of the speeches made last night at the Hamilton club's thirtieth annual celebration of the birthday of Alexander Hamilton.

Seven hundred guests, men and women, converted the dinner into a Republican jubilee that rapidly became a "Lowden for president" celebration at Hotel La Salle.

Gov. Lowden himself was the guest of honor and the chief speaker. From the state where he was born, Minnesota, former Congressman J. Adam Bede made a red hot Republican speech that intimated only the nomination and election of Gov. Lowden.

Harding Boosts Lowden.

From Iowa, where the Illinois governor was educated, Gov. W. L. Harding, in a rousing Republican speech, went the route, from the standpoint of the Lowden enthusiasts, in wishing the greatest success to the Illinois executive. Letters were read from Senator Medill McCormick and Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky.

Gov. Lowden in his address affirmed his confidence and belief in the representative form of government.

"If the people cannot wisely select from their own number some one who will represent them honestly and faithfully what possible chance have they directly to legislate wisely themselves," was the big idea in Gov. Lowden's speech.

President Albert N. Marquis of the Hamilton club presided over the dinner. He announced the completion of the $800,000 fund for the construction of the new Hamilton clubhouse on the present site of the club's quarters.

Speech by Lowden.

Gov. Lowden said in part:

"When Marshall became chief justice the constitution was but an essay on government. When, at the end of his career, Liberty Bell in Independence hall tolled out his death—and then became silent forever—the constitution had become the organic life of a great republic.

"For centuries a republic had been regarded by the scholars and statesmen of the world as nothing more than a poet's dream. In the light of history, therefore, the framers of the constitution went about it to devise some form of government which should avoid at the same time the autocracy of the despot and the turbulence of the mob.

"Our federal constitution was the result. It proceeded upon the principle that all power originally rests in the people and that government should come from below and not from above. Having in mind the experience of the democracies of the past, our constitution provided that only a part of the sovereign power of the people should be conferred upon the government.

Power with the People.

"This is the great new principle which makes the United States constitution the outstanding political document of time. Under that principle the people conferred limited power upon the government they created, reserving the residuum to themselves. And so our state constitutions, while they recognize that sovereign power is in the people, have withheld part of that power from the government.

"The framers of the constitution had seen that a large population could not govern directly. Even the democracy of Athens in its most glorious days had been rent asunder by factions and had ceased to function. And so they established the principle of representative government.

"Representative government is only applying the same principle to government which men have found by experience is applicable to all other difficult affairs of life. For government becomes all the time a more and more difficult and complex thing. Just as the citizen selects some one skilled in the law to represent him in a lawsuit, or some one skilled in medicine if his child is sick, so he must be permitted to select some one to represent him in government.

Gives Time to Government.

"The representative is the corner stone of our scheme of government.

"He is free from the necessity of earning a living in his private business and is thus able to give all his time to the affairs of government. He has the great advantage of listening to and participating in debates upon any important question of legislation. He has the privilege of amendment if he favors the principle of a bill, but objects to it in form. He, therefore, has infinitely better opportunity to act intelligently and well than his constituents possibly can have. . . .

"If the people cannot wisely select from their own number some one who will represent them honestly and faithfully, what possible chance have they directly to legislate wisely themselves? Upon questions of government all know how unsafe it is to act upon first impressions. The representative, giving all his time to the consideration of public questions, has an opportunity to correct first impressions where they are wrong. The people have not the time for the study required for this.

"The representative, then, may go before his people and discuss with them the mooted question in all its bearings. He thus becomes an educational force. The people can be safely trusted to do the right thing when they are sufficiently informed as to the facts and principles involved, but they may be misled temporarily by designing demagogues to their own undoing.

New Heights of Greatness.

"It is now 130 years since the constitution became the supreme law of the land. During that time in France, kingdom, empire, and republic have succeeded one another so swiftly as to bewilder the mind of the student. Throughout the old world thrones have tumbled and the map of Europe has been rewritten twice. It has been an age of mighty ferment.

"And yet during all these years the American people, under the constitution, have marched steadily forward, always to new heights of national greatness. Under the flag of the republic more millions of people have lived happy, self-respecting, expanding lives than under any other flag of time. He who would now lay profane hands upon that constitution would become a traitor to his country and an enemy to mankind."

POLITICAL NOTES

Brundage Republicans in Hyde Park yesterday slated Dr. W. O. Nance, former alderman and now sanitary district trustee, for Republican ward committeeman in the Sixth ward. He will be the Brundage candidate against Roy O. West, representing the Deneen forces, and R. J. McLaughlin, the Thompson entry. In the Seventh ward Isaac N. Powell will not be a candidate for reëlection and County Commissioner Charles N. Goodnow will be the Deneen candidate. The Brundage entry will be Ald. William R. Fetzer and Andrew R. Metzger is to be the city hall candidate.

Lowden leaders from all over the state were in conference yesterday at Congress hotel headquarters. L. L. Emmerson, chairman of the Lowden campaign committee, indicated that important announcements concerning the conduct of the campaign may be expected during the week.

Wood headquarters yesterday announced that Fred Stanley, Republican national committeeman from Kansas, will be at the general's headquarters for two or three days. The Republican state committee of Kansas will meet Jan. 29, Mr. Stanley said, "to set the date of the county and state conventions." W. W. Watson of Salina and Clyde Miller of Topeka have been placed in charge of the Wood campaign in Kansas.

Circuit Court Clerk August W. Miller was unanimously indorsed last night for Republican ward committeeman from the Twelfth ward by the regular ward organization. tI is probable that he will be unopposed.

Ald. Guy Guernsey of the Sixth ward filed his petition yesterday as a candidate for reëlection, under the new nonpartisan system. His petition was signed by more than 1,000 Hyde Parkers representing all parties, factions, and elements.

Gov. Lowden departs this afternoon for New York, where he speaks tomorrow night before the state bankers' association. Tuesday night he will be in Washington, the guest of Senator and Mrs. Medill McCormick.

Be Patriotic in Peace, Hays' Plea at Salt Lake City

Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 10.—Patriotism was the keynote of an address delivered here tonight by Will Hays, Republican national chairman, at a banquet given in his honor by the party organization in Utah. "I plead for patriotism in peace as well as in war," he said. "Let us have patriotism which moves men and women to make their country's welfare their own business."

Sconce Quits Farmer Post to Aid Lowden Campaign

Danville, Ill., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Harvey J. Sconce announced today that he would resign the presidency of the Illinois Agricultural association and devote his time to organizing the agricultural interests of the nation in behalf of Gov. Lowden for president.

BRYAN BRINGS ABOUT TREATY —WITH ROGER C.

Gives Practical Lesson in Making of Peace.

given, if no compromise can be reached, we must acquiesce, for the present, with the Republican majority.

Makes G. O. P. Responsible.

"We will say to them that they, the Republicans, must accept full responsibility for the treaty with its Republican reservations and we will withdraw enough Democratic votes from the roll call on the resolution of ratification so that the Republican majority automatically becomes the constitutional two-thirds. Then we will have peace and the league of nations and we can go to work and it will be up to the people to pass their judgment upon the result, whatever the issue at the polls. It is just the simple old American plan of majority rule, the principle of real Democracy, for which our armies fought in Europe."

Mr. Bryan said that there is no real difference of opinion as to article X.; that the issue has become clouded by words and much argument, and that all men must agree that the right to declare war cannot be removed from congress.

Illinois Neutral Zone.

Illinois for Democratic primary purposes is to become neutral ground. Under the arrangement completed yesterday the fifty-eight delegates will be instructed either for President Wilson or will go uninstructed. Mr. Bryan's friends, it is understood, reserve the right to enter him as a direct candidate should it become evident that the state organization is preparing to tie up with Attorney General Palmer, a distinct possibility.

Meanwhile Roger C., County Clerk Sweitzer, former Mayor Harrison, and former Gov. Dunne will be the four delegates at large from Chicago, with four from downstate. William L. O'Connell will be a delegate from the Hyde Park district and Congressman Sabath a delegate from his district. Congressman Henry T. Rainey will be a district delegate from downstate.

Delegates Sullivan Men.

The rest of the delegation substantially will be Sullivan men. The agreement reaches to ward committeemen in Chicago, the few anti-Sullivan committeemen to be permitted to go back for four years without a primary fight, which means that the Sullivan organization will be in complete control in making the Democratic slate for state and county offices in September.

It is indicated that Francis S. Peabody is to have no opposition for the nomination for United States senator and there seems to be no serious objection to having the delegation committed to former Senator James Hamilton Lewis for the nomination for vice president.

Mr. Bryan departed at 7 o'clock for Nebraska.

LABOR NOTES

Local branches of the International Ladies' Garment Workers union have voted to hold their 1920 convention in Chicago, starting May 3.

R. A. Jacobson, grand secretary and treasurer of the Order of Railway Expressmen, says they are out to triple their membership this year. At present they have eighty-nine locals with something over 25,000 members.

Miss Agnes Nestor has been reëlected president and Miss Ida Glatt secretary of the Chicago Women's Trade Union league. Miss Agnes Johnson was elected vice president.

Local unions belonging to the South Chicago Trades and Labor assembly and the Calumet Joint Labor council are voting on the proposition of amalgamating the two bodies into one to be known as the Calumet Central Labor union.

ACTORS SERVE NOTICE OF BAN ON BAD LAUNDRY

Hey, you bum loundrymen, the Equity'll git you ef you don't watch out!

A page letter in the Billboard from the Actors' Equity association announces reprisal against all laundries that don't be good. The association serves notice on the laundries of the country that on the third complaint made against any one of them the offender's name will be published in the Equity magazine and a boycott thus be established.

"Petty annoyances," says the letter, "are often harder to bear than real trials. It is the frequent experience on the road that a shirt and collar are returned half washed and carelessly ironed. Sometimes alien articles are returned in place of our own goods. The damage done is frequently enough to make one weep with rage."

DE KAY HEIRESS' BROTHER, GIRL FRIEND VANISH

New Mystery Arises as Plot Theory Gains.

Developments yesterday in the hunt for Jeanne Anna De Kay gave rise to the theories that the missing protégé of Jane Addams may have fallen a victim to a gang of art thieves, or may have become innocently involved in a foreign political plot with more sinister motives.

John De Kay, brother of the heiress, left Hull house at 10:30 o'clock in the morning to follow up a new clew, the nature of which he refused to divulge to those most closely associated with him in the search. He did not say where he was going, but stated he did not expect to be back at Hull House before Tuesday evening.

Almost at the same hour Miss Dadiez Salter, a convoyer of valuable art treasures to America and a confidante of Miss De Kay on the trans-Atlantic voyage, left the Hotel Theresa in New York without leaving a forwarding address. They disappeared just at the time Burns detectives at work on the case, spurred on by several new revelations, were desirous of questioning them.

Acts on Father's Cable?

Young De Kay left Hull house shortly after he had received a message from Attorneys Lee, Boos, and McKenna of Providence, R. I., legal representatives in this country of his father, John Wesley De Kay of Lucerne, Switzerland, reputed to be a millionaire. The elder De Kay had wired the lawyers to collect all available data regarding his daughter's disappearance. Two days ago, it was learned, John De Kay also received a cablegram from his father. It ran as follows:

"Received telegram. Very anxious. Jeanne confided in Roumanian lady. Always send wires Lucerne. Love."

The "Roumanian lady" referred to was Miss Salter. John De Kay's story of the Roumanian girl was that she was a casual friend whom he and his sister had met on shipboard. They sailed together from Genoa and Miss De Kay and Miss Salter went sightseeing together at Pompeii and at Gibraltar.

Brings Art Works to U. S.

Miss Salter said she was bringing several valuable works of art to America, including an original Van Dyke portrait, in order to recoup the family's fortunes swept away in the war. She asked that the matter of the paintings be kept secret, as she was afraid they might be stolen.

At New York the De Kays and Miss Salter and her mother stopped at the Manhattan hotel. Then De Kay and his sister came to Chicago. After she had gone to Hull house Miss De Kay received one letter from Miss Salter, the contents of which are not known, save that it contained another warning to remain silent "about the pictures."

Almost at the same time that John De Kay reached Chicago Miss Salter appeared at Hull house to aid in the search. She said her interest was merely that of a friend. She is said to have inserted an "ad" in a local paper pleading with "Jeannie" to telephone her at Hull house. "Johnny and I are waiting for you," it read in part. Miss Salter stayed here two days, then went back to New York. She was compelled to change Roumanian money in order to pay her fare.

Girl Stirs New Mystery.

Residents at Hull house were unable to explain why they had not divulged Miss Salter's part in the case previously.

Detectives pointed out that John De Kay claimed she was merely a casual acquaintance, yet she inserted an "ad" referring to him as "Johnny."

They were supposed to have met on the liner Duc d'Aosta for the first time, yet John Wesley De Kay, delver in international intrigues, ammunition and arms agent for small governments, and author of books on strange subjects, cables that "Jeanne confided in Roumanian lady."

Gone to Consult Girl?

John De Kay Jr. may have gone to consult the attorneys in Providence or he may have gone to New York to see Miss Salter. If the latter is the case he will be disappointed unless a secret rendezvous has been agreed upon.

One theory was advanced that art thieves, following the paintings from Europe, may have kidnaped Miss De Kay, thinking she was one of the convoyers, in order to get hold of them. In this connection Frank Keyser, an engineer employed at Hull house, revealed for the first time that he had seen Miss De Kay talking with two well dressed young men, who appeared to be foreigners, at the corner mail box on the night of Dec. 28. He said the men appeared at the mail box again the next evening, but Miss De Kay did not join them. The next night the girl disappeared.

In Toils of Alien Plot?

Another theory was that agents of a foreign government, possibly a woman agent, followed her here to thwart some errand she may have been commissioned to perform for her father. John De Kay has denied such a possibility. It was said federal agents questioned her and her brother in New York and that their movements were traced as far as this city, but Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti at Washington denied his bureau had any records of their movements.

Bogus clews continued to pour in to increase the work of the searchers. One man claimed he had found Jeanne in a Racine avenue rooming house, but the girl was not Miss De Kay. A resident of Laporte, Ind., claims he saw a young girl answering Miss De Kay's description board an interurban car there for South Bend. She was acting queerly, he said.

W. H. STILLWELL WEDS MISS LETTS IN ROSE BOWER

St. Chrysostom's Sees Notable Ceremony.

St. Chrysostom's church was the scene yesterday afternoon of one of the prettiest weddings in its history, when Miss Courtney Letts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Letts of 1100 Lake Shore drive, was married to Wellesley H. Stillwell, son of Mrs. Homer L. Stillwell of 1200 Lake Shore drive.

Altar, chancel, and arches were bowers of sunset roses and smilax. The service was read by the Rev. Norman Hutton.

The ushers, Gilbert E. Porter Jr., David R. Forgan Jr., Richard H. Mabbatt, William H. Mitchell, T. Philip Swift, Wolcott Blair, Frederick C. Letts, William Ryle, Henry Coe Jr., John O'Rourke, and Harvey Shaffer, led the wedding procession.

Bridesmaids from Four Cities.

Following were the bridesmaids: Miss Lolita Armour, Miss Edith Cummings, Miss Mildred Bromwell of Washington, Miss Jean Fletcher of Washington, Miss Katherine Rhodes of Pittsburgh, Miss Marion Thompson of Troy, N. Y.; Miss Harriet McLaughlin, and Miss Katherine Ingalls, who wore short sleeved bodices of peacock blue velvet with tulle skirts, hats of silver net, and carried bouquets of Russell and sunset roses.

Mrs. William H. Mitchell II., the matron of honor, wore a frock of deep blue velvet and tulle.

Miss Hollis Letts, her sister's maid of honor, was gowned in a hoopskirt dress of lighter blue, and a hat of silver net with blue ribbons.

Little May Henderson Stillwell, the flower girl, made a pretty picture in a lace frock and hat with flowers.

The bride's gown was fashioned of ivory satin, with a court train. She wore a long strand of pearls and platinum. Her veil hung from a cap of lace and she carried sweet peas and valley lilies.

Addison Stillwell attended his brother as best man.

After the ceremony a small reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Stillwell left for Honolulu on a two months' wedding journey, after which they will be with Mr. Stillwell's mother.

Baxter-Bond Wedding.

Miss Gladys Bond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Bond of 4025 Drexel boulevard, became the bride of John Baxter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis T. Baxter of Nashville, Tenn., yesterday. The service was read at 4:30 o'clock by the Rev. Albert J. McCartney in the First Baptist church before a large number of friends and relatives, and was followed by a small reception at the residence of the bride's parents..

LUTHARDT ENDS 25 YEARS' WORK ON POLICE FORCE

WM. H. LUTHARDT

William H. Luthardt, chief clerk of the detective bureau and a member of the police force since 1894, resigned yesterday to accept a pension and to go into the insurance business.

Since Mr. Luthardt entered the department as a clerk twenty-five years ago he has been chief clerk at the detective bureau for fourteen years and was secretary to former Chief C. C. Healey for more than three years. He was named second deputy superintendent in August of 1918, holding the place until September.

Mr. Luthardt was suspended when charges were brought against former Chief Healey by the state's attorney in 1918, but was reinstated with the former chief's acquittal. He remained as secretary to Chief Garrity for a short time, but was transferred to the detective bureau after Chief Garrity had declared there was a "leak" in his office. Of late it has been reported that Mr. Luthardt is much more friendly to State's Attorney Hoyne than to the city adminstration.

WITNESSES CALL NITRATE PLANT A NEST OF WASTE

New York, Jan. 10.—Allegations of waste and extravagance in the building of a $62,000,000 air nitrate plant for the government at Mussel Shoals, Ala., were made today in testimony before the house committee investigating expenditures in the war department. Employés loafed on the job, gambled, and had a "loose moral tone," it was testified.

The plant was built for the government by the American Cynamid company to produce nitrates for war explosives by the company's German process and is now idle.

Maj. J. J. Farley, an ordnance officer stationed at the plant during its construction, testified to finding boilermakers asleep in boilers and electricians idle in a field telling stories.

Capt. R. M. Moberly, another ordnance officer, described his discovery of padded pay rolls, as a result of which the government had been defrauded of $6,000. The money was restored and two men were sentenced to two years each in prison.

The committee concluded its New York hearings today. Next Wednesday it will go to Mussel Shoals, Nashville, and Charleston to investigate war plants at those places and elsewhere in the south.

HOUSE, BY VOTE OF 328-6, AGAIN OUSTS BERGER

Socialist Refused Chance to Make a Speech.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Victor L. Berger, Milwaukee Socialist, was denied a seat in congress for the second time today in record time. In spite of a fight in his behalf led by Representative Mann of Illinois, only six votes were cast against a resolution refusing him the privilege of taking the oath.

The vote on the resolution, which was offered by Representative Dallinger of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee which recommended Mr. Berger's exclusion last fall, was 328 to 6.

Those voting in the negative were Representative Mann, Voight of Wisconsin, and Harreld of Oklahoma, Republicans, and Sherwood of Ohio, Sisson of Mississippi, and Griffin of New York, Democrats. Mr. Sabath of Illinois, Democrat, voted present.

Futile Appeal for Berger.

The appeals in Berger's behalf were made on the ground that summary action denying his constituents representation in the house incite, rather than suppress, radicalism.

Berger occupied a seat on the floor of the house during the debate, but was refused an opportunity to make a speech in his own defense. A request for unanimous consent for him to present his side of the case was made by Dallinger, but was met by a chorus of objections.

Following the action of the house, Berger declared he would run again and be elected. He said his exclusion was "one of the worst attacks on representative government ever witnessed in this country."

Calls Socialist Disloyal.

Dallinger, in urging Berger's exclusion, said that the situation was the same as before and that members of the house could not seat a man held to be disloyal to his country.

"Mr. Berger has publicly stated that he would do again exactly what he did during the war," Mr. Dallinger said. "It is said that the people of the Fifth district of Wisconsin have a right to choose any one they please.

"They have a right to vote for any one they see fit, but they are bound by the constitution of the United States, and if they persist in electing a man the house has found under the constitution to be ineligible they cannot expect he will be seated."

Mann Opposes Ouster.

Mr. Mann took issue with Mr. Dallinger.

"It is not an enviable task I am now performing, and yet my feeling as to right and justice in the matter is so strong that I should feel I were a coward if I did not express the views which I hold," Mr. Mann said. "And whatever else I may be I hope I may never be a coward.

"Mr. Berger has been elected anew to this house by a majority of those who voted in his district. To me the question is, whether we shall maintain inviolate a representative form of government where the people who desire changes in the laws of the land shall have the right to be represented in congress."

Representative Yates of Illinois, interrupted Mr. Mann to ask if he thought the house should admit a disloyal man. Mr. Mann replied that the question of disloyalty should not be determined by the house.

Representative Voight, who was the only member to oppose Mr. Berger's exclusion in November, caused jeers when he replied that the people of the Fifth Wisconsin district were as loyal as any in the United States.

Berger appeared not at all surprised or disturbed by the action of the house.

"Back Berger Till H—— Freezes."

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 10.—The Socialist committee of the Fifth Wisconsin congressional district, within a half hour after receiving the news that Victor L. Berger had been excluded from congress a second time, renominated him. "We will keep on nominating Berger until Hades freezes over if that un-American aggregation called congress continues to exclude him," said a committee statement.

Gov. Phillip, informed of the action by the house, reiterated his statement that he would not call another special election.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

On Jan. 7 "L. Seaman" was mentioned as a member of the Grand boulevard committee of the Kenwood and Hyde Park Property Owners' association. Leopold Seaman of 4555 Grand boulevard informs THE TRIBUNE he has no connection with the organization and that he owns no Chicago property.

SENATE PASSES SEDITION BILL; HITS SABOTAGE

Overthrow of Government Counsel a Crime.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—An anti-sedition bill, prescribing severe penalties for acts or propaganda advocating overthrow of the government by force or violence, was passed by the senate today without a record vote. The measure now goes to the house.

Maximum penalties are a fine of $5,000 and five years' imprisonment, applying to all concerned in circulating and furthering the sedition. The bill also bars from the mails any matter advocating force or sabotage.

Fear Sabotage Clause.

Principal attack on the bill was aimed at the mail exclusion section, which opponents declared would confer press censorship power on the postmaster general. Advocates of the measure, however, denied that the bill would limit constitutional rights. Under an amendment by Senator Borah of Idaho, accepted by the senate, persons against whom this clause is invoked can appeal.

The bill prohibits persons from advocating by speech, writing, or printing the forcible overthrow of the United States or all government or physical injury to person or property. It also penalizes attempts to hinder execution of laws.

Another section prohibits display of flags, banners, or emblems intended to symbolize advocacy of the anti-government force.

Aliens violating the act would be subject to deportation and permanent exclusion.

Now Goes to the House.

The bill, drawn by Senator Sterling, Republican, South Dakota, now goes to the house for consideration in connection with sedition legislation now before the house judiciary committee and in a measure is a substitute for laws recommended by Attorney General Palmer.

Senator Sterling told the senate today that the bill did not penalize peaceful agitation looking to changes in the government.

J. F. SMIETANKA RESIGNS AS U. S. TAX CHIEF HERE

Quits to Resume Law, Politics, Business.

RESIGNS

Chicago Internal Revenue Collector Who Quits to Get Into the Political Game.

J. F. SMIETANKA.

Julius F. Smietanka, collector of internal revenue for the Chicago federal district and the man in direct command of recent liquor investigations, resigned yesterday.

The resignation comes as the climax of a sweeping graft investigation which has resulted in the suspension of half a dozen deputy collectors and charges of conspiracy with "bootlegging rings" against several. Government officials, however, declare that the revenue scandal has nothing to do with the collector's resignation, and Mr. Smietanka made it plain that he has been forced to resign because of the press of his personal interests. He announced also that he expects to be active in this year's political campaign.

Defends His Department.

"If there was a whisper of suspicion concerning my administration of the department in connection with the recent liquor graft charges," he said, "I would not resign. There has been too much graft talk. At present just six of the 500 men in my office are suspended in order to allow them to prove themselves innocent of graft charges. We have proved nothing against any of them, and it has been my policy to believe my men innocent until real proof of guilt is handed me.

"Enforcement of the prohibition law was shifted temporarily to my office, and emergencies always require quick action. Personally, I have had to do with collections alone, and I think it is up to citizens who voted prohibition in to help enforce it, just as much as it is the responsibility of the internal revenue department."

Wishes Share in Politics.

"I have tendered my resignation, effective on Feb. 1," he declared in a statement which reached Washington during the day. "I am quitting government service because of the urgent need of my active coöperation in my private interests, particularly the Union State bank of South Chicago, which I recently organized with some of my friends. Then, too, I am going to engage in the active practice of law, devoting my attention to federal taxation."

Held Job for Six Years.

Mr. Smietanka is a leader in Polish circles throughout the city. He has been chief of internal revenue matters in the Chicago district for nearly six years.

"So far as the administration of the revenue office is concerned," he said, "I have had the pleasure of building up an organization from sixty-two persons to as high as 700, and now aggregating 600. We have handled collections which aggregated in 1914 about $34,000,000, and up to $304,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918."

Old timers were at a loss concerning a possible successor of the revenue chief.

Trail Eitel Liquor.

As another development of the inquiry into the alleged wholesale distribution of the Eitel Brothers' huge liquor stock, three deputy collectors have left for New York to trace a newly discovered booze shipment. The shipment is thought to be a part of the 1,000 cases which deputies declare recently were moved secretly from the Eitel storehouse.

PLEA FOR STAGE CHILDREN MADE BY MRS. BOWEN

The Juvenile Protective association yesterday through a statement issued by Mrs. Louise De Koven Bowen, its president, and Edith Franklin Wyatt, a director, made plain its position on the question of letting children appear on the stage. Harry Olson, chief justice of the Municipal court, signed the statement per another director.

"So many persons sincerely believe the American law protecting the future strength of children ought to be broken down, at least to permit them to support adults in theatrical performances at any hour of the day, that something should be said about the apparent health of stage children as they are observed by audiences."

Then, after saying it is absolutely impossible for the audience to form any idea of the health or strength of a child as he appears on the stage, it continues:

"Theatergoers saw numbers of little children, some of them under 5 years of age, led out of the house at 11:30 at night to stumble sleepily toward the street cars—the temperature below zero—after the first performance of 'Rip Van Winkle.' These children did not then appear as they did in the village revelry of the opera."

CAN HUBBY WORK? FARWELL FAMILY TREE NODS YES

J. Arthur's Busy Forbears Cited in Wife's Suit.

Is J. Arthur Farwell, sportsman, fashion plate, and globe trotter, physically competent to earn a reasonable salary and financially qualified to answer a bill for separate maintenance filed by his wife, Mrs. Loretta Farwell?

In the suit now being heard before Master in Chancery Walter S. Holden, Farwell himself contends he is not; that he is now a physical wreck and possesses only a $1,000 Liberty bond.

The court action marks the climax of five years of wedded warfare. The wife in her original bill charged desertion and nonsupport. In an amended bill she charges her husband "with having been too friendly with 'Madam X.' of Baltimore," said to be Mrs. John Paul Scharf, daughter of Albert Snowden, one of Baltimore's most prominent citizens.

Family Tree Is Shaken.

In an effort to show that J. Arthur cannot be the incompetent person he claims to be John Creekmur, one of Mrs. Farwell's attorneys, yesterday shook the defendant's "family tree" for evidence.

Farwell admitted his father, John Albro Farwell, was a man of sound business judgment; that his mother is a successful business woman, and that his grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Chambers, had amassed wealth through good business management.

Attorney Creekmur quoted excerpts from Prof. H. E. Walter's book on genetics to back up his "like father, like son" argument. He emphasized the case of the descendants of Max Jukes, who, without exception, he said, were criminals and paupers. In contrast, he referred to the progeny of Jonathan Edwards, the majority of whom were professors, authors, judges, and legislators.

Calls Him Unable to Work.

Dr. Thomas Henry Lewis, for the defense, testified he had found Farwell "physically incompetent" to work and had ordered a protracted rest for him. He admitted on cross-examination that he had been a chum of Farwell at Yale and in club life for twenty years.

Q.—Can he do clerical work? A.—No.

Q.—Could he play golf or bridge without interfering with his nervous condition? A.—Yes.

Mrs. Loretta Farwell, questioned by W. S. Forrest, attorney for the defense, testified she had to sell the family furniture and silverware after she is alleged to have been deserted by her husband. This included the "cloister cup" given to Farwell at the time of his marriage by Richard T. Crane Jr. and other Yale classmates.

The New Old Clothes Man.

Mrs. Farwell said her husband had told her "there was not enough class at the Evanston Golf club, so he joined the Indian Hill club."

Q.—Isn't there sort of a joke in the Farwell family about your husband's old clothes? A.—I don't know.

Q.—He never would let go of anything, would he? A.—No; he always held on to everything.

Q.—He was known in the Farwell family as the "old clothes man," wasn't he? A.—No; as the new clothes man.

Q.—Then he was known as the new clothes man who held on to his old clothes? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you keep moths out of your husband's clothes? A.—Well, if they were not there, I presume I kept them out.

Hurls "English Dude" at Him.

She testified he had left her in June, 1915, while they were residing in Evanston, and had gone to French Lick.

Q.—Did he come back? A.—Yes; I think twice; once to get his silk hat and calling cards.

Q.—Did John tell you why he had his clothes made in England? A.—He said it was because they did not know how to make or fit clothes in America.

Q.—Was he anti-American and pro-English? A.—I'd call him that.

She also said she would refer to him as an "English dude," and that some of his clothing was "smuggled in from England," so "his father had to square things with the customs officials."

Mrs. Farwell testified that after the separation she received $7 a week from him until January, 1916, and "reasonable sums" since November of last year.

Letters Tell of Love.

Letters introduced by the attorneys for Mrs. Farwell, John Hopkins and Donald De Wolf, indicated a marked change in affection before the Farwells' separation. Excerpts follow:

Writing on Oct. 10, 1919, he said:

"Dearie: . . . I was mentioned for a job last night. Dick Crane 'phoned to tell me that he has mentioned my name to Henry Porter. It is a thing that would keep me hopping, but, as it would pay $10,000 a year, I am thinking it over. Of course I shall be a slave again. . . . Lovingly,

"ARTHUR."

He wrote as follows from Denver on June 9, 1908:

"Dearie: Today is Sunday, the long day, as you put it. Mrs. S. said the thing for us to do is to come back here and go housekeeping. I agreed with her, but explained how unsettled our plans were. If you stay away much longer I might be kidnaped by a "Merry Widow." . . . With all my love,

"ARTHUR."

In the following letter written from Denver on June 24, 1910, he again emphasizes his loneliness:

"Dearie: I hardly think I ever will let you go away again, because the strain is too great in many ways. . . . I am awfully lonesome. . . ."

Brief remittance notes comprised the later letters.

Mrs. Farwell a short time after the "break" wrote as follows:

"Dearie: . . . Do you really know your own mind? . . . You have asked me what I want and I can answer without hesitation that I want you, my home, and the protection I am entitled to. . . . Lovingly,

"LORETTA."

Mrs. Farwell charges Mrs. Ava Farwell, her husband's mother, with having alienated his affections. A suit for $100,000 is pending.

Brundage to Preside at K. of P. Golden Banquet

Attorney General Edward J. Brundage, a past chancellor of the order, will act as toastmaster at the banquet to be given by the Knights of Pythias at the Hotel La Salle on Jan. 31 in commemoration of the golden anniversary of the order's birth in this state. Judge Ninian H. Welch, chairman of the committee on arrangements, yesterday announced the following speakers: Judge William K. Whitfield of Decatur, Grand Chancellor Edward T. Guthrie of Mattoon, Supreme Chancellor Charles S. Davis of Denver, Colo., and Grand Vice Chancellor Andrew J. O'Donnell of Chicago. A dance will follow the banquet.

HERE'S ACCOUNT OF YOUR HOLIDAY GIFT TO SOLDIERS

Balance of $3,355 to Bring More Joy.

For the information of those who so generously contributed to the Christmas fund of $14,425.45 for the wounded soldiers at the Fort Sheridan hospital, THE TRIBUNE presents the following accounting of expenditures:

Two thousand six hundred and eighteen envelopes were distributed to the soldiers, each containing a $1 bill. Gifts, including ties, bill folds, games, pipes, boxes of cigars, cigrets, knives, stationery, fountain pens, books and similar items—a total of more than 9,000 articles—were purchased at a cost of $5,310.88.

Nurses Are Remembered.

Two hundred dollars were spent for presents for the overseas nurses and $1,003.25 worth of Victrola records were distributed among the various wards. One hundred pairs of skates for the use of the boys at the hospital who are able to skate cost $218.29.

The oranges, apples, nuts, candy, etc., with which the stockings were filled, and the refreshments served at the Christmas entertainment, came to a total of $1,464.34. Smaller items, were $24.35, for the etching of a Christmas poster which one of the wounded soldiers had drawn for the celebration, and $150 for decorations. The transportation of the "Little Simplicity" company to Fort Sheridan, with costumes and equipment, cost $81. The entertainers gave their services free.

The total expenditures so far have been:

Cash distributed	$ 2,618.00
Phonograph records	1,003.25
Gifts	5,310.88

Announcement of the disposition of the balance will be made later.

CAFETERIA AID WITH $150 FLAT SEIZED AS THIEF

Thomas Clark, who received $17.50 a week for carving in the cafeteria of the Planters' hotel and lived in a $150 a month apartment with his wife and child at 4911 Lake Park avenue, was arrested yesterday on a charge of larceny.

Edward Purdey, house detective of the hotel, had received complaints lately that steaks, chops, etc., were disappearing from the hotel larder. Detective Sergeants John O'Malley and George Lynch sought the thief.

As Clark was leaving yesterday they found two steaks in the pockets of his overcoat. They also found $80 in cash, three pay checks, and other checks amounting to $200. He was locked up.

HUGE AIR SHOW POINTS LESSON AND A WARNING

Aims to Wake U.S., World's Laggard on Aviation.

BY EYE WITNESS.

Aeronautics—the art that moves as fast as it flies.

An airship without a municipal landing field is like a ship without a harbor.—NEW PROVERBS.

It is not much use for you—if you are a layman in aeronautics—to go to the aeroplane show at the Coliseum without a background.

But with a bit of a background—and if you let your imagination and your practical sense catch the lift and the urge of what this show epitomizes—your presence there may be of considerable use. In brief, you have a vote, and you may be able to do a line of constructive thinking to which the rulers of this country have thus far been unable to adjust themselves.

World's Second Air Show.

They call the show the Aeronautical Exposition. As a lesson and a warning it is sufficiently important to survive that pompous title.

It is the first exhibition of the kind to be held in this country. It is the second in the history of the world. A third is being opened in Paris simultaneously with this one. The first was held last July and August in Amsterdam.

So we are six months behind the Dutch metropolis. The statement is indicative of the general status of the new art in our country.

Here are other indications:

This show is given without federal coöperation or counsel—without government aid of any kind; no subsidy; no appropriation for freight charges.

Of the twenty machines on view at the Coliseum all but two are commercial machines. On those two, which are government property, the promoters of the show had to pay the freight charges and the rentals for space.

Governmental experts in this art are on the scene. They are not permited to talk to the public that goes to the show on the art in which they are pioneers and conquerors. Departmental regulations forbid!

The show, though it represents amazing achievement, is also an epitome of the present plight of an American industry that has been gutted.

War and Peace; a Contrast.

At the signing of the armistice the aeroplane industry of the United States represented a hundred million dollars and 300,000 employés. Today, according to the testimony of Maj. Gen. Charles T. Menoher, it would take eighteen months to get the aeroplane arm of the national defense back on an adequate war basis.

At the signing of the armistice one American company had 17,000 employés. It now has 1,000.

Another American company had 15,000 employés. It now has only its engineering staff, and is marking time.

At the signing of the armistice half the American companies had French and British orders. They now have nene.

Some of them have gone into the manufacture of phonograph cabinets and other kinds of cabinet work.

That is part of the background which will give meaning to a visit to the Coliseum between now and next Thursday.

Other Lands Fly Ahead.

Meanwhile—

France is spending $220,000,000 for aircraft construction and commercial aircraft transportation from France to all her colonies.

And Great Britain is spending $330,000,000 for aircraft production and, operating on the basis of the old Yankee traders, who gave beads and firearms to the savages on their first trip among them, with the certainty that they would sell them three times as many beads and firearms at the traders' own price on the next trip, Great Britain is giving away airplanes to "the right parties" among the South American republics with an eye to (1) interesting, (2) teaching, and (3) then selling—thus creating a demand for the product of the English airplane industry.

There is more than the working out of a trade policy in all this. It links up with the English national defense program, in which the creation of "an aerial reserve" is just now the prime factor.

Even in war time, England mapped out a long distance program to control the air in the future just as she had controlled the seas in the past, and she said so. The parliamentary committee on civil aerial transport, appointed in 1917, submitted its findings a week after the signing of the armistice, saying: "Cost what it may, this country must lead the world in civil aerial transport."

The vital sequitur of the proposition was in substance this:

"Civil aerial transport must be to the navy of the sky what the mercantile marine was to the grand fleet all during the war."

In other words, the basis of a vast aerial fighting reserve and military transport system.

Today England is sending aviation missions to China, Russia, and South America, and two of our consuls in South America have written to representatives of the remnants of the aeroplane industry in this country, saying: "Why don't you do something? The British and French are down here giving away planes as trade boosters."

China has contracted for $40,000,000 worth of aeroplanes with a British firm and has given that firm a monopoly. Our government has protested against this grant, but with what results, if any, is not yet known to the American trade.

On the other hand:

Our war department was so eager to get quit of aeroplane construction that when hostilities ceased it resorted to the telephone to cancel contracts and within a few weeks after the armistice had cancelled a billion dollars' worth.

Show a Vital Thing.

Such is some of the background that makes the Coliseum show mean something vital. It represents the efforts of the American aeroplane industry to preserve its staffs and some vestiges of its once puissant organization the while it is waking up the country. It would be childish to contend that this effort is purely disinterested, but the fact remains that vision and a practical kind of patriotism are in it.

When you go to the Coliseum you will see interesting and amazing objects, among them:

After Only Nine Years!

Lincoln Beachy's machine, only nine years old, but look at it! So quaint and outdated that a layman can hardly tell the head from the tail, and the seat looks like a sawhorse. But it was the first to go down the Hudson.

And then the first three-motor land machine produced in America. In three months it flew 10,000 miles and carried 2,000 passengers.

And the dainty, nifty "Oriole" that costs $8,500 and is among the cheapest novelties the new art has turned out in this country.

And a sumptuous article for $18,000 that sits waves and clouds as easily as you ride in a Morris chair and that has a patent cigar lighter at the passenger's elbow.

It is a good show, with a fascinating foreground, and a background that, when you get it, makes you think all the way from aerial reserve to municipal landing fields.

A-B-C SUPER ELECTRIC

There was a time when women did not understand electric washers—did not know that some wash clothes quicker and better than others — did not know what questions to ask to judge superiority and satisfaction.

But that time has passed. The sweeping popularity of the A-B-C has established IT as the standard.

Let the operating principles of the A-B-C be your yard stick.

A-B-C
Super Electric
America's Leading Washing Machine
Why Careful Buyers Choose the A-B-C

because—it employs the most thoroughly practical, efficient and economical washing principle. Its cylinder reverses after each revolution. It is the only washer that combines every advantage of both the "cylinder" and the "oscillating" principles of operation.

because—it is the only full cabinet cylinder washer.

because—it is the only absolutely safe washer. All moving parts are enclosed, thereby avoiding every possibility of soiling or tearing clothes, or of injury to operator, children or household pets.

because—its electrically operated wringer swings all around and locks in any desired position. No washer is 100% efficient without this feature.

because—it washes clothes quicker than any other washer made. Its cylinder revolves 22 times per minute, forcing suds through the clothes 44 times each minute.

because—it is the most quiet-running washer on the market. No noise, shock or jar when cylinder reverses. All you can hear is the slight hum of the motor.

because—it is the most simple in construction, having the fewest number of moving parts. Nothing to get out of order.

because—it has a 50% oversize motor—¼ horsepower; most makes use 1/6 horsepower.

because—it has a white maple cylinder—most easily cleaned and therefore most sanitary; cannot cut or tear clothes; also more durable than metal.

because—it has an adjustable belt drive, preventing trouble and expense of motor "burn-outs."

because—it is the most attractive in appearance—a real ornament in any home. Table top.

because—it costs only one-third as much to operate as an ordinary household electric iron.

because—it has been tested and approved by The Good Housekeeping Institute.

because—it is manufactured and guaranteed by Altorfer Bros. Co. at Peoria, Ill., who were pioneer washing machine makers, and now rank the World's leading makers of electric and power washing machines.

RAVE TO OPEN; MAY TELL MORE IN POISON CASE

ody of Alfred Duffies to Be Exhumed.

Markesan, Wis., Jan. 10.—[Special.] —The arrest of Dr. J. A. Freudenberg, ecused by a coroner's jury of causing e death of his mother-in-law, Mrs. ettie Duffies, wealthy widow, is excted tomorrow.

District Attorney M. J. Paul, Berlin, is., announced today that a warrant r the arrest of Dr. Freudenberg ould be issued "at any time." He timated that the warrant would be rved as soon as the body of Alfred uffies, second husband of Mrs. Nettie uffies, had been exhumed. He died March, 1917.

Intervening Claimants Gone.

During the last four years, since the octor entered the Duffies family, Mr. nd Mrs. Duffies, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel erry, Mrs. Freudenberg's parents, and lfred Duffies Sr., a grandfather, have ied under peculiar circumstances. hen the death of Mrs. Nettie Duffies ccurred on Nov. 1, 1919, caused, according to a coroner's jury's verdict, an injection of mustard solution dministered by Dr. Freudenberg, Mrs. reudenberg, wife of Dr. Freudenberg, as left heir to an estate now estiated at $400,000.

"None of the Terrys or Duffies has een dead long enough to prevent the ause of death being determined," delared District Attorney Paul today. "The body of Alfred Duffies, the doc-r's father-in-law, will be exhumed, robably Monday. If the examination his body discloses certain facts we e now seeking to learn, the bodies of r. and Mrs. Terry and of Alfred uffies, grandfather of Mrs. Freudenerg, will be disinterred."

Discuss Thrifty Romance.

"Markesan's mustard death" mysry is the only topic discussed in this illage. "The romance of Dr. Freudenrg, who came to Markesan practical- penniless, wooed and won the vilge heiress," is universally talked bout. Dr. Freudenberg's reported inuiry shortly after his arrival as to ny "rich girls" also is a matter of ossip.

Dr. Freudenberg spent several years Chicago, where he studied medicine. ater he went to Cambria, Wis. There e received his medical degree. Learnng that Markesan was a good field, he ent there. He testified before the oroner's jury that he had little money hen he arrived there.

Money Squabble, Doctor Says.

"It is nothing but a dirty money quabble," said Dr. Freudenberg. "I m accused of something I have not one because Mrs. Duffies died without eaving a will. My mother-in-law is urvived by a brother, William Terry. He is responsible for all this suspicion. Mrs. Duffies, in the presence of seven or eight witnesses, insisted she had the right to leave her money as she chose."

Dr. Freudenberg denied that in the last eight months previous to Mrs. Duffies' death he had even so much as given her a glass of water.

The principal state's witness is Miss Grace Brehl of Washington, Pa., a nurse, who attended Mrs. Duffies. In her deposition she said she overheard Mrs. Freudenberg accuse Dr. Freudenberg of trying to poison her mother. This Mrs. Freudenbereg denies. Mrs. Freudenberg at the coroner's inquest, however, admitted telling a friend that she would be the "next one," and that a child (indicating her daughter) "would be easily got rid of."

QUIT UNDER FIRE.

It was learned yesterday that Dr. J. A. Freudenberg served as an interne at the South Chicago hospital and resigned from that institution when suspicion was directed against him in connection with the disappearance of a diamond ring from the finger of a young woman who had attempted suicide and who was treated by Freudenberg while unconscious.

Members of the staff of the hospital remember him well. He was disliked, they said, because of his practice in collecting fees from accident patients brought to the institution. A staff doctor was supposed to be called whenever a patient was brought in, but instead of doing that, those at the hospital say, Freudenberg treated the patients himself and then collected a fee. He spent little, and was called "the miser" by those at the institution.

When the suicide victim was brought to the hospital, Freudenberg, it is said, followed his custom of giving her medical assistance, instead of summoning the doctor on duty. When the young woman was revived she missed her diamond ring. Hospital attendants remembered seeing it on her finger when she was brought in. Dr. Freudenberg was questioned, but denied any knowledge of the gem. He resented the imputation that he was in any way involved, and offered his resignation.

POISONED, JURY SAYS; WIFE WHO WED AGAIN HELD

Brothers in Michigan Death Triangle.

Mount Pleasant, Mich., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—"Arsenic poisoning administered by persons unknown," the coroner's jury decided here today, caused the death Nov. 24, at Blanchard, Mich., of Henry Donaldson, whose widow became the bride of Elmer Donaldson, her dead husband's brother, thirteen days after his funeral.

"A home for myself and children," was the widow's explanation here of the short lapse between her widowhood and remarriage.

"Since Dec. 31, when the body of Donaldson was exhumed, Isabella county officers have been investigating. The vital organs of Donaldson were sent to state chemists for analysis and it was upon their report and the testimony of other witnesses that the jury reached a verdict.

Doctor Tells of Symptoms.

Dr. R. E. Dawson, who attended Henry Donaldson, testified that he was first called Nov. 16, diagnosing his patient's ailment as lumbago and treating his accordingly. About Nov. 20 Donaldson again came to him for treatment, complaining of severe abdominal cramps which the physician diagnosed as toxic poisoning. The physician testified his symptoms were much the same as would have been caused by arsenic poisoning. He said his patient was delirious for about twenty-four hours before death.

Mrs. Donaldson was a witness at the inquest, as were here new husband, a Pere Marquette brakeman, and her father, William Wright of Ionia.

Mrs. Donaldson's Story.

Mrs. Donaldson married her first husband about eight years ago and has three children. She says:

"He became a drunkard. Nobody could say I didn't care for him. I stuck up for him when every one else was down on him."

The brother and his wife of a month are detained.

Single Tax Plan Is Beaten 3 to 1 in Ottawa Election

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—The effort to change Ottawa's civic taxation system to single tax was defeated three to one at the recent municipal election. It was proposed in place of the present civic taxation on land, improvements, and income to reduce the taxation on improvements and income by 25 per cent annually until the whole of the city revenue was derived from the land taxation.

Two U. S. Sailors Attacked in Italy; One May Be Dead

SECRETARY OF LOST A. J. SMALL NOW IS MISSING

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 10.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Ambrose J. Small, millionaire theatrical magnate, was deepened today when it was reported to the police that John Doughty, who had served eighteen years as Small's secretary, also was missing. Doughty was transferred to Montreal when the Trans-Canada Theater company purchased Mr. Small's interests. He returned to Toronto at Christmas time to get some papers for the manager of the new company and wired to Montreal on Dec. 26 that he was too ill to return. He has not been heard from since.

TRUCK RUNS DOWN BOY.

Virgil Kyle, 10 years old, 2033 Northwestern avenue, was struck by an automobile truck yesterday while crossing the street at Throop and West Madison streets, suffering bruises and a fractured leg. The truck was the property of the Motor Transportation company, 1201 West Lake street, and was driven by Thomas Devorak, 4445 South Maplewood avenue. He was not held by the police.

YOUNG DENTIST IN N. Y. VICTIM OF HATCHET MURDER

New York, Jan. 10.—The throat cut, the eyes plucked out, and the skull chopped to pieces, the body of Dr. Jacob D. Hananja, 24, a dentist, was found lying in his office shortly before noon today. A bloody hatchet lay a few feet away.

A paroled convict from Sing Sing, thought to have had a grudge against the family, is suspected.

According to the young dentist's family, which lives in the apartment where his offices are, the ex-convict called at the office this morning and asked to have a tooth pulled. When the mother, Mrs. Matilda Hanania, went into the offices a little later she found the body lying in a pool of blood.

Isaac Isaacowitz was arrested in an east side barber shop by the police later tonight, charged with the murder of Dr. Hanania. Isaacowitz, according to the police, admitted that he had been at the dentist's office during the day.

JUST HEARING FOR FIVE SOCIALISTS REBUFFED IN N. Y.

Public Urged to Hold Its Final Judgment.

New York, Jan. 10.—The action of the state assembly in suspending the five Socialist members was to determine whether the organizations they represent "advocate methods or employ tactics" to bring about the overthrow of the government, Thaddeus C. Sweet, speaker of the assembly, declared in a letter to Charles E. Hughes, made public tonight. It was in reply to the former governor's letter condemning the ousting of the Socialist assemblymen.

Every patriotic citizen should withhold judgment, Speaker Sweet added, until evidence respecting the Socialist Party of America and other organizations had been presented to the judiciary committee of the assembly, before which the suspended Socialists will be "impartially judged" as to their "rights and fitness" to take their seats.

Socialists Stage Rallies.

The Socialist party staged three rallies late today at One Hundred and Tenth street and Fifth avenue, in the heart of the district which sent August Claessens, suspended Socialist member, to the assembly. Claessens spoke to a crowd of more than 1,000 persons, who cheered him repeatedly.

"What the outcome of all this will be I don't know," Claessens said. "They are signing their own death warrant. If a citizen has no right to cast a ballot, then there is no democracy.

"I have no apology to make for our manifesto. I say here and now, 'Long live the international social revolution!' Social revolution does not mean the use of bombs or guns to overthrow the government."

The United States transport America, rumored to be "soviet ark No. 2," received orders today to prepare for an "extended voyage to foreign waters on or about Jan. 15."

Draws Fire from Borah.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—Refusal of the New York state assembly to seat five Socialist representatives drew fire today in the senate. Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, declared such action invited lawlessness and disorder, while Senator Thomas, Democrat, Colorado, said it would drive the Socialists to "revolutionary methods."

GEORGE EASTMAN.

HAYWOOD GIVES 4,000 SCHEME TO AVENGE ARRESTS

Stay Abed and Disrupt Industry, I. W. W. Plan.

"Big Bill" Haywood, I. W. W. leader, offered more than 4,000 sympathizers of Reds recently seized by State's Attorney Hoyne their chance to get even last night. Explaining that he was in no way violating the law by advocating syndicalistic retaliation, Haywood urged all workers to get together and unite on a day when they will remain in bed. This method, Haywood said, would disorganize all industry without involving any one in trouble. Much applause and stamping of feet greeted the suggestion.

The meeting was held in Carmen's hall and widely advertised as a protest against recent seizures and deportations. State's Attorney Hoyne and Mitchell Palmer were the principal targets, but Woodrow Wilson, the newspapers, the draft and espionage laws and other individuals and institutions came in for their share.

Start Fund for Defense.

A collection was taken for the defense of those held for deportation that possibly reached $1,000. Every one in the hall was urged to contribute $1. H. Austin Simons, a conscientious objector recently released from Fort Leavenworth, spoke luridly of the vanishing liberties of America.

A part of the money will be used to free those held; another part is for the abolition of laws that make the imprisonment of radicals possible.

Raphael Mallen, formerly an auditor for the United States trades commission, assailed the allies for their failure to recognize the present Russian government, and pointed to the rumor that the German government has become sovietized as an indication of what things were coming to. He said most American institutions represented soviet ideas and named the Rotary club, fraternal organizations, and the Roman Catholic church as proof.

Resolutions were adopted in protest against the roundups of radicals, and demanding the immediate release of all those now held, together with the repeal of the espionage laws. The expulsion of five Socialistic members of the New York legislature was also condemned as "utter lawlessness."

Haywood Is Cheered.

Hundreds of hats went up in the air and the cheering continued for five minutes as "Bill" Haywood took the platform.

After extolling his prison record Haywood described prison conditions which he said were without parallel anywhere. He then told the audience they had the power to stop every wheel in the city of Chicago and wondered why they did not use that power. After urging them to organize like the workers of Russia, he began attacking Hoyne and Palmer and wound up with the suggestion of a day in bed for all of Chicago's workers as the remedy for deportation.

William F. Trude and Jewish speakers also addressed the meeting.

A flutter was caused by the appearance in the meeting of Capt. Frank P. Stratton, an army officer in the intelligence department, whose appearance in I. W. W. meetings one month ago was followed by several arrests.

One phrase, used successively by all of the speakers and translated into many tongues found great favor. It was: "I would rather be red than yellow."

More massmeetings were announced as further protest against deportation.

Two More Arrests.

Two members of the Communist Labor party's Cook county board were taken before State's Attorney Hoyne yesterday and questioned in regard to an alleged conspiracy to overthrow the United States government. One, Attorney Samuel M. Ash of 3439 West Eighteenth street, was released on $5,000 bonds after he agreed to assist Assistant State's Attorney Lloyd Heth in his investigations. Another, Charles Krumbein, 947 Diversey parkway, was locked up.

Five more are sought on warrants charging them with conspiracy to overthrow the government. They are: Neils Kjar, 1606 North Whipple street; Jacob Schiff, 2846 Augusta street; Edwin Firth, 444 East Fiftieth street; Samuel F. Hankin, 1353 North Campbell avenue; and Harry E. Greenwood, 215 South Throop street.

HINTS OF TRIAL OF EX-EMPEROR, HE BEING ABSENT

MANCHESTER, England, Jaan. 10.—The Manchester Guardian today hints that a solution of the difficulty with regard to the trial of the former German emperor will be found.

"The ex-kaiser will be summoned to trial before an allied commission and if he does not answer—it is possible he may not—he will be tried in his absence," the newspaper says. "By this course his full guilt will be made manifest to the world by the testimony of witnesses, including Germans, his correspondence, and other documents.

"Sentence will be pronounced and if it cannot be executed it will, at any rate, he on record. One possibility is that, on evidence available from Germany and Holland, the ex-kaiser will be proved a criminal lunatic."

Kaiser to Call Conference.

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Former Emperor William, says a report from Amsterdam, will call a family conference of the Hohenzollerns after the peace treaty is ratified.

CLABAUGH JOLTS TRADE BODY AID IN MALLEN ROW

Denies Colver's Charges; Makes Him Target.

Charges of "sympathetic harmony" between W. B. Colver of the federal trade commission and the Southern Wholesale Grocers' association, alleged violator of a federal court decree, are contained in a telegram sent yesterday to the senate committee on agriculture at Washington by Hinton G. Clabaugh, former chief of the Chicago bureau of investigation of the department of justice and now an employé of the Peabody Coal company.

Mr. Clabaugh makes a general denial of charges made by Colver before the committee to the effect that Chicago packers had "framed" the arrest of Rafael Mallen, former employé of the federal trade commission, and were responsible for accusations that the commission was a "hotbed of radicalism and bolshevism."

Says He Got Inside Tip.

He declared the only charges of radicalism against any employés of the commission that were made to him while he was connected with the department of justice were made by a member of the commission itself. This man, he says, "was in close touch with such employés, officially and personally, and should be in a position to know the character, mental attitude and habits of the associates of whom he was complaining."

"Several names were mentioned and more or less definite information was submitted," the telegram reads. "This information was submitted to the department, as, for reasons of policy, one department is not permitted to investigate the personnel of another department.

Explains Cattle Case.

"The only other statement I ever made with respect to the federal trade commission or its activities was that I did not believe it had information warranting prosecution under the Sherman act, as applied to the shipment of live stock, for the reason that such live stock was consigned to commission merchants in Chicago and was not purchased by the packers until after the stock had moved in interstate shipment. I stated that this was the government's own view of the law in 1910, and that no live stock count had therefore been included in the previous cases in Chicago.

"Moreover, the packers had no control over such live stock, as the title to same remained with the cattle raiser or shipper, and the stock was sent to Chicago on consignment to independent commission merchants for sale in the open market.

Brings In Colver's Name.

"The only other statement I ever have made was that the federal trade commission could, in my judgment, very greatly profit by an investigation of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' association, the officers of which organization at that time were working in sympathetic harmony with Colver and the federal trade commission.

"The Southern Wholesale Grocers' association and its members have been successfully prosecuted in the state and federal courts several times, including three cases which I personally handled. Civil damages were obtained from members of the organization in the state courts for conspiracy in restraint of trade. Subsequently the government filed a bill in equity at Birmingham, Ala., found them guilty, and imposed fines against the association and certain of its officers and members.

"It is my belief that if Federal Judge Grubb or the federal trade commission will direct an investigation by intelligent and competent persons, evidence of a subsequent violation of the decree mentioned will be found."

Nurses Quiet Patients at Johns Hopkins Fire

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 10.—Fire tonight badly damaged the pathological building of the Johns Hopkins hospital group. A number of rare specimens were removed by physicians. A general alarm of fire was sounded and the flames kept from spreading to the Phipps clinic and other hospital buildings.

Nurses quieted the patients of the hospital and according to Dr. W. H. Smith, superintendent, there was no excitement among them.

ATLANTA SEEKS "CON MAN KING" ON NEW CHARGE

A legal battle will be staged soon before Gov. Lowden by attorneys for John Strosnider, "king of con men," against Sergt. C. J. Jameison of the Atlanta, Ga., police. Strosnider, charged with swindling A. J. Mitchell, investment broker in the Majestic Theater building, out of $25,000, is wanted in Atlanta for like deals said to involve $20,000, put over last spring.

Sergt. Jameison arrived yesterday in Chicago with a warrant from the governor of Georgia for Strosnider, but while he was visiting the detective bureau, Strosnider's attorney appeared before Gov. Lowden with a plea against extradition. No date for the hearing was set.

Meantime Strosnider is residing in the county jail. Although it has been only eleven months since he was released on parole from Joliet, where he served a four year term on charges of stealing $20,000 from the late Dr. William T. Kirby, banker, he is wanted in two other states, and Chief of Detectives Mooney is wondering why the parole agents don't take him back to Joliet. In South Bend, Ind., a warrant also is waiting for Strosnider, charging "con game," and in the county jail lies a parole warrant, it is said.

'Voice in the Dark' to Speak for Starving Children

To help feed the hundreds of thousands of starving Hungarian children, a special performance of "A Voice in the Dark," the next play at the Woods theater, will be given Sunday afternoon, Feb. 8. The proceeds will go to the Chicago branch of Herbert Hoover's committee for European children's relief.

800 POLICE, 350 FIREMEN, PERILED BY BUDGET CUTS

11,000 Lights Also Are Menaced, Claim.

Here is what city department heads say they will have to do if the council finance committee sticks to its proposal to keep 1920 expenditures within the estimated revenues:

Lay off 800 members of the police department, including 400 patrolmen.

Lay off 350 firemen.

Turn out 11,000 gas and gasoline lights

The committee meets tomorrow to consider replies from department heads, who were asked to bring their budgets for this year within their share of the revenue. The department heads are expected to reply that the proposed cuts will cripple nearly every department of the city government.

Police, Firemen Periled.

"To save the amount ordered by the committee we would have to lay off patrolmen, hostlers, janitors, scrubwomen, clerks and other employés to the number of 800," said Si Mayer, secretary of the police department, to whom Chief Garrity referred the committee's request.

"To save the $608,000 requested we would have to drop 350 firemen," said John F. Cullerton, manager of properties of the fire department. "I am already working on the plan to drop the oldest men, those eligible for a pension. I find that if we get rid of the 200 oldest firemen we have none in the department older than 53; if we lop off the 350 the age limit will be 50."

"If forced to make the saving requested, I should be obliged to turn off 11,000 gas and gasoline lights," said William G. Keith, commissioner of gas and electricity. "That is about one-sixth of the city's lights. Even that would not bring my department within the allotment, and there would have to be cuts in personnel as well."

Sees Advantage in Debts.

Department heads are calling attention to the fact that there is no law against overappropriation. One said Chicago would have a better chance to get what it wanted before the constitutional convention if it had not lived within its revenue for the last few years, but had allowed debts to pile up.

VOLCANO RAINS LAVA DEATH IN 20 MILE RADIUS

Mexico City, Jan. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Flames are still being emitted by the new volcano at San Miguel in the western part of the state of Vera Cruz, according to dispatches received here last night. It is stated volcanic dust has floated as far as Coscomatepec, about twenty miles east of the new crater.

Every village in that vicinity has been destroyed, while lava and floods of contaminated water from sources opened by the recent earthquakes are flooding the district near the crater.

Refugees from San Miguel confirm earlier reports telling of numerous deaths from falling buildings and poisonous gases.

WANTS $25,425 HER SMILES WON FOR TIP TRUST

Check Girl Sues for Four Years' Gratuities.

After four years as a check girl, during which time she smiled several hundred thousand times while handing over several hundred thousand hats, Mrs. Hannah Stires of 6307 Champlain avenue considers herself competent to state that, no matter how generous the tipper, there is no money in tips for the tippee. Through her attorney, L. H. Craig, she has filed suit against members of Rousso & Wolf, alleged "tipping trust," to recover $25,425.

"Four years ago I took a job for $9 a week at the old Schiller cafe," she said. "I was hired by Clifford Wolf, who belongs to a firm that has the checkroom concessions in most of the hotels and cafes in Chicago. When I left them last December, after Wolf told me I wasn't turning in enough money, I was getting $15 a week. Every cent I took in—and it amounted to more than $100 a week—went to the 'trust.'"

"Grab It," Is Slogan.

Mrs. Stires says that a check girl's life is just one continual transferring of dimes from the hands of the patrons to the pockets of the employer. With "smile" as their watchword and "grab it" as their slogan, they have to corral the coins in plenty or lose their jobs, she informs.

"Wolf used to come down to the Woodlawn café with a party, drink up about $50 worth of champagne, and then come over to the cloakroom and count the hats on the hooks," went on Mrs. Stires.

"'Well, pretty good night tonight,' he would say. 'You ought to take in about $20.'

Got "Bawlings Out."

"Then, if they weren't tipping well and I didn't make that much, he would come around next day and bawl me out. All the tips had to be put in a couple of little banks, which the doorman would take down to the 'trust's' headquarters in the Hotel Sherman when the night was over."

Mrs. Stires stated that Wolf used to stand beside her and tell her to hold out her hand after relinquishing the headgear. Finally, she said, it got to be a habit and she could do it without embarrassment.

"Lots of people used to ask me if this money was going to the 'trust,'" she continued, "and we were instructed to say no. I would lie about it and then put the money in little iron banks. And all the time I was working long hours and fibbing and begging, Wolf was running around in a swell $8,000 touring car that my smiles had helped to earn.

"Really, the check girls ought to unionize. Then they could demand a part of the tips. There was a movement to form a union two years ago, but Wolf wouldn't stand for it. When I spoke to him about it he told me to keep my mouth shut."

Irish Asked to Back Up "Free Ireland" with Gold

The Irish bond certificate committee plans to begin a campaign for $1,500,000 in Illinois and $8,500,000 in the rest of the country with a meeting in the 1st Regiment armory Jan. 18.

"Purchase of a bond certificate is proof of the recognition of the independence of Ireand," said John A. McGarry, city chairman. "Refusal to purchase is an admission that your faith in Ireland is merely assumed."

The meeting will be addressed by Frank P. Walsh, Lindsey Crawford, and Harry Bold, member of the Irish congress and secretary to President De Valera.

APHASIA VICTIM IDENTIFIED; DOES NOT KNOW SON

Is Worcester, Mass., Musician.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 10.—The mysterious amnesia victim, cared for by a minister in Lambertville, N. J., and known as "Dr. X.," was identified today as Dr. John L. Brand, 64 years old, of Worcester, Mass., who disappeared in March, 1917.

His son, Lieutenant Commander Charles L. Brand, in charge of construction at the Philadelphia navy yard, walked into the front parlor as "Dr. X." was posing for his photograph.

Tall, erect and dressed in the uniform of a navy officer, Commander Brand threw open the door and stood for a second. The little group of newspaper men, photographers and doctors turned toward him.

Fails to Recognize Son.

He took a few halting steps into the room and with quivering voice and trembling lip, said:

"Father, don't you recognize me? I am your son Charles."

The man, hunching back in his chair, stared with wide open eyes. He was making a supreme mental effort. He became very pale, and panted from the attempt.

After a tense moment, he whispered "No."

Then rising slowly from his chair, he walked to his son and, putting his trembling hands on the epaulets on his son's uniform, he stared for some time directly into his son's eyes, but he could not remember.

Collapses at Interview.

When he realized he had failed to conquer his death and recall the past, the broken old man gave a deep sob and sank to the floor. He had collapsed and was virtually carried from the room.

Commander Brand said he had read the account of "Prof. X" in the newspapers and instantly recognized his father. Obtaining leave from the navy yard, he immediately went to Lambertville.

Dr. Brand was born and educated in England, the son said, and was a physician and a musician. He had devoted himself almost entirely to research work for some time prior to his disappearance and was an inveterate reader. He specialized in chemical and biological research.

"I welcome any questions you may ask. I believe, and so do physicians, that possibly some keynote or familiar phrase may suddenly dispel the fog from my memory," said Dr. Brand.

Was Music Teacher.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 10.—Dr. John L. Brand, the man of mystery identified today in Lambertville, N. J., was a music teacher in Worcester from 1902 until 1912, when he dropped out of sight. He later was a church organist. While a resident here he disappeared for some time, but returned and resumed his work.

Wife Overjoyed at News.

Leavenworth, Kas., Jan. 10.—Mrs. John L. Brand, at the home of her daughter here, was overjoyed when informed her husband, John L. Brand, identified as the man suffering from loss of memory at Lambertville, N. J., had been found.

BAKER FAVORS CABINET MEN ON CONGRESS FLOOR

Should Have Chance to Talk Back.

New York, Jan. 10.—Secretary of War Baker today declared himself for "some radical changes" in the administration of the government, including the seating of cabinet members either in the senate or the house of representatives. He was addressing a meeting of "mothers, wives and sisters" called by the New York League for Political Education.

"I believe there should be some radical changes in the relations between the executive and the legislative branches of our government," Mr. Baker explained. "Members of the cabinet with seats in one or the other house could defend the policies of their departments.

"They should have the right to head of a department should have questions fired at him and then have his department sacrificed on the floor of either house without being present to put in his defense.

"The writers of the constitution tried to aim between the king of the olden days and the mob. They provided for both. They made the president responsible for the government of the nation, but gave him little power. They conferred on congress great powers, but no responsibility.

"I am not speaking now of President Wilson's administration only. The same thing has happened in every administration, even in that of President McKinley, when the strong personal friendship between the president and Senator Hanna, leader of the senate, made harmony as nearly possible as it ever has been in our government.

"In every administration, notably in that of Mr. Roosevelt, there has been a clash between the executive and legislative branches."

Mr. Baker entered his "indignant protest" against bitter partisanship in American life. "In popular government the people must learn to discuss political matters temperately," he said.

The Future of This District Marvelous for the Investor

Nothing like Chicago's great South Side industrial district is in existence. Here industry has come because of geographical location, transportation, economical freight rates, distribution facilities and the presence of the greatest array of skilled and unskilled labor in the world. The manufactured products from this district run into billions of dollars annually. In these days of high wages therefore it is essential that we have great subdivisions within easy distance of these great districts to fill the needs of the people who work there. The demand for such a subdivision as Bermont Manor is a healthy demand and one that depends on no outside force but on the steady growth of Chicago itself in industrial importance.

The Wm. H. Britigan Organization are experts in the selection and development of properties of this character. We have years of experience, some of the best brains in the real estate world, unlimited financial and sales resources. In putting on this great subdivision and offering it to the public of Chicago we are doing so with the full knowledge that every lot is a real investment and that the future of the property is dependent only on the commercial and industrial success of Chicago, which is the greatest inland city in the world.

AMERICAN FOOD FOR BREAD LINE 100 MILES LONG

Supplies 400,000 at Relief Kitchens.

Much anxiety is felt for the safety of Paul Williams, war correspondent of The Tribune with Gen. Denikine's forces in southeastern Russia. He was last heard from at Taganrog, now in the hands of the bolsheviki. He has either gone into the Caucasus with Denikine's disorganized armies or left by sea, through Odessa. There is also a possibility that he has fallen into the hands of the Reds.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TIFLIS, Dec. 15.—[By Courier to Paris.]—A bread line 100 miles in length here is being fed by the people of the United States. The line has 400,000 persons in it, and is the longest in the world.

Naturally, the hungry 400,000 are not in an unbroken string, but stand in pitiful ranks before scores of kitchens with which the near east relief has dotted an area stretching from the Caucasus mountains south into northern Turkey. This work has been going on since last spring. Present plans carry it through the winter, but indications are that at least half the dependents will not be any better off next winter than they are now. Conditions and circumstances are against them.

Serve Bread and Soup.

Flour no longer is issued to a town. Bread is prepared in local bakeries under supervision to prevent the use of sawdust or other substitutes by the unscrupulous. With the bread is served a thick meat soup.

The hungry line up but once a day. Those who are too feeble to walk are carried by the stronger. Four months ago persons frequently dropped dead while awaiting their turn. This no longer happens. Those who are too weak to stand receive medical attention until some of their strength returns. They usually are covered with lice, rags, and sores when brought to the infirmaries. Their heads are shaved, they are bathed, innoculated against typhus and cholera, and given a clean bed. Superintending the medical end are two military surgeons and two missionary doctors. They are assisted by Armenians and Russians.

KENOSHA NURSE IS DECORATED FOR WORK UNDER FIRE

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—For heroic service as a Red Cross nurse under fire in the Argonne, Mrs. Edna Coughlin Quinsler, formerly a nurse at the Kenosha hospital and one of the first Kenosha women to answer the war call of the Red Cross, has been awarded the Distinguished Service medal by congress, according to dispatches today.

MRS. EDNA C. QUINSLER.

The award came as a result of the citation of Mrs. Quinsler by Lieut. Col. W. H. Jones, commanding officer of Milwaukee base hospital unit No. 22. She is the only Kenosha woman to receive the decoration and so far as can be learned is the first woman in Wisconsin to be so honored.

In the Bar le Duc region, during the war Mrs. Quinsler, with Lieut. Somers and Private Poole, made up a "gas and shot" first aid team, which became known as one of the most efficient in all France.

COST OF PAVING THIS YEAR SHOWS HEAVY INCREASE

The cost to the property owner of having the street in front of his home paved will be 5 to 30 per cent in excess of last year's prices during the ensuing year. The board of local improvements opened bids yesterday on a number of paving projects.

Following is a comparison of the averages of the bids received, compared with last year's prices:

Bituminated concrete [alley paving], $2.76 per square yard; last year, $2.61.

Brick [alley paving], $5.25 per square yard; last year, $4.25.

Asphalt, type B [second grade street paving, for lighter traffic purposes]—$3.30 per square yard; last year, $2.56.

Standard asphalt paving [street, heavy traffic]—$3.50 per square yard; last year, $2.88.

Asphalt-macadam [street]—$2.25 per square yard; last year, $1.95.

Grading—$2.40 per cubic yard, or 80 cents per square yard; practically the same as last year.

$150,000,000 U.S MEAL URGED FOR STARVING EUROPE

Glass Wants Loans to Aid Poles, Austria, Armenia

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—Loans aggregating $150,000,000 for food relief in Austria, Poland, and other European countries and Armenia to prevent "a general disintegration of political cohesion in western Europe," were proposed to congress today by Secretary Glass, who said it might be necessary to increase this amount to $200,000,000 after the full situation in Europe had been assessed.

The secretary reviewed at length conditions in the suffering countries, particularly Austria and Poland, and said Great Britain, France, and Italy were assisting in relieving distress in Austria through a $48,000,000 loan and that England would continue to lend aid by furnishing ships for transporting American food and such supplies as possible from the United Kingdom.

Renner Predicts Calamity.

Reviewing the situation in Austria, Mr. Glass said suffering was so great that the chancellor, Dr. Renner, had declared that a complete breakdown must occur by the end of January unless assistance were given from the outside.

Reds Stirring in Warsaw.

Referring to Poland, Mr. Glass said the failure of the government there properly to ration its adult population already had caused demonstrations by the Reds in Warsaw.

Under the treasury department plan, the loans would be advanced by the grain corporation out of the $1,000,000,000 wheat guaranty fund and would be used to establish credits in this country on the basis of $70,000,000 for Austria, $50,000,000 for Poland, $25,000,000 for other European countries, and $1,000,000 for Armenia.

Some forms of securities would be obtained from the foreign countries before the loans would be made.

Chairman Fordney said the committee would act next week, after hearing Herbert Hoover on Monday.

Britain Willing to Help.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—It is officially declared with reference to the recent letter of Carter Glass to Chairman Fordney of the house ways and means committee, in which the secretary of the treasury pointed out the necessity for aiding Europe, especially Austria, Poland, and Armenia, that Great Britain is ready to share in the work.

IRISH USE BOMBS, STORM A GALWAY POLICE BARRACKS

DUBLIN, Jan. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Police barracks six miles from the village of Taum, Galway county, were attacked Thursday night by a large party of men, according to reports.

The attacking party, said to number about 100 men, besieged the barracks, firing rifle volleys, which riddled the doors and smashed all the windows.

During the fight two or three bombs were thrown, one wall being demolished and one police sergeant being slightly wounded. The occupants of the barracks returned the fire of the assailants.

Two bold mail robberies, one near Limerick and the other near Mullingar, were reported yesterday. About £50 in transit to recipients of old age pensions was taken.

IRISH SEEK $10,000,000.

New York, Jan. 10.—W. Bourke Cockran, state chairman of the Irish bond certificate loan, announced tonight that the campaign to sell $10,000,000 worth of certificates of the Irish republic would begin Jan. 17.

The government of the Irish republic is in full control in Ireland except in the cities of Dublin and Belfast, according to Mr. Cockran, and is "enacting laws which are universally obeyed and administering them through courts whose judgments no one cares to dispute."

ANTIDOTE FOUND FOR MERCURY POISONING, CLAIM

Deadliness of Corrosive Sublimate at End?

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—William A. Hall, a well known chemist here, announced today the perfecting of a positive antidote for bichloride of mercury poisoning, following tests that have extended over five years. It is believed by physicians to be an invaluable gift to science.

Mr. Hall announced that during the trial nearly twenty persons in Detroit, who had taken corrosive sublimate have responded successfully to the treatment, and that only one had died.

In the single case lost the antidote was not administered until forty-eight hours after the person had been poisoned, and in that time the mercury bichloride had been thoroughly absorbed and the case ended in paralysis of the kidneys.

Antidote Is Insoluble.

The antidote makes a triple iodide insoluble in the gastric juice of the stomach, and in the intestinal liquids, thus rendering the poison inert, it is claimed, and it can be given not only orally, but intravenously, rendering the poison in the blood also inert.

The chemist's statement contends that "the antidote is new and rational, scientific, dependable and safe, besides offering some of the very medicines highly desirable to tone up the patient from the shock he has received."

How to Give Treatment.

The treatment consists of the following:

"Remove the stomach contents as thoroughly as possible. Give plenty of whites of eggs and remove in the best way. Then, for every two grains of mercuric chloride supposed to have been taken, administer the following:

"Potassium iodide, 7.35 grains.

"Quinine hydrochlorate, 4 grains.

"Dissolved in water, 4 ounces.

"It forms a precipitate with the mercuric chloride insoluble in dilate acids or alkali carbonates (.2 per cent). acids or alkali carbonates (.2 per cent)."

MADE A HABIT OF HER MARRIAGES, NOW SHE'S SORRY

New York, Jan. 10.—Protesting that she did not know it was illegal to have more than one husband at a time, Mrs. Edna Leslie, 23 years old, was arraigned in Brooklyn today on the charge of having had four in the last seven years.

She admitted that all of them were alive and that she never troubled herself to get a divorce. John Leslie, who owns a freight boat, was the last of the line and she declared she loved him bes of all.

"I never thought I'd see any of my former husbands again," the young woman told the court, "and did not think it was against the law to marry so many men. I'm sorry if I have broken the law."

Mrs. Leslie was held in $1,000 bail on a charge of bigamy.

POSEN JUSTICE SEIZED IN 'PLOT' TO FINE AUTOS

Warrants Out for 2 Aids at Crossing "Trap."

Deputy Sheriff Manuel Sultan last night arrested Police Magistrate Ladislas Hayman of Posen, Ill., charging him with conspiracy. He declares, too, that warrants will be served charging malfeasance in office and extortion.

"I have been investigating Hayman and his so-called constables for some time," said Sultan. "Automobile associations in Chicago and Harvey and other towns south of Chicago and many individuals have been complaining about them.

Grab Autos at Crossing.

"The constables have been arresting chauffeurs on the Dixie highway as they passed over the tracks south of Blue Island. The charge is failure to stop at a railroad crossing.

"In 1917 a law was passed compelling the commissioner of highways to put up signs near extra hazardous turns and railroad crossings, warning autoists and ordering them to stop. No such sign was erected at the railroad crossing in question, but the magistrate had a couple of signs printed and placed there. All they say is: 'Stop.'

"Those failing to heed this sign were fined all sorts of sums. Hayman even took the last dollar of a certain driver and told him to mail the balance.

"I have found at least 150 cases in which persons were so fined, absolutely without trial.

Warrants Out for Aids.

"Warrants charging these 'constables'—B. Hoffman, 18 years old, and William Johnston—with impersonating officers and with extortion have been issued, but the men have not yet been arrested.

"The three were taken into custody last Octobr, but the proceedings were dropped when Village Attorney Reich agreed he would force them to resign. Apparently he has failed.

"Hayman will appear before Justice Applegate at Harvey on Monday morning. Attorneys representing the state's attorney's office and several automobile associations will be present to prosecute."

CENSUS TAKING TO SET RECORD, DIRECTOR SAYS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—Completion of the 1920 census in record time was predicted tonight by Director Sam L. Rogers. He said less than 100 of the 87,000 enumeration districts had reported inability to start canvassing because of unfavorable weather. All persons not yet visited are requested to learn what the questions are and be ready to answer without delay.

"The so-called 'Reds' have not given the census enumerators any difficulty so far as the bureau is advised," Mr. Rogers said.

DEMOCRATS TO BE "TAXED" FOR CAMPAIGN FUND

Raise Many Millions by New System.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—If you are a Democrat you soon will be card indexed at Democratic national committee headquarters under these headings: "Occupation," "Worth about how much," "Degree of liberality and political activity," "Amount should give."

Having card indexed you and determined how much you should give toward the campaign to perpetuate the Democratic party in power the national committee will call upon you to contribute that amount without delay. If you do not comply promptly you will receive the committee's interesting series of "follow-up" letters, which will not cease until you "come across."

Raising Big Fund.

Adopting some of the methods that successfully floated the Liberty loans the national committee has set about raising the largest campaign fund in the history of the Democratic party. An immense letter writing and card indexing organization, occupying three floors of a large Washington office building, already is in operation under the direction of W. D. Jamieson of Iowa, the man who defeated Pete Hepburn for congress and who twenty-seven years ago was a typesetter on THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The Republicans are greatly excercised over the Democratic money raising campaign, asserting that Mr. Jamieson has set out to amass from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 and predicting that he will have $15,000,000 before he can stop the wheels of the machinery he has set in motion.

Names Coming In.

Mr. Jamieson began by sending to county and precinct committeemen blank forms for the listing of Democrats, together with the above information desired for the card index. It is planned to card index and assess between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 Democrats and the names are now coming in by the thousand.

HUSBAND SWUNG MALLET ON HIM, DR. BRAUNE SAYS

Seeks Alibi of Woman, but Dodges Shot.

Dr. Frank R. Braune hasn't smoothed out all his marital difficulties yet, though a month has gone by since he found his wife in their home at 3611 Wilton avenue with Edward J. Parr of 1617 Rice street and filed suit for divorce.

Mrs. Braune came back at him by saying the situation had been "framed" and charging him with infidelity, naming Mrs. Gertrude Cunniff of 1444 North Clark street.

Causes Cunniff's Arrest.

On Friday night the physician was fired upon and then slugged. Yesterday he swore out a warrant for Mrs. Cunniff's husband charging assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

"Friday night," said the doctor "I was informed that Mrs. Cunniff desired to talk to me at 61 West Burton place. Mrs. Cunniff, who had been a patient of mine, formerly lived there. I had made several attempts to obtain from her a written statement denying my wife's charges. I expected to obtain such a statement on Friday night.

Says Husband Fired at Him.

"As I entered the place I saw her husband. He fired at me, but missed, then struck me with a mallet and knocked me unconscious. When I recovered my senses he was still there. He told me I'd have to leave town—but I'm going to stay."

ALTER SPEEDWAY HOSPITAL PLANS TO HOUSE NURSES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Plans for the completion of the Speedway hospital near Chicago, which the secretary of the treasury was recently directed by congress for a third time to take over for the public health service, are being revised.

In view of the refusal of congress to appropriate any additional money for houses to accommodate physicians and nurses it is necessary to alter the plans so that three of the seven wings of the building will be fitted up for them.

Edward Hines, owner of the hospital, has told the treasury department that he will complete the structure for the total of $3,000,000 as provided in the appropriation, regardless of what changes may be made in the plans. He left for Chicago today.

SUES TOM CHAMALES.

$225,000 GIVEN TO EMPLOYES OF PACKING FIRM

Morris & Co. Forced to Dig Into Surplus.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Morris & Co. distributed $225,000 yesterday among 2,991 employés who have entered its profit sharing plan. The net earnings for 1919 were not sufficient to pay the 10 per cent guaranteed the participants, so the company dug down into its surplus to make good its promises. Diminished earnings during the year just closed are ascribed by the officials to the government's agitation against the packers and to the reduced prices of their inventory products. On beef, for instance, this year the packing industry has stood a loss.

The profit sharing plan, however, it was announced, will remain as a permanent thing. It is a combination thrift nad "wages dividend" system designed to give the workers a stake in the business and to establish closer human contact between the working force and the company.

Under it the company sets aside each year 5 per cent of its net earnings for distribution among employés entering the plan. The company some months ago issued 4½ per cent collateral gold bonds with a face value of $50, and multiples. Employés may purchase as many of the bonds as they desire in cash or on two years' installments. With each bond goes a profit sharing certificate. These are in amounts equal to the face of the gold bonds purchased, but they are not to run in excess of one-half the employés' salary.

Company Guarantees Profit.

The company guarantees that the net return on the worker's profit sharing certificate, including the interest on the bonds in an equal amount, shall be not less than 10 per cent on the investment.

The 2,991 employés entering the plan have subscribed for $1,918,000 of bonds. Forty-two per cent of the office force has gone in; 12 per cent of the packing plant; 22 per cent of the branch houses; and 18 per cent of the foreign branches.

At the outset last year the subscription price of each $50 bond was set at $43.25, which was below market value. An instance of how it worked out: An employé taking $432.50 of bonds on two years' installments began payment Sept. 1. At the close of the fiscal year, Nov. 1, he had paid in $37.44. Yesterday he got his 10 per cent on full amount, or $43.25, which was 116 per cent on his actual investment.

Outgrowth of Pension Plan.

The Morris & Co. profit sharing is the direct outgrowth of a pension system established ten years ago, the first in the stockyards. It is based on twenty years' service and optional retirement at 55 years, compulsory at 65 years. The pensioners receive 2½ per cent for each year of service of the salary received on the date of retirement. Employés pay 3 per cent of their wages into the fund.

This is how it works out: A man who has worked thirty years and earned $50 a week in his last year draws as pension $37.50 a week or $1,950 a year for the rest of his life. If his salary had averaged $35 a week for the period he would have paid $1,638 into the fund, or $312 less than he receives as a pension every year thereafter.

Employes Oversubscribe Stock.

Fairbanks, Morse & Co., who recently offered employés the right to subscribe for 12,500 shares of common stock on time payment, announced yesterday that already the applications double the amount offered. Over 1,400 workers, representing 21 per cent of the pay roll, have applied for 24,500 shares.

The American Sugar Refining company announces an employés' stock purchase plan on easier terms than in its former stock sales. Two years is allowed for payment, and amounts as low as $1 a week will be received.

THE AEOLIAN COMPANY

THE CONSUMMATE COMBINATION
The Vocalion and the Vocalion Record

The Vocalion has endeared itself to music lovers as the phonograph that plays all records with greater meaning. But ordinary records, even at their best, fall short of perfection. Now that limitation has been removed and the Vocalion, a great phonograph has been made greater. Vocalion records covering the whole range of music are available. Vocalion records played on the Vocalion closely approach musical perfection.

Mandel Brothers

The Aeolian-Vocalion—the greater phonograph

—has a tone of superior richness and volume, with more of the artist-original and less of the phonograph. The case designs are of pronounced distinction. The Vocalion plays records of all standard makes.

The Vocalion's crowning feature is the Graduola—an exclusive, patented, tone-regulating device, through which you may put your own expression into the music, as the record is played. The Graduola is part of the equipment of all Vocalions at $165 and up.

Vocalion prices, $60 to $350. Convenient terms of payment may be arranged. Other phonographs will be taken in exchange.

Comprehensive stocks of Vocalion and Columbia records.

Comment

We deliver south to 79th St., north to Glencoe, and west to Oak Park and Austin—schedule on application. Mail orders will be filled on day of receipt

We have attractive items especially low priced in our fruit department—something new every day.

Lady Clementine Brand Canned Fruits

Few people realize that there are more than just one or two grades of fruit put up in tins. There are not less than seven, the grading being based on the quality of the fruit itself and the character of the syrup used. Lady Clementine fruits are individually selected and put up in a syrup heavier and richer than that used for the usual first quality. This is done especially for this store, according to our own specifications. As a result we have, we believe, fruits that cannot be equaled anywhere for delicacy, no matter what price is paid.

CLUBS SHOW KEEN COMPETITION FOR SILVER SKATES

Greatest Ice Racing in Chicago Expected.

With two weeks remaining before THE TRIBUNE's fourth annual senior silver skates derby and second annual junior silver skates derby are held at Humboldt park, all indications point to the greatest ice racing ever seen in Chicago.

Owing to the ability of the entrants the competition in heats is sure to be just as keen as the struggle for the places in the final races. There are so many stars in both classes that it will be almost impossible for the clerk of the course to arrange heats which will not develop a race from start to finish.

Heats Studded with Speeders.

It generally has been the custom to place stars in heats with mediocre skaters, so that the fastest skaters would be brought together in the final race. This year it may be necessary to place two or more of the best skaters in the same heat, and they then will have to fight it out to finish in one of the qualifying positions.

As the entries do not close until Jan. 20, the number of heats to be held in each race and the number to qualify in each event will not be determined until after the nominations have closed. If the field is so large that it would be inadvisable to place more than fifteen skaters in the final race, semi-final contests will be held in order to cut the field.

Semi-finals Almost Assured.

Considering the rate the entries are being received, and allowing for the number which should be received up to closing time, it is safe to say semi-finals will be necessary. Allowances are made for the number of skaters who enter and do not put in an appearance to race. If semi-finals are necessary they will be held over the qualifying distances of one-half mile in the junior race and one mile in the senior.

Club rivalry is beginning to assert itself more strongly than in any previous derby. Alverno A. A., with Grieb, Berrigan and Topper as the aces; Norwegian-American A. A., with the Steinmetz brothers and Roy Mobeck as mainstays, and Lightning A. C., with Nick and Paul Quirk as its stars, are laying early claim to the honors which go with the winning of the big race. Ray McWhirter of the Illinois A. C. must not be overlooked.

Junior Race Looks Open.

The junior race is an open event, and may be won by one of the many entrants of the playgrounds. George Thomson of Avondale is considered one of the best in the event, while Edward A. Reed of the Optimates Canoe club of Riverside and Morris Baker of the Norwegian-American A. A. are other likely candidates for the honors.

The Norwegian-American A. A., one of the strongest skating organizations in Chicago, is out to win this year's senior race in order to be the first club to have two winners. Brick Larsen skated under the colors of the Norwegian club when he copped the second silver skates race. From the inclusive entry received from the club, its skaters will make a strong bid for the honors.

Thirteen in Senior Race.

Charles B. Hansen, manager of the Norwegian-American A. A. skating team, has nominated thirteen for the senior race and four for the junior. Among nominations for the big event are Julian and William Steinmetz, Birger Birg, Roy Mobeck, Wallace Fee, Carl M. Nelson, Harry Juske, Nor Petersen, Oscar Lundgoot, and Christ Petersen.

Morris Baker, a skater of known ability, Lars Lundgoot, Morris Gunderson, and Fred Petersen are the club's entries in the junior race. Its skaters have competed with success in all derbies held this year, and all will make strong bids to qualify.

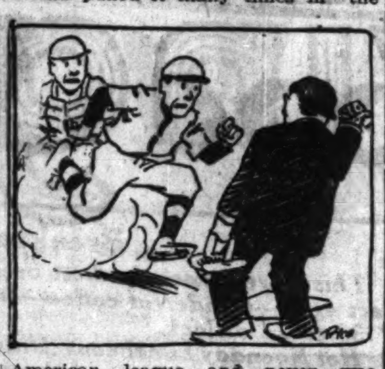
Entries close Jan. 20, and those desiring to enter are requested to clip out the coupon on the sporting page and send it to THE TRIBUNE. The junior race is open to boys under 17 years of age, but they must live in Illinois or adjacent states. The senior event is open to all, regardless of age or residence. The final in the junior event will be one mile and the deciding contest in the big event two miles.

OLD JACK SHERIDAN REGULAR EAGLE EYE, SAYS TRIS SPEAKER

"YOU know they used to say old Jack Sheridan was losing his eyesight in those closing years of his career as American league umpire, but a lot of ball players will declare he could see everything, which included a lot that the others missed."

It was Tris Speaker talking about umpires in general when he happened to recall an incident of the world's tour of the White Sox and Giants. Speaker was a member of the party. So was Sheridan.

"Old Jack caught me in a trick I tried in a game at Sidney, Australia. I had pulled it many times in the American league and never was caught. I've pulled it since in regular games, but Sheridan grabbed me in a hurry that day.



"I was trapped between second and third base and was sneaking along toward third with Mike Doolan chasing me with the ball. I kept looking over my shoulder, and when he chucked the ball to the third baseman I hunched my shoulder just enough to make it hit me. The ball caromed off into foul ground and I raced home, but as I was coming into the plate Sheridan was there calling me out with voice and gesture.

"'Why am I out?' I demanded.

"'Because John Sheridan called you out,' was his decisive reply.

"Well, of course I kicked and hollered, but he shut me up in a hurry when he came back with:

"'You're out for interference. Don't think I didn't see you using that shoulder.'

"A fellow may get away with the trick against some of the young umps. They may have keen eyesight but still not see a lot of things old Jack saw. Anyway, he was the only one whoever caught me."

JERSEY CITY WILL GET FIGHT, SAYS DESCAMPS

BORDEAUX, Jan. 10.—Georges Carpentier knocked out "Blink" McCloskey at the beginning of the second round of their fight here tonight.

At the conclusion of the fight M. Descamps, manager of Carpentier, announced to the audience that he had telegraphed this morning to Jack Dempsey's manager that the Dempsey-Carpentier fight would take place in New Jersey Sept. 6 (Labor day).

COFFROTH NOT SURE HE'D HOLD BOUT IN MEXICO

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 10.—There is a possibility that James W. Coffroth, even should he succeed in obtaining contracts from Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, will not stage the bout in Tia Juana, Lower California, though that is the place he has in mind, according to a personal letter from Coffroth.

After estimating the crowds the match would draw in New Jersey, Connecticut and Baltimore, Coffroth wrote: "You will see there is a possibility of the contest going to some other place than Tia Juana, but at the present writing that is the place I have in mind."

BIG ROW IN A. L. BITTER FLAREUP OF OLD FUSSES

Mays Case Long Awaited Signal for Action.

Nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every 1,000 baseball fans believe the present domestic row in the American league grew out of the Mays case, whereas that celebrated controversy was merely the boiling point of a tempest which had been raging in the teapot for years.

Primarily the casus belli was the difference in opinion between President Johnson of the league and President Frazee of the Boston Red Sox, over the suppression of gambling at Fenway park. When the Red Sox magnate broke into the national pastime, having had experience only in the theatrical line of amusements, he could not see why his prospective gate receipts should be reduced by the exclusion of a bunch of gamblers who flocked by themselves and trimmed nobody but suckers.

Magnates Short Sighted.

Frazee could not foresee that the toleration of the easy money fraternity at his ball park would culminate in a scandal over a world's series which will injure baseball for many years to come. Neither could the National league understand that in using the whitewash brush on Hal Chase the result was inevitable.

President Johnson has been an implacable enemy of the gamblers in their efforts to make a soft living out of professional baseball. That was the original cause of the friction that sprung up immediately on Frazee's entrance into baseball between the Boston club owner and the head of the league. That was one of the reasons why Carl Mays was not properly disciplined when he quit the Red Sox cold in the middle of a game at Comiskey park and demanded to be traded to a team which had a chance to cut in on part of the world's series receipts.

Yankees Given Warning.

It already has been established in the New York courts in connection with the familiar injunction proceedings that the Yankee club owners were warned in advance of their dicker for Mays against making a trade for the recalcitrant hurler. For reasons best known to themselves, the Boston and New York clubs defied the wishes of President Johnson and permitted Mays to get away with his bluff. The result, if the injunction against his suspension is upheld by the high courts, will affect the pocketbooks of every club owner in both major leagues.

The suspension of Mays made the New York club owners into bitter antagonists of President Johnson, and intensified the enmity of Frazee. They were joined by President Comiskey of the White Sox, who had been antagonistic to Johnson for fifteen years.

Ban and Commy Once Pals.

The original cause of the split between Johnson and Comiskey, who were co-authors of the American league, joint conspirators in the war of 1900-1902 with the National league and the firmest of friends for years, is shrouded in some mystery. The break occurred nearly fifteen years ago, and came to a head through the suspension by Johnson of one of Comiskey's players during an important series in the fall of an interesting pennant race.

For a while the White Sox owner was avowedly and bitterly antagonistic to the head of the league, but at the request of the other seven club owners he became a party to a public reconciliation at one of the annual meetings. This ostensible renewal of their old friendship deceived no one intimately acquainted with them, but produced a superficial harmony, which existed in the American league for quite a stretch of years.

Belligerents Unite.

Recent events have demonstrated what those on the inside knew perfectly well—that Comiskey was merely biding his time until he would not have to conduct a solo battle against Johnson. The Mays case gave the White Sox owner two fellow belligerents, and he immediately grasped the opportunity to declare his real feelings, which had been suppressed for so many seasons.

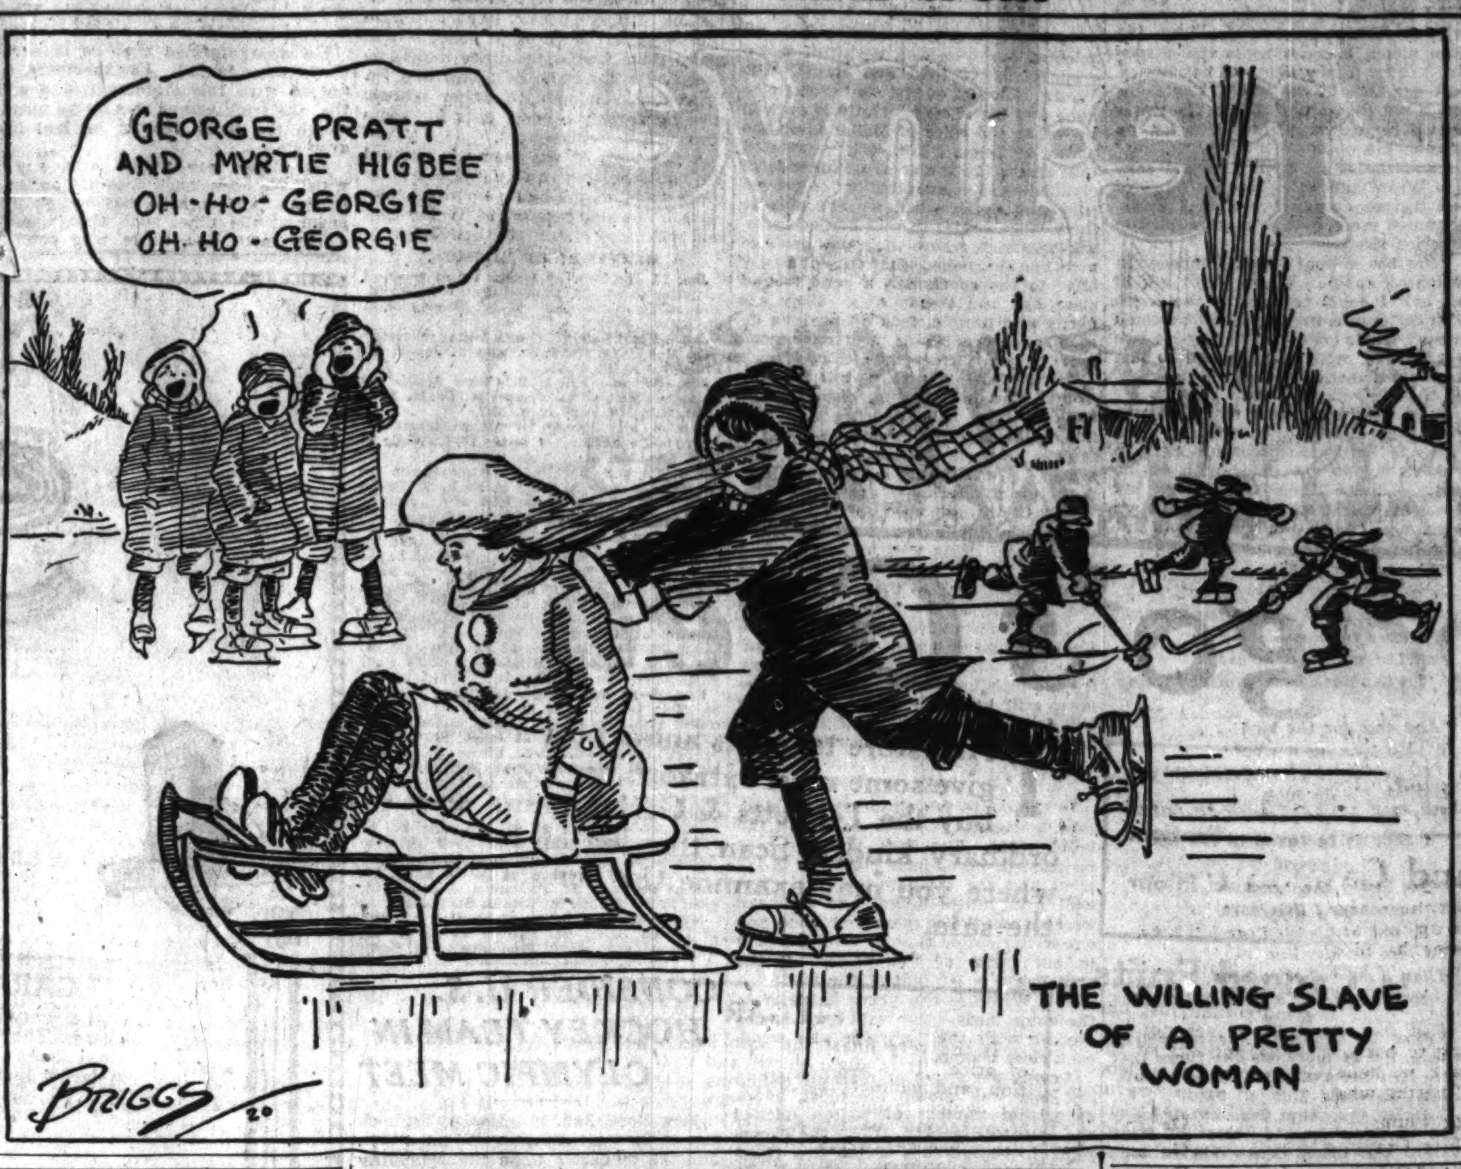
The three opposition clubs, constituting a minority, have not been able to accomplish much outside of the New York courts, but the addition of a fourth opponent to President Johnson would produce a deadlock and place the American league in the ludicrous and unenviable position occupied by the National league in the days of the famous Brush-Spalding factions of nearly twenty years ago.

SPEED MARTIN HITCHES ONTO CUB PAY ROLL

Word came from President Veeck of the Cubs yesterday that "Speed" Martin had signed his contract to pitch for the north side team next season. Veeck is at Pasadena, Cal., partly on a pleasure trip and partly to arrange some spring dates for the Cubs. While there he saw Martin and obtained his signed contract.

According to reports, it wasn't a hard matter, because Martin made a big mistake three years ago and doesn't intend to repeat it. At that time he belonged to the White Sox, but refused to sign the contract offered. He spent the season on the coast while the Sox won the American league pennant and the world's championship, each player thereby gathering a bonus of about $3,600. Speed thinks the Cubs may turn the trick next season.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



COCHRAN CABLES CARPENTIER ON FIGHT CONTRACT

New York, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Charles B. Cochran, English boxing promoter, who is in this country seeking to arrange a world's heavyweight championship boxing match between Jack Dempsey, the title holder, and Georges Carpentier, European champion, expects either Monday or Tuesday to announce definitely whether Dempsey's manager, Jack Kearns, is willing to accept his offer of $200,000 for the title holder. Cochran made this statement tonight.

The negotiations which he started upon his arrival here, carried on from the start through an unidentified third party, have progressed to such an extent that an acceptance or declination is now expected.

Sends Cable to Descamps.

With the disclosure Cochran also gave out a cablegram he sent today to Francois Descamps, Carpentier's manager, in Paris, requesting the French idol's representative to immediately deny the cabled reports which have reached this country that Cochran's option on the European's services expires Jan. 15.

Cochran said he sent the cablegram because of stories in which Manager Descamps was quoted as saying his contract for a Dempsey bout under the promotion of Cochran expired Jan. 15 unless Dempsey had been signed by that time.

No direct word has been received from Carpentier's manager, the English promoter said, but despite this fact he accepted the situation as one demanding a denial in order that Cochran's position might be authoritatively defined.

Has Advanced Money on Bout.

The cablegram was as follows: 'Papers here quote you as saying yonr contract with me for Dempsey expires Jan. 15. Please deny this immediately. I have made first payment under contract due on or before Feb. 15, and shall make further payments as they come due. I hold you to your contract, and you have no right to enter into any other negotiations."

In an explanatory statement Cochran detailed his reasons for the action and inferred that he is prepared to seek legal assistance, if necessary, in order to keep Descamps to the agreement both have entered into.

"As my contract with Descamps for the Dempsey match has been the subject of so much publicity," Cochran's statement read, "it might be of interest to state that the next payment under its provisions which I am called upon to make is on June 1 next.

Satisfied with Contract.

"I might add that M. Descamps and Georges Carpentier were both delighted with the terms of the contract at the time they signed it.

"Of course, I am not in a position to say," stated Cochran, "but it seems to me that if the many offers reported to have been cabled abroad contained an element of truth or were well founded it is peculiar that they have been neither accepted nor declined. This would force one to question the genuineness of the offers.

"My agreement with Carpentier does not specify any time limit in which I am to secure Dempsey's signature to a contract for the bout, but provides for a championship match on a date next year which I am not prepared to disclose."

Confident of Success.

Cochran's attitude reflected confidence that he would secure the match before he left this country for England. He plans to remain here for at least two weeks before returning to his home. In that time, however, he does not expect to have personal dealings with Manager Jack Kearns on behalf of Champion Dempsey.

The English promoter said all his negotiations for Dempsey's part of the match will continue to be carried on through a third party, whose identity is not disclosed.

In the Wake of the News

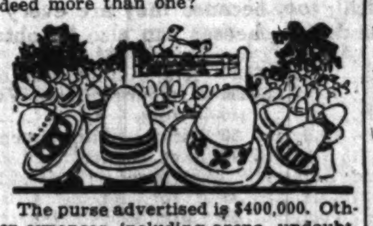
GEORGES VS. JACK.

IN the first place, the rumored location for the much heralded Carpentier-Dempsey fight is Mex. The size of the purse, $400,000, sounds like a bandit raid. The Wake is not naturally suspicious, but it feels instinctively that there is something queer about this world title bout location.

The natural place for the bout is England or France. Over there, they think the European champion has a chance to slip the finis wallop to the conqueror of Jess Willard. The bout, therefore, would draw a crowd, a crowd that would pay big money to see the gladiators.

In this country scarcely any one gives the lighter Frenchman a chance to defeat the hard hitting Dempsey. Dempsey here is respected solely for his pugilistic ability—his ability to thump an opponent into unconsciousness. He has no war record—except in the shipyards—and therefore is not a national hero as is Carpentier abroad.

Under these conditions, how many persons would travel to Tia Juana to see what most critics believe would be a contest of only a few rounds, if indeed more than one?



The purse advertised is $400,000. Other expenses, including arena, undoubtedly would bring the cost to $600,000. At Toledo, where Willard received $100,000 and Dempsey $27,500, the expenses ran over $400,000. The receipts were less than $500,000 in a city centrally located. Moreover, the betting was practically at evens, indicating a good healthy difference of opinion regarding the merits of the two men.

Tia Juana, brothers, doesn't look like the real dope.

Cuba Libra.

"We are flooded with offers of low priced booze," writes a personal friend from Havana to The Wake. "The supply far exceeds the demand and I am afraid many American holders will be disappointed.

"Incidentally, Havana is crowded to its limit. Prices of rooms are almost prohibitive. Visitors from the states are coming earlier than usual, perhaps to slake their thirst, perhaps to play the ponies. Food, however, is rather cheaper than in the states."

Vanitie to Be Fitted for Trial as Lipton Defender

Bristol, R. I., Jan. 10.—Alexander S. Cochrane has ordered his sloop Vanitie to Bristol from New York, to be fitted out for a trial next spring against the Resolute to determine the American contender against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV., in the prospective America's cup races. The Resolute, owned by a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan, is now in dock here awaiting overhauling.

WHITING SQUAD RUSHES PURPLE FIVE TO DEFEAT

After the first ten minutes were passed in a nip and tuck scramble over the floor, Whiting Red Crowns forged ahead of Northwestern university by their rapid fire, five man floor attack and defeated the Purple, 47 to 24, at Patten gymnasium last night. Marquardt and Driscoll of past Northwestern teams aided in the undoing of the Purple.

First one, then the other led by a point in the whirlwind rush which started the game, but when Whiting's consistent team tactics began to tell the score mounted and Red Crowns led at the intermission, 25 to 16. Feeney was intermediary between the smooth passing attack and the hoops for most field goals, but the whole Whiting team featured in the way it revolved the ball in short passes the length of the floor to the goal. Sinking baskets at a dizzy pace in the closing minutes, the University of Chicago basketball team defeated Iowa, 37 to 18, last night in Bartlett gymnasium. It was the opening game of the 1920 season for Chicago, and if the exhibition was an indication of what the season holds the Big Ten conference is undergoing a serious effort to rid the popular indoor sport of the rugged features which have given it the reputation of being as rough as football.

All through the first half the officials pounced on the players and called repeated fouls, often on delicate technicalities that were not obvious to the crowd. The big throng, which filled the gym to the rafters, was in a constant uproar booing and hissing the officials.

Pat Page Says a Few Words.

Between the halves Coach Pat Page of Chicago made a speech. He said: "We are trying to rid basketball of the bad name that it has received, and the coaches have asked the officials to be strict. This is 1920 basketball, and, whether you like it or not, you must learn to do so, because this is the way it is going to be played."

Iowa jumped into an early lead, chiefly because Shimek started to sink his free throws with accuracy, but when he began to slump in the penalty tosses the Maroons forged ahead, leading, 16 to 9, at the half. Hinkle and Crisler sank four baskets in less than a minute in the middle of the second half, and after that the game was a rout.

Williams Ousted for Fouls.

Vollmer scored five of the Maroons' baskets, while Hinkle, Crisler, and Birkhoff carried on the battle on the floor. Capt. Nicolaus was the only Iowa man to shine. Williams of the Maroons was ousted for fouling and Vollmer of Chicago and Finlayson of Iowa drew six combined personal and technical fouls under the new régime. Birkhoff of the winners counted eleven out of fourteen free throw chances.

In a curtain raiser the Chicago substitutes lost to Northwestern college of Naperville, 17 to 16, in the closing minute. Lineup:

Badger Five Finds Gobs Easy Foe; Score, 33-15

Madison, Wis., Jan. 10.—The Badgers seemed to strike their stride tonight and had no trouble trimming the Gobs from Great Lakes, 33 to 15. The Badgers scored 22 points during the first half while the Jacks managed to annex 6. Knapp starred for the Badgers in the forward wall and Weston garnered first honors with his terrific guarding. Brown, captain and center for the Gobs played most of their game, getting 9 out of the 15 points.

ENGLAND THINKS OLYMPIC GAMES IN 1920 ERROR

Not Time Enough to Organize, Say Leaders.

In the absence of a definite statement from the British Olympic council on the subject of preparation for the Olympic games at Antwerp this year, an English writer has obtained the opinions of three distinct personalities on athletics generally and the Olympic games in particular. These three are Lieut. Col. Arnold N. S. Jackson, an English officer and well known athlete; Sargent Linton Hewitt, a soldier who, prior to the war, had done much for athletics in Australia, and Charles B. Cochran, an English promoter of professional sports.

All three believe, he says, that the international Olympic committee, made a great mistake in deciding to hold games this year, and that it will be impossible to reorganize the sport in sufficient measure to enable Great Britain to be adequately represented at Antwerp. In order to save the British prestige from the injury it sustained at Stockholm it will be necessary to spare no effort in securing the best possible team and make a united attempt to improve the British athletic standing.

Must Build for Future.

With this object in view he writes:

"All three agree that up to now the attempts at organizing Olympic teams have been a failure, and that to get the best of our goods on show at Antwerp next year we must strike out on fresh lines. Also there is a general idea that instead of leaving the organizing side, and especially the financial end of it, in the hands of a scratch collection, we should call in the best brains of the nation, the best business men, to assist in devising a sound plan of campaign, one on which we can build, not merely for the 1920 games, but for the future.

"It is generally agreed that the very first thing needful to the organization of an efficient Olympic team for Antwerp is money, and plenty of it. As to the directions in which the money should be applied, and even how it should be raised, there are divergent opinions, but money must be found. I am very much of Mr. Cochran's opinion that money could be found by exploiting the public taste for sport itself."

Advises Publicity Campaign.

The writer suggests a publicity campaign which would have the effect of interesting the great business men of the country in the preparations. He says that every one should do all that is consonant with their principles as sportsmen. In conclusion he says, "I believe in advertisement and if the games can do nothing else they can give us that, as they have America, and it is just as well to have a good one."

At a recent meeting of the British Olympic council, after consultation with the various governing bodies of sport in the United Kingdom, it was decided to ask the Belgian Olympic committee for the following modifications in their draft problem:

To limit the stadium events to a period of three weeks from Aug. 20 to Sept. 10.

A considerable reduction in the number of entries allowed.

The addition of a 3,000 meter steeplechase, a 10 mile cross country run, and a 20 mile road walk to the contests and the elimination of bomb throwing.

To add a 500 meter swim and a fancy diving contest to the swimming events.

To add miniature rifle shooting, revolver shooting, and running deer shooting in that branch of sport.

To add the ladies' doubles to the lawn

CHICAGO LEAGUE IN GOOD START

The first round of play in the Chicago Billiard league was completed last week, leaving Augie Kieckhefer of the Recreation room, Burton of Forrest's Capron of Leffingwell's, Klatcher of Schuenemann's, Tredick of Burdick's, and Steffanson of Menk & Reading's the winners.

The losers were Ernie Lundgren, Jim Shea, Charley Morin, Le Gros, Raclin, and Charley Dougherty. All of the games have been well attended, and it looks as if the league would have the best season in its history. Tomorrow night Lundgren will play Steffanson at Lundgren & Sherwood's.

Woods and Waters

CANDIDATES FOR THE ARK.

WHICH game fishes, game birds, and game animals are the most popular among sportsmen? We have often wondered, so when Dec. 18 rolled around and found the world wagging on its way as usual, in spite of a prophecy to the contrary, we put this question to our readers:

"Supposing that the world was about to come to an end and you had an ark of some kind. Which one specie of game fish, game bird, and game animal would you save, above all others? Sort of a fool idea, we admit, but us grownups like to play 'supposin'' as well as the youngsters, and perhaps it may throw some light on an interesting question.

L. A. Gehr of Mercer, Wis., wastes no preliminary time in sparring but puts his whole story in a few words: "If I were going aboard that fireproof ark I would take Mr. and Mrs. Wall Eye Pike along, because he is the easiest fish known to propagate in hatcheries, best pan fish in the world, bar none, and if not the gamest fish in the water he will give you plenty of sport on light tackle.

"For the game birds I would take Bob White and wife, because he lives and thrives everywhere and, I think, is hunted more than any game bird in America today.

"For the animal I would choose the cottontail rabbit. When I got out of the ark I could repopulate the earth with cottontails in six months. I could put my whole collection in a space two feet square, with enough feed to last them six months."

It is surprising how many women read this little old column of ours. There is hardly a discussion here in which they do not enter with enthusiasm. Mary Ellen Dorr gives her three favorites, and, as you shall see later, she comes pretty close to the consensus:

"The gamest of fish
Is a fish for a dish
To be eaten by pauper or king;
If I were to choose
For Larry's good news
'Tis the black bass' praises I'll sing.

"And now for the bird
Who is due for a word
Of praise from this feeble old pen.
I think I'm in luck
If I eat a fat duck
I shot on the wing in the fen.

"'Tis lastly the beast
Whose chase I like least,
So few of his kind are left here.
I'd fain let him live
Than a sure shot to give
In the heart of a beautiful deer."

Frank D. Reading, Chicago, picked wisely, for he mentions the three that were the choice of most of our contributors. He says:

"As for the game fish, my choice is that so aptly named 'tiger of fresh water,' the black bass. He is, inch for inch and ounce for ounce, the gamest fish that swims. Wary, tricky, and resourceful, he proves a worthy antagonist when hooked and will pit all of his tricks against your skill, insuring plenty of thrills ere you bring him to gaff. He is equally at home in lake or river and occasionally you find him in old stone quarries or spring filled clayhole.

"His habitat extends from New England to the Pacific. He is not partial to any one bait but will strike a fly, plug, pork rind, spoon, or minnow with a smash that is a joy to remember. Even Friend Wife and son can make him bite when they let a live shiner or clump of worms down into a deep bass hole. Last, but not least, is his value from an edible standpoint. When prepared by an experienced camp cook and served crisp, brown, and piping hot, with still a tang of the camp fire clinging to him, he is indeed a tidbit.

"Aided by a wee bit of prejudice, we selected our trim and beautiful feathered friend of field and forest, Bob White. His list of virtues is second to none and his cheery whistle is as well known in the wilds of Maine as on the plains of Texas. The only game bird that thrives in the encroaching tide of civilization, his adaptability is proved time and again when we are able to flush large covies in well settled farming countries, where their proximity to man has sharpened their wits and they offer to the sportsman a good test of clear eye and steady aim. They are hardy and prolific, feed on noxious insects and weed seeds, and offer good sport to both farmer and city dweller.

"Bob White is with us all the year 'round, and his hunting calls for the assistance of the sportsman's best friend, his dog—the hypothenuse of the famous triangle—'a man, a gun, and a dog.' In the dining room Bob White is the proud offering of any host.

"By the same process of elimination our choice finally rested on the white tailed deer. This well known denizen of all of America's forest area ranges from Hudson bay to the gulf and from the Atlantic to the Mississippi basin; also in the Sierra Nevada, Cascade, and Rocky mountains from Mexico to Canada. The white tail, with his adaptability and intelligence, aided by protective laws, still holds his own. No hunter will deny that the white tail is shrewd and possesses a keen scent and a sharp eye."

In the game fish class it was a close race between the black bass and the brook trout. The bass, however, was mentioned more times than the brook trout and the rainbow together. The wall eye, muskellunge, and bullhead were all mentioned more than once, and one writer stated that he wouldn't play in our game of "supposin'" if the angleworm is left out of the ark!

Bob White is the prime favorite in the game birds. The wild duck comes second, with the partridge and woodcock close behind.

Among the game animals the white tail deer was chosen the most, but a surprising number of writers picked the cottontail rabbit. With the exception of one mention of the fox, these were the only candidates offered. So there you have them: Bass, quail, and deer. Quite a formidable trio.

Coaches of Country Busy Training Men for Olympic

With the opening of the winter terms at all universities and colleges, coaches of the track and field teams not only have started to develop teams for the important indoor meets and the outdoor intercollegiates, but have started to groom their star athletes for the Olympic games in Antwerp next summer.

The passing of so many known performers, some of whom have turned professional, while others have outlived their days of usefulness, has made it imperative for the college coach to develop the men who must win points for the American team in the world's games. In other words, the colleges will have to be the feeding ground of this year's Olympic team.

Clubs to Reinforce Colleges.

It does not necessarily follow that our team will be composed entirely of college men. There still are many athletes competing under the colors of various athletic clubs who cannot be counted out of places on the Yankee team, and they can be depended upon to come through when the games are held.

It always has been an American track and field custom to develop well rounded teams. Our smart track and field coaches, such as Keene Fitzpatrick of Princeton, Lawson Robertson of Pennsylvania, Johnny Mack of Yale, Pooch Donovan of Harvard, Steve Farrell of Michigan, Martin Delaney, Chicago Athletic association, and Harry Gill of Illinois, place just as much emphasis on the man who can win a point by finishing fourth in a contest, as the star who is sure of first place.

Need Seconds and Thirds.

A careful study of the material available for this year's team shows that performers of sterling ability can be picked for the first string, but it is in the selection of men who will win second, third, and fourth places that the Olympic committee is going to have its troubles.

The team must be so balanced that where a foreign country is sure to win an event, our aggregation must be strong enough to offset this by scoring in the other places. There must be enough men on the team to make it imperative to run heats, so that chances of getting the break in the draws for heats will be possible.

With the thought in mind of developing a well rounded team, the Olympic committee must look to the colleges. Most of the coaches are aware it is as much an honor for them to have their charges selected as for the athletes themselves. The interallied games are still fresh in the minds of most athletes, some of whom took part, while the great majority are anxious to make the team and have the opportunity to visit the battlefields of the great war.

Pointed for Outdoor Competition.

A number of well known college athletes passed through Chicago on their way home to spend the holidays. These performers represented leading institutions in the east, and it was the general opinion of all that the track teams will be pointed to the outdoor intercollegiates almost from the start of the indoor season.

Sherman Landers, the great Pennsylvania all-around athlete, looks for a fine year with the Red and Blue. He asserted Penn will be represented by an almost invincible team, and if the men are in shape on the last Saturday in May, when the eastern intercollegiate is held, his team should win the title.

Will Try for Jump Record.

Landers is going to confine most of his work to the running hop, step and jump when the outdoor season opens. Last summer, the Penn athlete was jumping close to the world's record, and with practices in this event alone he believes he can establish a new mark. During the indoor season Landers will confine his work to the low hurdles, 300 yard run, and pole vault.

Smith, the Cornell hurdler, is another eastern athlete who is looking forward to the Olympic games with a deal of interest. The Ithacan was considered the best high hurdler in the east last year, and expects to run the sticks in close to record time. He said Cornell also will be represented by a great team this season.

Krogness Already Training.

Krogness, the Harvard hurdler and high jumper, started to train before the holidays. The Crimson star is bent on making the American Olympic team, and is leaving nothing undone to get into shape early and stay in the pink of condition. He believes the American team will be unbeatable at Antwerp if the proper men are chosen.

Carl Johnson, captain of this year's Michigan team, considered the greatest athlete who ever wore a Maize and Blue track suit, will start work immediately in his specialties. He is a great indoor performer, being able to run the high and low hurdles, sprints, and high jump for the desired results. Of course he would not be able to do all this in an open meet, but in dual affairs he is a most valuable man.

After Broad Jump Mark.

Coach Steve Farrell has his mind set on Johnson's breaking the running broad jump mark. When Farrell makes up his mind that an athlete has record breaking ability he generally is right, and when the outdoor season opens, Johnson will confine all his work to broad jumping.

While the college coaches are busily engaged, the club mentors are laying their plans for the National and sectional A. A. U. championships both indoor and outdoor. Like the college teachers, those in charge of the club teams will be expected to contribute their share of men to the team.

CONSIDER U. S. HOCKEY TEAM IN OLYMPIC MEET

New York, Jan. 10.—Hockey authorities of the United States will meet here Jan. 18 to decide upon the feasibility of sending an American seven to Antwerp for the Olympic hockey championship scheduled early in April. It is thought there will be little difficulty assembling a powerful combination from Boston, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York, and the cities of the great lakes.

Efforts are being made by American Olympic authorities to ascertain under what conditions the championship will be decided at Antwerp, and whether natural or artificial ice will be available.

Playing rules and which nations will be represented are also items which need explication before Amarican authorities can definitely pass on the project. It is known that there are fast sevens playing in Switzerland and the Scandinavian countries.

GOSSIP FOR THE PLAYERS OF WHIST

BY A. R. METCALFE.

WHEN Abel remarked: "One peek is as good as a dozen finesses," Cain beat him to death. But a bad joke cannot be killed and the poor thing is still repeated daily throughout the land.

Apart from the dubious ethics of peeking, it really does not pay. Although a trick may be gained occasionally by seeing the hands of an incautious adversary, the confirmed peeker loses in the long run, by taking his attention from the real problems of the game. Also, his efforts are certain to be observed by some one at the table and his reputation will suffer in consequence.

During the last week a gentleman said to the writer: "I wanted the declarer to finesse and knew he would if I hesitated. I did, and he did. What do you think of it?"

He was informed that he deserved thirty days in jail. Unexpectedly, he agreed with this statement, and said that the trick gained was by no means worth the mean feeling he had had ever since.

No player can afford any action which his conscience does not entirely approve. Although he may escape criticism at the time, such things leave a bad taste and those who commit them are avoided by the right kind of players.

West secured nine tricks.

At trick five, south should have discarded the eight of hearts and north the eight of diamonds, but north and south were of those who regard an eight with something of the sacred awe with which the ancient Egyptian regarded the doodlebug. With them, the discard of an eight would mean strength in that suit. The negative inference from not discarding the suit at all was protection in hearts. North, therefore, kept all his winners and discarded the game.

Such occasions are common, but the correct reason for the loss is seldom given. When players learn to use the natural discard — weakness — except when an echo is given, they will find it is never necessary either to lose tricks or to deceive one's partner.

'SLIM' CALDWELL IS MYSTERY MAN OF HURLING SLAB

Evans Says He Fooled All by "Comeback."

BY BILLY EVANS.
(American League Umpire.)

The season of 1919 was replete with baseball sensations. Perhaps uppermost in the mind of fandom was the overthrow of the Chicago White Sox by the Cincinnati Reds in the big series. Baseball critics "flivvered" on that, as the White Sox were big favorites to win. The work of veteran Eddie Cicotte, whose pitching largely made possible a Chicago American league victory, was a feat extraordinary, since Cicotte has reached the age where too much work was liable to hurt him. Yet he thrived on hard work last year.

Then there was the mighty Babe Ruth with twenty-nine home runs to his credit, a feat that broke a home run record that had stood for about thirty-five years. After Ruth had broken Freeman's record of twenty-five home runs some statistician dug up some old dope and proved back in 1884 Williamson had made twenty-seven such clouts. Ruth immediately set out to dethrone Williamson and did so. These are just a few of the many things out of the ordinary that happened in baseball last year.

Caldwell's Reversal.

However, to my way of thinking, there was nothing more remarkable in the 1919 campaign of the two major leagues than the remarkable comeback of Pitcher Slim Caldwell. At the start of the season Caldwell was a member of the Boston Americans, having gone to that team from New York in a trade during the winter. With Boston he showed nothing to prove that he was the once great pitcher of the New York Americans. I worked a half dozen games which he pitched for Boston, but rarely did he look good. His arm seemed to be in bad shape. He had none of the sizzling speed that once was his one best bet.

Caldwell was trying to get by merely through his knowledge of pitching. That is a rather difficult thing to do. Boston finally decided that Caldwell was through. Much as I had always admired Caldwell's pitching ability, I felt that Boston had reached a correct conclusion. The fact that none of the other major league clubs was anxious to give Caldwell a chance seemed to indicate the opinion general that as a pitcher he was through. He was given an unconditional release by Boston.

"Slim" Appears as Indian.

I was ordered to Cleveland to officiate in a series of games. The day that I opened there it was announced that Speaker had signed Caldwell. I wager that a thousand times that day I was asked: "Will Caldwell help the Indians?" At that time Cleveland had an excellent chance to nose out Chicago if some pitching strength could be added. I didn't believe Caldwell would do the Cleveland club a bit of good, but I felt such an expression of opinion would do Caldwell a great injustice, work a handicap from the very start. I simply told all inquirers that if Caldwell was half as good as he once was he would do Cleveland a lot of good. Frankly I didn't believe it.

Then, to my way of thinking, came the big sensation of 1919. Caldwell had been resting a couple of weeks prior to joining the Cleveland club. I worked his first game in a Cleveland uniform. He beat the Athletics. He followed this up by pitching a beautiful game against Chicago, which he lost by a one run margin, through a tough break in luck. During the rest of the season, every game he worked was on a par with those two. His outstanding feat, however, was shutting out his former teammates, New York, without a hit or run. In that game Caldwell showed me as much stuff as he ever had. With two strikes on the batter, he always sneaked over a spitball, applying the saliva to the ball before he got on the rubber. I believe he struck out eight men.

Mystery Hurler of Game.

Caldwell's reversal of form, to me, is one of the mysteries of the year. I don't know whether it was a flash in the pan or not. I do know, however, that much of Cleveland's chances depend on what he shows in 1920. If he continues the pace he started, look out for the Indians.

Then there was the case of Roger Peckinpaugh. Never regarded as a .300 hitter, Peckinpaugh had the greatest season of his career. In former years the Yankee shortstop's real value to the team had always been figured from a defensive standpoint. Ball players in the American league insist there are no bad bounds for Peckinpaugh. He plays the hard and easy chances with a graceful nonchalance that makes it appear that any one capable of wearing a glove could play shortstop.

From the very outset of the 1919 campaign Peckinpaugh began to show great power on the offense. As a matter of fact, his superlative hitting was a strong factor in the great showing made by the Yankees in the first four months of the race. For weeks Peckinpaugh led the American league hitters. Late in the season he suffered a slump that lost him the leadership, and as a rather strange coincidence the moment he slumped in his batting the general play of the New York club seemed to suffer. Prior to the opening of the 1919 season no one gave the offensive power of Peckinpaugh the slightest consideration in summing up the chances of the New York club. But this spring his chances of repeating his 1919 performance at the bat cannot be underestimated in figuring the chances of the Yankees. Peckinpaugh's work was one of the big events of 1919.

What About Cicotte?

What about the Chicago Americans? In figuring the chances of Comiskey's team to repeat in the American league, one must take into consideration the work of Eddie Cicotte. At 35, Cicotte came through with one of the greatest years of his career. He largely carried the burden of the Chicago club's pitching on his shoulders. Can he, at an age when most pitchers are through in the big leagues, stand another gruelling season? There is no question but that the pitching problem is one that must be solved by Gleason if his club is to repeat. Three pitchers—Kerr, Williams, and Cicotte—can hardly be expected to again win a pennant, and then again they may turn the trick, despite the opinion of the critics to the contrary.

In the National league the Cincinnati club will receive much attention. If the club repeats and wins another pennant Pat Moran will be one of the best advertised managers in the game. If the club should fail, we will listen to stories about how lucky the club was to win in 1919. Moran's pitching staff was an outstanding feature in the National league race.

YANKEES' TRIO OF HOME RUN HITTERS

Addition of Babe Ruth to Frank Baker and Walter Pipp Promises Shower of Four-Ply Swats Over Short Right Field Wall at the Polo Grounds.

FRANK BAKER

BABE RUTH

WALTER PIPP

When the New York baseball fan goes out to the Polo grounds next season to see the Yankees play ball he'll be disappointed if he doesn't see at least one or more home runs. With the addition of Babe Ruth to a team alreay harboring two or three home run hitters of fame, the New York fan is likely to see a home run swat almost every time he goes to a game.

Ruth swatted 29 homers last season. The Boston team, of which he was a member, got a total of only 33. The New York team had a total of 45 four basers, leading all other teams in that respect. The reason was the presence of Frank Baker and Walter Pipp, two sturdy left handed swingers who often poled the ball over the short right field wall.

Ruth also poles 'em left handed, and if he can pole one clear over the right field bleacher at Comiskey park and clear into the right field bleacher in Boston, it looks as if he need only bunt the ball to get plenty of 'em over the wall at the Polo grounds.

Baker last season gathered ten four base drives and Pipp accumulated seven. Roger Peckinpaugh, who hits right handed and generally to the left field, also had seven. With Ruth performing, it seems not unlikely that the New York Yankee fans may see about seventy home runs during the 1920 season.

"Home Run" Wallop Inoculated R. H. Hunter with Golf Fever

A "HOME run feeling," engendered by a long swat which sailed skyward and then sped on down the course, was the golfing virus which inoculated the system of Robert H. Hunter, former president of the Chicago District Golf association and present director of the Chicago Athletic association.

This happened twenty years ago one fall afternoon at the old Auburn Park Golf club, where Mr. Hunter had been invited by Harry Thomas. This initial drive did the trick and, although followed by dubs, sclaffs, pulls, slices, and even misses, their disappointments were overbalanced by the joy of the opening shot.

Mr. Hunter's hitting muscles had been educated by playing prairie baseball in summer, while in winter he was a member of the Spalding indoor team, which numbered among its members Jack Campion and the Sweeney brothers.

With M. W. Borders, John Grassell, and Frank Storey, converts at about the same period, Mr. Hunter made up a quartet which was prominent among the sunrise golfing contingent at Jackson park.

A little later Mr. Hunter joined the Calumet Golf club, which organization, he believes, contained the most enthusiastic crowd of players in Chicago. Despite the smoky conditions, which at times made a gas mask desirable, the amount of golf played there was remarkable.

Seven years ago Mr. Hunter joined the Exmoor Country club and is one of the leaders in its multifold activities.

Mr. Hunter believes that par is the modern will-o'-the-wisp and just as hard to catch. He attributes most of his mistakes to intense study of the game. His early form was that of the school from which Joe Badenoch, George J. L. Janes, president of the Beverly club, and Pop Herendeen are graduates.

Mr. Hunter has played on many courses in this country, but on a trip to England last year had time for only one round, that being at Stoke Pogis, the town in which the ancestors of William Penn lived.

PICK'S SALARY CLAIMS AGAINST CUBS REJECTED

Cincinnati, Jan. 10.—The national baseball commission in a finding promulgated today disallowed the salary claim of Player Charles Pick against the Chicago Cubs for $650. Pick contended the sum was due him as additional salary last season by reason of a verbal agreement he stated he had made with Manager Mitchell.

Player Frank Truesdale was declared a free agent, but his claim for two months' salary for the season of 1918 from the Boston Americans was disallowed.

Pitcher Wheeler Fuller was declared to be a free agent when he negotiated his services with the Washington Americans during the season of 1919. Secretary Farrell of the National association claimed Fuller was the property of Waterbury and requested the commission to award him to that club.

MAJOR PREXIES GO A-HUNTING

Presidents Johnson and Heydler of the American and National leagues respectively, left yesterday for a hunting lodge in Louisiana, where they will spend the next week or more hunting and fishing and at odd times arrange major league schedules for next season. William Harridge, secretary to Johnson, was the only other member of the party. He will fuss over the baseball dates while Johnson and Heydler pursue game. The schedules will be submitted at the meetings of the American and National leagues in Chicago Feb. 10.

Golf

George O'Neil will open an indoor school on the tenth floor at Mandel Brothers. During his absence in California Cliff Booth, his assistant, will be in charge. Booth last season was at Idlewild. He saw service with the Eighty-eighth division in France, being in the balloon division. Booth expects to open the school Tuesday.

The annual meeting of the Western Golf association will be held on Saturday night at the Congress hotel. Around the rialto it is expected that the Skokie club will land the western amateur championship and that the open event will go to Olympia Fields.

George O'Neil and a party of Lake Shore golfers left last night for Pasadena to spend the winter. Two of the best players in the party are Ben E. Bensinger and A. D. Lasker. Other Lake Shore members will leave later, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Harold Foreman. Mrs. Foreman was a semi-finalist in the women's western championship at Detroit last summer.

Miss Elaine Rosenthal, former western champion, will leave this week for Palm Beach to compete in several of the Florida tournaments. Her sister, Mrs. Ernest F. Byfield, already is there.

It is practically assured that Leo Diegel, Michigan open champion, and one of the best of the home bred professionals, will be with the Lake Shore Country club next year as playing professional. Diegel finished second to Jim Barnes in the western open championship at Mayfield.

Flagstead Finds Justice of Peace Is a Ball Fan

Muskegon, Mich., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Ira Flagstead, outfielder of the Detroit tigers, while taking one of his daily trips to get in condition for the American league pitchers, shot a seagull. He told Justice Turner today it was an accident, and after discussing the Tigers' prospects for 30 minutes the court assessed him the costs and discharged him.

Sextons Take Another Indoor League Victory

John Sexton company indoor team advanced a peg in the Lake Shore league, defeating Brach Candy company, 19 to 3, at Lake Shore playground. The Sextons took the lead in the third inning and scored in each succeeding round. Score:

Sexton's ......0 0 3 4 3 4 5—19 21 0
Brach's ......0 0 0 0 0 1 2—3 9 0

Batteries—Molitor and Wolinski; Walleck and Nolin.

STAR SKI JUMPERS OF NATION TO LEAP IN TOURNEY AT CARY

At least thirty ski runners, including Anders Haugen of St. Paul, holder of the world's record at 213 feet, and Sverre Hendricksen of Virginia, Minn., holder of the amateur championship, will compete in the seventeenth annual tourney of the Norge Ski club at Cary, Ill., next Sunday.

With the hill in the best of shape and indications pointing to solid weather next week, the club officials are bending every effort to secure the best talent available. In addition to Haugen and Hendricksen, Lars Huggen of Chippewa Falls, professional champion in 1918, will be on hand, as will Henry and Carl Hall, the well known runners from Ishpeming, Mich.

Barney Reilly Coming.

Barney Reilly of Coloraine, Minn., amateur champion in 1913, 1915, and 1916, has notified the officials he will be on hand to make a comeback appearance. Einar Jensen, well known local jumper, will be a contestant, as will a number of other well known experts.

Six nominations have been received for the three mile cross country ski run for women and at least a dozen are expected on the day of the race.

"We intend to make this year's tourney the most successful of recent years," Secretary Arne Engedahl said. "The runners have been practicing since the hill was put in shape over a month ago, and I look for some spectacular work."

Special Train Accommodations.

Trains will leave from the Northwestern station at 9:30 and 10:45 a. m. next Sunday morning and at 12:30 o'clock in the afternoon. They will return immediately after the contests. Those desiring further information are requested to get in touch with Mr. Engedahl, 2512 North Springfield avenue. Phone Albany 5985.

BOXERS WILLING TO STEP OUT OF CLASS FOR FOES

Leonard Treads Thin Ice if He Boxes O'Dowd.

With the fininsh of a year of greater activity in the ring than for many cycles, the boxing guys are starting out as if they intended to eclipse all past performances in 1920. There is one notable feature that stands out at the present time in connection with plans for future affairs in the ring, and that is the announcement by several classy boxers that they intend to go out of their classes to meet opponents heavier than themselves.

There are a number of able scrappers who have been able to achieve success in taking this dangerous course, and there also have been a number who have found it disastrous. One of the fellows who took the chance and got away with it is Benny Leonard, lightweight champion. Benny, we all are willing to admit, is a wonderful fighter, a fighter who compares favorably with that wonderful Negro lightweight of other years, Joe Gans. In fact, in style, Benny to a great extent resembles Gans, who earned the title of "The Master."

Holds Own with Britton.

Benny's first effort in jumping out of his class to meet a heavier opponent of class was his matching with Jack Britton nearly a year ago in a New Jersey ring. They fought eight rounds and Leonard got no worse than an even break in the minds of most ringside critics. It so happens that Britton since then achieved the honor of knocking out Ted Lewis and annexing the welterweight crown. So, holding Britton even was certainly a feather in the cap of the lightweight champion. Since that time Leonard has fought other welterweights with varied success.

But there is no getting away from the fact that it is dangerous business, and Benny may realize that he is biting off more than he can chew if he goes through with a proposition which has been put up to him by eastern promoters. That proposition entails his hopping two notches in the weight scale, and fighting no less prominent a ring personage than another champion, the boss of the middleweights, Mike O'Dowd.

Running Dangerous Risk.

That sure is treading on thin ice. This match has not been closed, but Leonard is just the sort of chap who thinks that he could get away with it. If he did, all the world would hail him as the greatest wonder of the ring, but few of the smart critics think that Benny could beat O'Dowd. Many will say, and express their opinion with emphasis, that they think Mike would stop Leonard. Benny would be forced to concede fifteen or eighteen pounds for such a contest, and for a lightweight to do it it is taking a big chance of being knocked out.

Leonard might consider with wisdom the time Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, had the nerve to fight him in a Philadelphia ring. Kilbane thought he was good enough to meet Leonard on even terms, made the match and went through with it to his sorrow, for the lightweight champion knocked out the featherweight titleholder in three rounds. It was really easy picking for Leonard. Benny might profit by Kilbane's failure, and should think twice and then some before signing up for a combat with that husky O'Dowd person.

No Real Precedent.

The fact that Benny held Welterweight Jack Britton even doesn't indicate by a jugful that he could hold his own with O'Dowd. Neither does the fact that Jack Dempsey conceded something like forty-five pounds to Jess Willard and flopped him in three rounds mean that Benny could concede fifteen pounds to an opponent who holds a title. If Benny makes the match and is beaten he will have only himself to blame. It seems to us that Benny is too good a fighting card in his own class to handicap himself to the extent that would be necessary in the proposed bout.

We just get the information that Dick Loadman, the Buffalo banty, is another fellow who is anxious to hop out of his class for battles. Dick thinks he is the boy that can take Kilbane's featherweight title away from him. He wants a match with Cleveland Johnny, and the "platform" he has adopted for 1920 calls for an effort along those lines. Loadman and his manager, Hugh Shannon, think that Kilbane's day of supremacy is drawing to a close, and hammer the typewriter to that effect, therefore want a shot at Johnny.

HARD TO BE A CHAMP?

Georges Carpentier, European Title Holder, Being Feted by Theatrical Celebrities After His Knockout of Joe Beckett in One Round.

JACK DEMPSEY FACES, BOXING CARPENTIER MEETS PAIR OF FOES

New York, Jan. 10.—Apparently Jack Dempsey will have to fight two men when he meets Georges Carpentier for the world heavyweight championship, if the deductions of a London writer are correct. According to this authority Descamps, manager of Carpentier, possesses some sort of a mystic eye with which he cast a spell over Beckett in the recent battle in London, with the result that the French pugilist had an easy task in knocking out the befuddled Britisher.

Works Strange Influence.

In the words of the discoverer of this alleged dual combination which confronted poor Beckett during the seventy-four seconds he stool before Carpentier, the strange influence made its effects felt as follows:

"There were two personalities fighting Joe Beckett from the moment he entered the ring. Carpentier was one. The other was Descamps, his manager. Descamps is a very excitable man. He is a bundle of nerves, a typically French, overflowing personality, whose individuality oozes from every pore. He does not effervesce. He exudes.

"Descamps says that when Carpentier meets Jack Dempsey, Carpentier will win in six rounds. Watch Descamps. He is the man who is aiding Carpentier with all mental force. His mentality accompanies Carpentier into the ring every fight. He is his unseen, silent partner, and to him as much as to Carpentier is Beckett indebted for the blow on the jaw which finished the fight and took the championship of Europe out of his reach.

Descamps "Eyes" Beckett.

"What was Descamps doing as Beckett came into the ring? Those who were near him tell me he was watching Beckett intently. The fact is, he began to fight Beckett as soon as Beckett stepped into the ring. Beckett was constantly glancing round at Carpentier as he was getting his gloves adjusted. There you have the personality of Descamps beginning to work, impinging itself on Beckett's brain and beginning its task of confusing the English boxer's thoughts. Possibly Deschamps is not quite conscious of his own power, but it is there all the same. This projection of personality is not hypnotism, but it is to be seen operating everywhere.

"Descamps, they say, feels every defeat of Carpentier as a defeat for himself. If you took Descamps' mind to the analytical table you would find that he would make a first class medium. He is a psychic subject. His personality stands beside Carpentier in every match, for he has trained Carpentier's mind as well as his body. Carpentier acts as Descamps wills. That is why Beckett made the mistake at Holborn stadium. Carpentier alone he might have beaten. Carpentier and Descamps were too much for him."

Chicago alone may send 100 clubs. Milwaukee will have a big delegation, including the renowned Jimmy Smith. Des Moines, Davenport, and Sioux City will be included in the Iowa delegation. Indianapolis and South Bend have entries of ten teams each.

Edward Wigand, secretary of the Interstate association, is receiving the entries at Aurora.

U. S. BOXING MEN NOT TO APPEAR AT PARIS CONFAB

America Forms Own Code of Rules for Ring Sport.

New York, Jan. 10.—American boxing enthusiasts are awaiting with interest the outcome of the meeting of the International Boxing union, to be held in Paris on Feb. 5. Unless there is an eleventh hour shift in sentiment, the United States will not be represented formally, if at all. As a consequence it is doubtful if any of the amateur organizations of this country or the professional promoters will feel obligated to observe regulations or suggestions which may arise from such conference.

As composed at the present time, the union consists of French, English, Swiss, and Belgian boxing organizations or individuals who, under the initiative of the French, have been working upon an international association plan since 1910, when the French boxing federation attempted to convene an international conference to discuss the many crude angles of the glove game. Neither the English nor American authorities showed any enthusiasm.

I. B. U. Organized.

In 1913 another meeting was held, and the following year the I. B. U. was officially organized, according to the French, with the following countries represented, either officially or informally: France [Federation Francaise de Boxe], England [National Sporting club], United States [New York state boxing commission], Belgium [Federation Belg de Boxe], Switzerland [Federation Suisse de Boxe], Argentine Republic [Boxing club of Buenos Aires], and the Australian Boxing federation.

During the war there was no further activity on the part of the International Boxing union, but with the signing of the armistice the French proposed a revival of the organization, with the result that the meeting in Paris next month was called to consider new rules, weight classifications, and other details necessary to the readjustment and improvement of the ring sport. In the meantime, however, the American army, navy and civilian board of boxing control had been formed in this country, and a new code prepared to supersede the Marquis of Queensberry rules.

Hope for Revision of Code.

This code was sent abroad for submission and suggestions to the English and French boxing authorities. It is the hope of those who spent weeks upon the revision of the rules that the new regulations will prove acceptable as the basis of a universal boxing code. There are so many radical differences between the English, French, and American systems of awarding boxing decisions, however, that many are skeptical regarding the outcome.

LEADING CLUBS FACE STIFF GAMES TODAY IN CITY INDOOR PLAY

The eleventh round of the City Indoor Baseball league will be staged this afternoon, both of the leading teams, Dodger-Trainings and Hebrew Institute, having hard games. An upset is not unlikely in either case and may result in again tying the clubs for the lead.

Mezereon Reveres, who play Dodgers, have Karling, who has pitched the only no-hit game in the league, as their slab artist. He will face Red Kaufman, who struck out twenty-five of Polish-Americans last Sunday. They meet at St. Alphonsus' gym. The institute players will have to stave off the Polish-Americans, who held the slugging Dodgers to a close score last week. They play at the institute.

Stanley Boras will be the hurler for the Poles and will have to face Tom Shanley, who helped win the pennant last year for Hamlin Crescents. Another fast game is billed between the East End Sportsmen and Central Turners at Turner hall. Babe Price, who is the most promising youngster turned out in years, will face Eddie Zuleg, who is at the top of his game right now.

Vilas A. A. and Romeos clash in the fourth game of the round at Battery B, and the clubs look more evenly matched than any of the other contestants. The Romeos showed a lot of class last Sunday, when they nosed out the Mezereon Reveres in a twelve inning game.

Press Comment

On the New Series Marmon 34

Below are excerpts from the New York newspapers indicating, in a measure, the reception accorded the new series Marmon 34 at the New York Show, together with editorial comment on features of the car which make it the object of so much favorable consideration.

THE NEW YORK AMERICAN:
"The parts displayed at this exhibit (The Marmon) prove that the internal finish of the new model is as splendid as the exterior of the Marmon, which has always been exceptional."

THE EVENING TELEGRAM:
"So accurately are the parts (of the Marmon 34) made and finished that the two men can complete the tearing down and rebuilding in less than one hour and a half."

THE NEW YORK SUN:
"Even veteran manufacturing heads agree that (The Marmon exhibit) is the most interesting demonstration of close limits manufacturing accuracy ever staged at a national show." "....New Marmon 34 spells efficiency. Splendid external finish of motor indicates its interior precision."

THE NEW YORK EVENING POST:
"The Marmon 34 with the High Efficiency Motor seems as pronounced a novelty as was the first Marmon 34, shown four years ago, with its radical departure from conventional design. . . ."

NEW YORK TIMES:
"(Marmon 34) Demonstrating the building of a motor and manufacturing accuracy."

NEW YORK HERALD:
"Original and interesting exhibit."

NEW YORK TRIBUNE:
"Wartaught lessons are bearing their fruit now."

You may see this new car in our salesrooms. A special show has been arranged here to give Chicagoans an opportunity to share the first public exhibition of a truly remarkable motor car. We will be glad to explain the features which make this car so pre-eminent or provide a demonstration under ordinary road conditions if you desire.

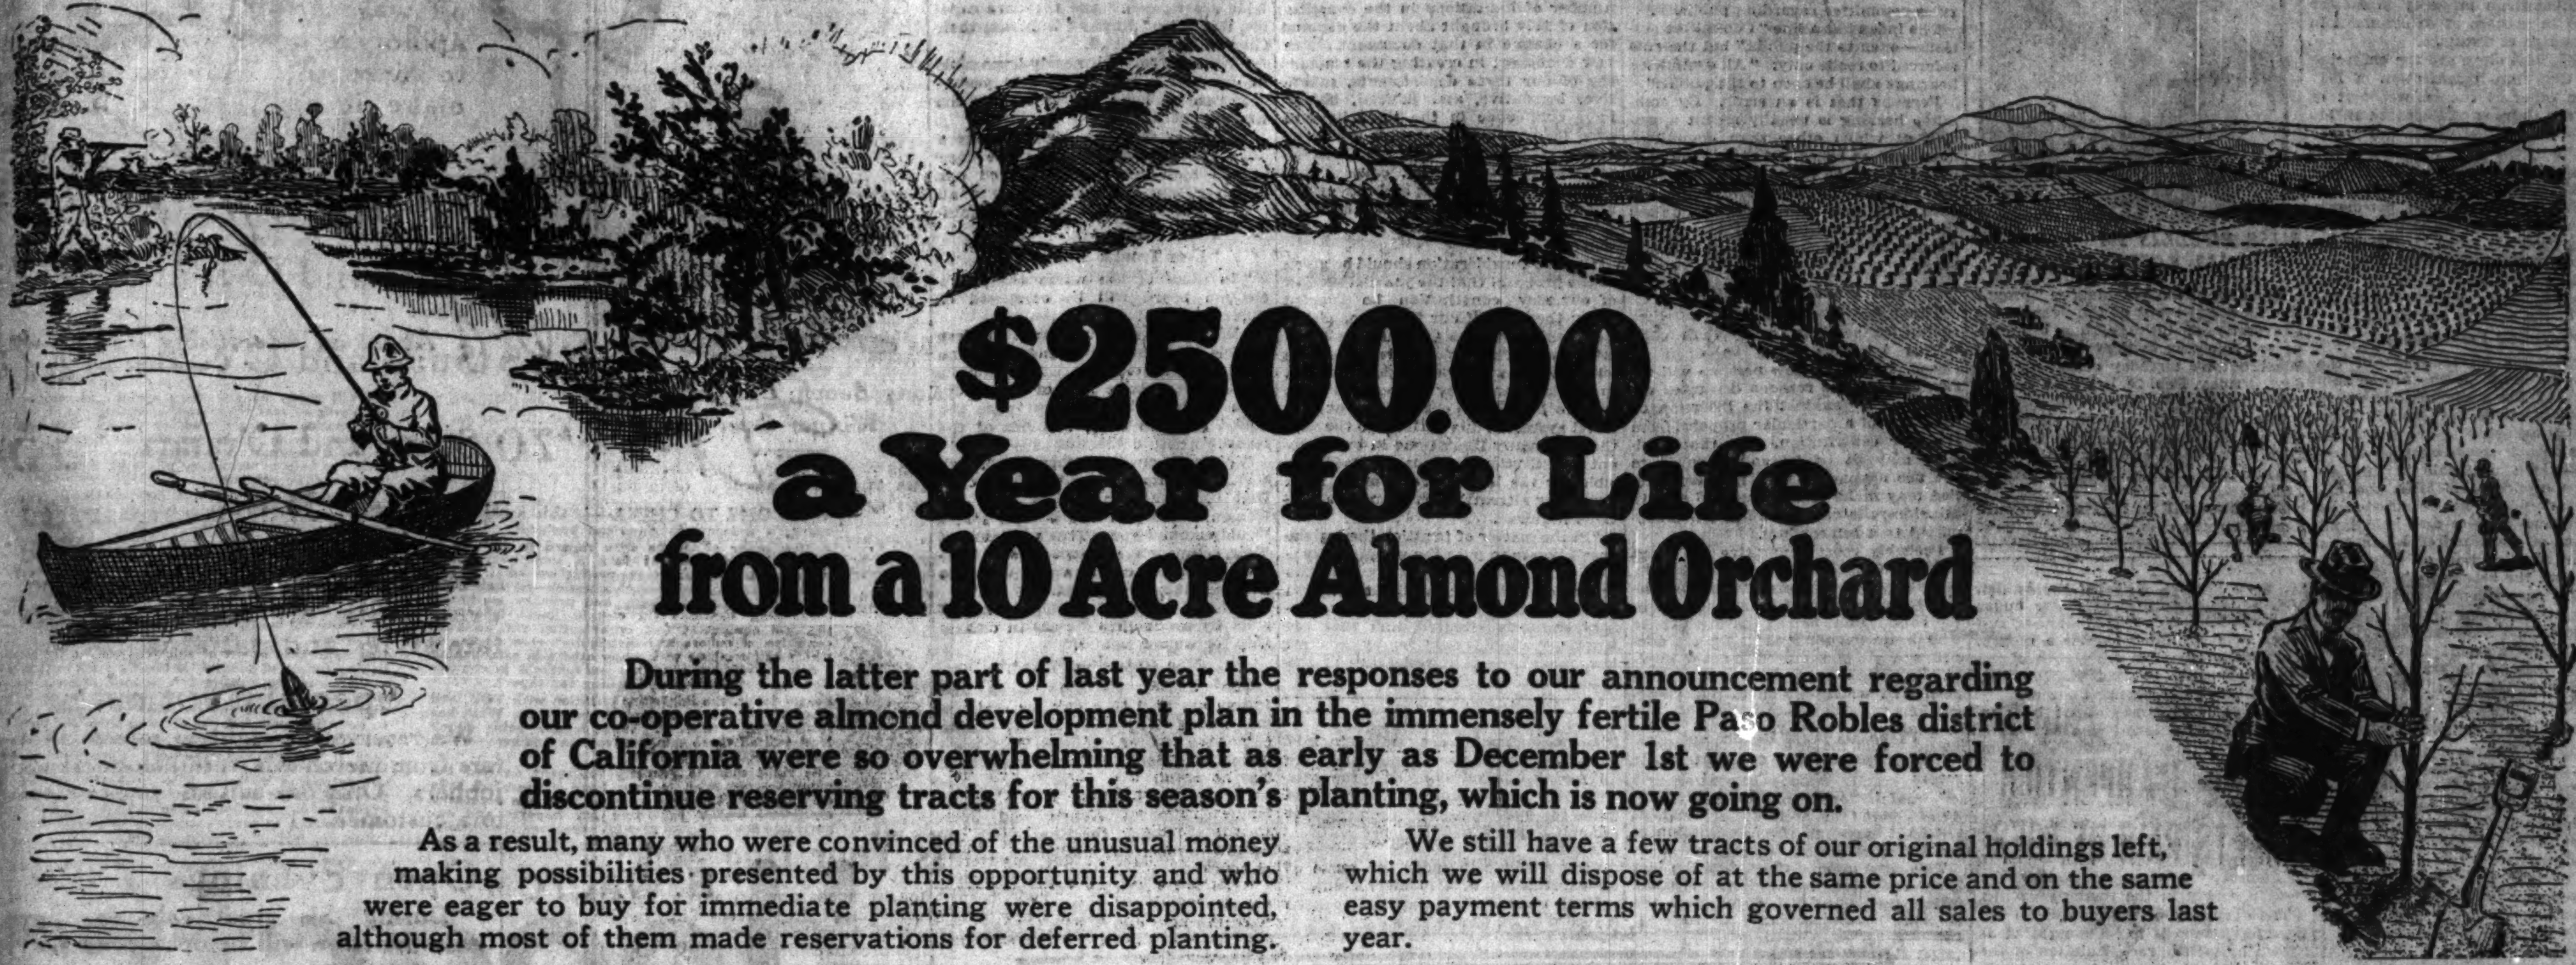
Buy Now! Almond Land

At Paso Robles, California—ADVANCES 20% SOON



$2500.00 a Year for Life from a 10 Acre Almond Orchard

During the latter part of last year the responses to our announcement regarding our co-operative almond development plan in the immensely fertile Paso Robles district of California were so overwhelming that as early as December 1st we were forced to discontinue reserving tracts for this season's planting, which is now going on.

As a result, many who were convinced of the unusual money making possibilities presented by this opportunity and who were eager to buy for immediate planting were disappointed, although most of them made reservations for deferred planting.

It was not because of lack of desirable almond land—although this is growing scarcer every day—but because our supply of nursery grown, pedigreed trees had become exhausted.

Under the direction of our Field Manager, Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, we are now making preparations for a larger number of trees to be planted this coming year than ever before in the history of our association. The cost of raising these trees, however, will be greater than heretofore. Moreover, the price of raw almond land in the Paso Robles district is steadily advancing.

We still have a few tracts of our original holdings left, which we will dispose of at the same price and on the same easy payment terms which governed all sales to buyers last year.

The present price, however, is effective only until our present holdings are sold.

Because of the general advance in price on land throughout the United States, the increased cost of labor and equipment, our Paso Robles almond land will be advanced 20% March 1st (or before that time if the few remaining tracts of our original holdings are sold in the meantime). Therefore it is distinctly to your advantage to act at once and make your reservations now while you can get in at the old price.

Your Assurance of Financial Independence for Life

To many it seems difficult to realize that a 10-acre almond orchard at Paso Robles can be made to yield an income of from $2,500 to $3,000 a year and more for life. Yet this is a most conservative estimate, based upon a yield of 20 pounds of almonds per tree from 700 trees, which is the number we plant to one of these 10-acre tracts, at a selling price of 25 cents per pound. On this basis the gross profit is $3,500. After making a deduction of $50.00 an acre to cover the expense of cultivating, pruning and caring for the orchard into bearing, harvesting and marketing the crop, the orchard owner still has a net profit of $3,000.

Last fall almonds from the Paso Robles district sold at from 30½c to 32½c per pound. The demand for these choice nuts is constantly increasing, and it is reasonable to suppose that the selling price next fall will be still higher. Take your pencil and figure out the additional profit for yourself.

A Wise, Conservative Investment Returning Unusual Dividends

Do you realize that a steady yearly income of stocks, bonds, mortgages, etc.? Yet your cash investment of from $40,000 to $50,000 at 6% in what are recognized as gilt edge securities, such as high class stocks, bonds, mortgages, etc? Yet your cash investment in one of these 10-acre almond orchards is but a mere fraction of that sum.

Here are a few facts that should readily convince you of the safety and sureness of big profits afforded you by this great enterprise:

California produces 99% of all of the almonds grown in the United States.

The entire almond yield of this country supplies only 15% of the domestic demand—85% being imported.

First Prize Almonds

Paso Robles almonds are recognized as the finest flavored, meatiest almonds grown anywhere. They took first prize at the St. Louis World's Fair. The demand for California almonds is constantly increasing. The California Almond Growers' Exchange, which handles practically the entire almond output of California, is promoting a strong, vigorous, nation wide advertising campaign, emphasizing the superior merits of these almonds (having given them the trade name of the Blue Diamond brand).

Experts declare that if every available foot of desirable land in California were planted to almonds, the supply would still fall way short of the demand.

In the face of these conditions it is easy to see why the price must continually advance.

A Sure, Imperishable Crop

Where trees have been properly planted and cared for, there has not been an almond crop failure in the Paso Robles district in the past 35 years. There are trees upward of 25 years old, which have an unbroken bearing record of 200 pounds and more for years past.

The soil which comprises our almond holdings is a deep loam, highly impregnated with what is known as sea marl adobe. This soil requires neither irrigation nor fertilizer. It retains moisture like a sponge and is not subject to erosion. Our Mr. Nehrhood, who is the leading authority on almond culture on the Pacific Coast, declares that this soil has every qualification for sturdy almond tree growth and prolific yield—that it is now more ideally adapted for almond culture than any other soil in the entire state of California, and certainly he should know, for he has traveled the entire state and has planted thousands of fruit and nut trees of practically every variety.

Your Crops Pay Half the Cost of Your Orchard

You will never be called upon to pay more than half the purchase price of your orchard in cash. We guarantee to plant 700 of the finest grown pedigreed almond trees to each 10-acre tract, cultivate the soil, prune and otherwise scientifically care for the trees for four years, without a cent of extra charge. When the trees come into bearing at the end of four years we agree to accept profits from the crops of your orchard until the balance is paid for. A moderate payment down secures one of these choice tracts for you, the balance of the first half of the purchase price to be paid in easy monthly payments.

Your Interests Absolutely Safeguarded

When you enter a contract with our association you are dealing with an organization composed of men who are themselves almond orchard growers and whose interests are identical with your own. In fact, it is easy to see that our association can be successful only through the success of the individual investors who buy these tracts.

As an additional safeguard we have created a trust fund for the express purpose of developing these orchard tracts and which can be used for no other purpose. This fund will be held in trust by one of the largest trust companies in the country.

Our Money Back Guarantee

No matter how skeptical you may be regarding this opportunity, we say to you that if you can conveniently do so, by all means make a trip to Paso Robles and examine conditions there first hand. Investigate. See for yourself how rapidly the almond growing industry is coming to the front at Paso Robles. If you do not find everything just as we have represented, we will refund to you any payment you have made, together with your railroad and Pullman fare. This same offer holds good, if instead of going yourself you have a representative make the trip of investigation.

Act Now Before Price Advances

Remember that after March 1st (or before, if our present holdings are disposed of before that date) the price of our almond land will be 20% higher than it is now. We are urging you, therefore, to investigate at once. Do not put it off and run the risk of being disappointed, as so many prospective buyers were disappointed last season. Make your reservation NOW and get the benefit of last year's price and easy payment terms.

CARRANZA ACTS TO CARRY OUT HIS CONFISCATIONS

Taking Over American Oil and Other Lands.

BY CAPT. KENT HUNTER.

San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Three steps of the Carranza government to bring about confiscation of American property in Mexico are now in process of enforcement in the oil region of Tampico.

Two of these steps are the enforcing of the Queretaro constitution of 1917 and the other is the enforcement of one of the decrees of Carranza in his capacity of dictator under the power given him by the main congress to legislate by executive degree. They are:

1. Article 27 of the legislation nationalizing petroleum and petroleum products, including bituminous coal and coal products, even though under the Mexican mining law of 1884, reaffirmed in 1892 and again in 1907, such rights belong specifically to the holders of the surface soil rights.

Enforcing Partisanship.

2. Preparation on the part of the Carranza government to enforce subsection 1 of the same article, which allows foreigners to own land in Mexico only by agreeing before the Mexican state department to consider themselves Mexican nationals in any altercations arising, and with the exception that under no circumstances can foreigners acquire and hold land "in a zone of one hundred kilometers along the frontier and of fifty kilometers along the seacoasts."

3. Action in enforcing a decree of Carranza which declares that agricultural land in the Mexican republic, if uncultivated for a period of six months or over, reverts to the state for redistribution, even though the owners of the land continue to pay taxes on it.

Bought the Land Outright.

None of the American companies in the Tampico and Tuxpam districts have recognized the enforcement of article 27, relating to nationalization of the oil fields. They point out that in 90 per cent of their cases they bought their land outright or leased it from the Mexican owners prior to 1917, when the Queretaro constitution became effective, and in the period during which the old mining law specifically excepted mineral oils and bituminous coal from nationalization.

One company, the Aguila, formed of a syndication of the Royal Dutch Shell company and the English owned Pearson holdings, has renounced in favor of the Mexican government. The exact terms of its operating agreement under the renunciation is a secret even in Tampico, but the understood agreement is that the Aguila company turns over to the main government 50 per cent of the gross production of its wells. From its own 50 per cent of the gross the company pays the land leases where the property is not owned outright, pays the taxes on the entire gross production, the operating expenses and the cost of upkeep, and its company share of the enforced tribute which all companies in the oil district yield monthly to Manuel Palaez, the rebel general who controls the greater part of the state of Tamaulipas outside of the actual cities.

Freezing Out Competition.

A feature of this renunciation has been that the Aguila company, through Mexico City, has been given practically unlimited permission to drill new wells in its various fields, while the American companies, which have refused to renounce their rights under the old law, have been refused permission to drill new wells. As a result, production has begun to fall off alarmingly. The November report showed a decrease from the average monthly production during the last year of approximately a million and a quarter barrels. The December figures, in process of compilation when I left Tampico, indicated that the December shortage would be a million and a half barrels.

"If it keeps up for three months," said one oil man, "there won't be a company producing except the Aguila, and its yield cannot possibly, under the most favorable circumstances, run much over a million barrels a month, and that is less than one-eighth of the average monthly production. It will be a showdown, one way or another."

The plans of enforcement by Carranza of the section of the legislation prohibiting foreign interests in the fifty and 100 kilometer seacoast and border zones is evidenced by his request, made just before the Mexican congress adjourned last week, for an appropriation of 50,000,000 pesos, approximately $25,000,000, with which to "indemnify" foreign land holders for their property in the restricted zones.

The absurdity of the plan, if an element of justice is to be considered, is shown by a little recapitulation of the value of the holdings of some Americans—to say nothing of the other foreign interests—with which Carranza's pitiful $25,000,000 fund is to be used for indemnification.

Value of American Companies.

Conservative estimates place the valuation of the various American oil companies in Mexico—and three-quarters of their properties would fall within the restricted zone—as follows:

The Huasteca Petroleum Co.	$60,000,000
Pierce Oil corporation	10,000,000
Texas Oil Co	40,000,000
International Petroleum Co	5,000,000
Penn Mex Fuel Co	20,000,000
Standard Oil Co.	8,000,000
Lacorona Co	6,000,000
Gulf Oil Co	10,000,000
Freeport Oil Co	10,000,000
Cortez Oil corporation	5,000,000
Metropolitan Oil Co	8,000,000

Millions in Improvements.

In addition to their actual investments in lands and leases, the various companies have put in an approximate hundred million dollars' worth of pipe lines, refineries, and subsidiary improvements.

The enforcement by Carranza of his decree to forfeit back to the state all agricultural lands not tilled for a period of six months is a subtle but effective means of confiscating thousands of acres of rich agricultural land that has been bought and paid for by Americans in the last twenty years and developed by them to a high state of productivity.

THIRTEEN SUE CITY FOR $40,000.

Damage suits aggregating $40,000 and representing thirteen complainants were filed yesterday against the city of Chicago, claiming depreciation in property due to the closing of North Hermitage avenue between Diversey parkway and Wrightwood avenue last July.

'OPEN SESSIONS' ON CONSTITUTION APPEAR IN DOUBT

Text of Rules Casts Shadow on Interpretation.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—The text of the rules for the constitutional convention, made public today, cast a shadow upon the desire of the rules committee regarding publicity.

The index has a line "Committee sessions—open to the public," but the rule referred to reads only: "All committee hearings shall be open to the public."

Perhaps that is an error. By commitee hearing is usually meant a session at which other than committee members are heard. Of course the public could not be heard orally unless it was present. So the reason for the rule does not appear on the surface, unless the rules committee used the phrase "committee hearings" in an unusual sense.

Most Want Open Sessions.

The rules do not suggest whether committee sessions other than committee hearings shall be open or closed. Possibly a few persons will desire to hear the reasons delegates advance for or against the insertion or exclusion of a particular proposal from the new constitution. But that criticism may be trivial as compared to the use opponents to a new constitution may make of the proposed rule in attacking the new basic law when submitted to a referendum.

Probably most committee chairmen will want open sessions, and as the pamphlet on rules says "this convention is not controlled by rules made in the constitution nor by statute," those who desire to submit ideas for the constitution will be required to act promptly. Approximately six weeks will be permitted within which to make suggestions.

Proposals Must Be Prompt.

The proposed rule on that point reads:

"After the first day of March, 1920, no proposal shall be introduced except upon the report of recommendation of a standing or select committee."

This may appear short, but the last New York constitutional convention, which met on April 6, stopped the presentation of proposals on June 11.

The Massachusetts convention in 1917 gave the time between June 6 and June 25 for the submission of proposals. The Ohio convention threw open the gates for two weeks and then made it difficult to get a new idea presented.

Another rule prevents discussion during a roll call under the guise of an explanation of a member's vote.

Each committee is required to keep a record of its proceedings.

COL. DAVIS GIVES IDEAS CONCERNING NEW CONSTITUTION

Col. Abel Davis, delegate to the state constitutional convention from the Fifth senatorial district of Chicago, gives his views on the work to be done by the body of which he is a member in a letter to THE TRIBUNE. He writes:

"The constitutional convention is not a legislative body. This statement will bear repetition. The application of the principle involved will have to be borne in mind in all of the deliberations and actions of the convention. If the convention adheres to this principle it will produce a basic law which will stand the test of many years and meet with the minimum of objection at the hands of the people on the question of ratification.

"Lack of elasticity and an excessive number of limitations in the constitution of 1870 brought about the demand for a change in that document. The new document in creating the machinery of our three departments, executive, legislative, and judicial, should have confidence in the integrity and good judgment of the people and their future representatives in the three departments of our state, county, and municipal governments and reduce the number of limitations to a minimum.

"Concretely, let me cite two illustrations:

"Serious consideration should be given to the proposal that the judicial section of our new constitution be framed along the lines of our federal constitution, which would mean that the legislature would have the power to create such courts with such jurisdiction as, in its judgment, may be required from time to time. The criticism of our judicial system is due entirely to the fact that the many limitations in our present constitution have made it impossible for the legislature to make such necessary alterations as changed conditions required.

"In the matter of taxation the legislature's power to pass the necessary taxing laws should be subject only to the limitations that they shall be uniform as to all classes of persons and property similarly situated, and that exemptions should only be by general law, repealable at the pleasure of the general assembly."

WOMAN IS BOSS THIS YEAR AT CITY ELECTIONS

Holds Down 7,000 Out of 11,000 Vote Board Jobs

For the first time in the history of Chicago the city's election machinery is to be in the control of the women. Out of 11,000 election officials appointed for the coming year, nearly 7,000 are women. And they are capable, too, says "Jimmy" Sullivan, their chief at the city hall.

"We have found it nearly impossible to get men to serve," he said yesterday, "so we have had to call on the women.

"Many of them are glad to make a little extra money during these days of the high cost of living and our new election officials are nearly all housewives trying to help out the family income.

"Less Trouble Than Men."

"In some of the wards the entire election board will be composed of women.

"Women have given us a lot less trouble than men in attending to the details of the elections. Men, for example, never have any of their supplies ready. They always 'pass the buck' to some other member of the board.

"Women, on the other hand, ask a lot of questions. The telephone calls that come into this office from the women serving at the polling places would astound you. That's because of their comparative inexperience, however, and their conscientious desire to get everything just right.

"The Woman's City club has helped a lot by conducting classes in citizenship for women voters."

Men Rule First Ward.

The women election clerks and judges are paid $5 a day for registration and revision days and $7 during canvasses and for elections. They work from 8:30 o'clock in the morning until 9:30 at night.

In the ward which is the happy home of Michael Kenna and John Coughlin, namely, the First, there will be few women commissioners, it was announced.

"It's not a thickly populated ward anyway," said Mr. Sullivan, "and perhaps the men can handle it best."

ONTARIO GIVES FARMER-LABOR FULL CONTROL

Power in Parliament Comes to Change.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 10.—What are the farmers going to do to us? is the question one hears in Ontario cities.

For the people of this great province woke up the other morning to find that the farmers had captured the old gray parliament building at Queen's Park, Toronto, and would rule the province for the next few years.

Some of them heard of Mr. Drury for the first time. He and his father and his father's father all lived on the farm, a 250 acre place in Simcoe county, known as Kenilworth. They had they had their feet on the soil. During the long winter evenings they read and studied and talked of governmental affairs. Other farmers of the neighborhood found that young Mr. Drury, now the Hon. E. C. Drury, the new premier of Ontario, was a good talker and a clear thinker. They got in the habit of calling on him when they were in trouble.

They called on him when they found to their own surprise at the recent election that they had taken forty-five seats in the Ontario legislature. This was not enough to rule the legislature, which has 111 members. He accepted the leadership, decided to ignore the liberals, and called on the eleven labor members to work with him. They accepted and Canada found itself with its first experiment in farmer-labor government, its first trial of legislation without professional politicians of the old parties at the helm.

Few Points of Difference.

The labor men found that there were only four points of difference between their platform and the farmers' platform. They agreed to forget these and remember for a time the things on which they could agree. That is the spirit in which the Dominion labor men and the employers in the recent congress.

It is predicted that the farmers and the labor party leaders will split some day over the eight hour day. The farmers claim they cannot run farms in Canada, with its short growing season, on an eight hour day and with the daylight saving bill which the city men forced them to take. But before that break comes the farmers hope to gain adherents enough from other parties to carry on their government.

The most spectacular thing Mr. Drury has done so far is to reduce his own salary from $12,000 to $9,000. He has announced a program of economy. He proposed to sell or rent the magnificent governor's house, which costs the province $70,000 a year to keep up. He will not spend that amount for upkeep at least.

Farmers Gain in Trade.

The United Farmers of Ontario have 1,150 clubs and 48,000 members. Co-operative buying was the big thing that brought them together. They went into the United States and bought 900,000 pounds of binder twine and forced the Canadian market down 2 cents. They have wholesale and retail stores and sell to 50 per cent of the restaurants of Toronto. There are seven branch stores in the province. They handle 40 per cent of the live stock that comes into Toronto and plan to extend this business to Montreal and Buffalo. All the farmer has to do is to ship his stock to the association.

They first got into politics in Ontario in November, 1918, when one candidate was put up by a local club and elected. Last February another was elected. Then they decided to go out as an organization. They may profit some from the experiences of the Patrons of Industry, a farmer organization which came into power in this province in 1890 and went to pieces six years later. They elected seventeen men to the legislature of 1894.

Leaders Moderate in Views.

The utterances of the farmer leaders in Ontario have been moderate and far from alarming. The new premier said recently:

"The people of Ontario desire and will receive efficient, economical, and public spirited government, subservient to no class, creed, or condition, and guided only by a desire to promote the general welfare. The government of Ontario as at present constituted will adhere to business principles in the consideration and determination of all business matters."

Mr. Drury and two of his cabinet are now seeking seats in the Ontario legislature and are being fought by the Liberals.

Build Homes for Public.

The housing shortage in Ontario has resulted in federal and provincial action. Ninety-one municipalities are using the credits provided. More than sixty municipalities, it is reported by Sir John Willison, are actually building houses, a few have been completed, and 1,300 are under construction. In the spring at least 5,000 more houses will be under construction.

The houses are attractive and convenient and the monthly repayments—$18 a month for twenty years to pay the principal and interest on a $3,000 dwelling—are hardly equal to the rents now being charged for the same class of dwelling. Toronto under a special act has spent $800,000 in the construction of inexpensive houses.

CITY TEACHERS COMPARE WAGE AND H. C. L. SCALE

The Chicago Teachers' federation, on behalf of Chicago elementary teachers, has gathered facts and figures on both the annual increase in salaries and the cost of living from 1897 to 1919, inclusive, to show why there is so much unrest among the instructors.

The figures, which have been prepared from the United States government bureau of labor reports, show that the cost of living in 1919 was 349 per cent of the cost in 1897, or three and one-half times as much. The salary paid in 1919, it is stated, is only 190 per cent of that paid in 1897.

Maximum salaries of $1,575 and $1,600 were paid to 2,765 experienced elementary teachers in 1919. They have requested an increase to a maximum of $2,500 for 1920.

Dr. Thomas A. Carter, the mercury poisoning expert, was taken to the Columbus hospital Friday night, suffering from a supposed attack of pneumonia. His wife said last night that Dr. Carter was exposed to all sorts of weather the last month, and, while a diagnosis had not been completed, it is suspected that he contracted pneumonia.

SUPPLY, DEMAND LAW CUTS SUGAR PRICE—POOLE

Blames Big Exports for Higher Rice.

Sugar is down to $16.75 a hundred and April and May sugar futures are quoted at 15 cents a pound. The law of supply and demand which has replaced government control did it, according to City Food Director Russell J. Poole.

Big exports of rice, Mr. Poole said, account for the rise of 9½ cents a pound in the price of that food since 1915.

In a statement sizing up the sugar and rice situations yesterday, Mr. Poole said:

"In November I stated that government price fixing and control of sugar had practically destroyed competition, allowing refiners huge profits and resulting in $20 sugar. I stated that if the government would relinquish control we would have sufficient sugar at lower prices by Jan. 1, 1920.

"In verification of this statement, today the supply, while not normal, is good, and every one is able to get sugar. Spot goods are quoted at $16.75 and the sugar dealers are all offering April and May products at 15 cents, and I am sure by that time they will be even lower.

"Exportation accounts in a large measure for the recent high sugar prices. In the first ten months of 1919 we exported 623,686 tons of sugar and in November 64,575 tons, the largest amount in any month which the records cover.

"Overexportation is also in large measure the answer to present rice prices. The rice crop in 1919 should have been 16,000,000 bags — hundred pounds to the bag. Weather conditions during the harvest cut the local crop to 10,000,000 bags. The usual consumption in the United States is 5,000,000 bags. Yet in 1915 the price of our best grade of rice was 3½ cents a pound. Today the Louisiana Rice Milling company of New Orleans is quoting rice at 13 cents. The company also says that they are exporting 350,000 bags to Sumatra, which is a new market for American rice.

"And we cannot any longer import cheap rice from Japan, which raises 17,000,000,000 pounds a year. That country has had a little shortage in its rice crop."

60,000 WOMEN OF STATE TO KEEP BOOKS ON HOME

Sixty thousand women, members of the federated clubs of Illinois, have been enlisted in a campaign for household thrift and economy by Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, state chairman of the movement to coöperate with the savings division of the treasury department in an attempt to solve the economic problems superinduced by the war.

Four million women throughout the country are taking part in the campaign during January and February.

"This is not an effort on the part of American women to lower the standard of living," said Mrs. Dow. "The purpose is to better the standard of living and at the same time keep it within the individual or household income. The women will keep strict accounts during January and try to effect a saving in February. By March they will be able to translate the surplus income thus gained into government securities, such as war savings stamps, treasury savings certificates, and Liberty bonds."

Big Merchandising Mart

to Open Soon at State, Van Buren and Congress Sts.

Recently Occupied by U. S. Government Store and the Former Location of Siegel, Cooper & Company

THE big store—one full block on State Street and one-half block on Van Buren and Congress Streets, will open on or about March 1st as "The Great Merchandise Mart of America." The entire basement will be devoted to foodstuffs. Makers and producers of all sorts of food have made arrangements to sell their wares direct to the consumer, eliminating many middlemen and cutting the cost to the consumer down to the lowest possible point. The first and the upper floors are being divided into Sections, each Section is separately owned and conducted by a manufacturer or a retail specialist with the strict understanding that all prices, at all times, in all departments, must be lower than any other store in America.

THE basic idea of this great mart is to create a more direct means of distributing goods from makers to consumers; cutting down the great fixed overhead expenses that now burden most retail establishments and to immediately lower the High Cost of Living for all Chicago and the great Middle West.

A number of departments are still open. Progressive manufacturers, merchants or salesmen who are seeking a large, permanent and profitable outlet are urged to communicate with us immediately. Liberal inducements are being made to the right people. All contracts are being made on the percentage of sales, so as to keep down the fixed overhead. This is an unusual opportunity. Come in now. Inquire if your department is still open.

JOHN D. TELLS THE STORY OF STANDARD OIL

Its Golden Anniversary the Occasion.

New York, Jan. 10.—The story of how the Standard Oil company grew from humble beginnings until it became the greatest business organization in the world was related by the founder himself, John D. Rockefeller, in a letter read here tonight at a dinner held in celebration of the golden jubilee of the world-wide corporation.

Mr. Rockefeller said he believed there were only two survivors of the original organizers of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, the parent organization—his brother William and himself.

Began as Oil Refiner.

He said that he had commenced his career as an oil refiner, preceding his brother in the business by four years.

"The business of oil refining," Mr. Rockefeller wrote, "was very profitable in the early sixties, but in the late sixties it was overdone and the competition was ruinous, so that probably 80, and possibly 90 per cent of all engaged in it were either barely holding their own or suffering actual loss."

Many efforts were made to remedy the demoralization in the industry, but without success, Mr. Rockefeller continued, until the Standard Oil company undertook to unite certain refining interests under a common ownership.

Backers Hard to Fnd.

The finding of the capital for the scheme was difficult in view of the poor credit conditions in the business and Mr. Rockefeller could recall only two concerns—the Warden, Frew & Co. interests of Philadelphia, and the Charles Pratt company, of New York—who were willing to furnish cash in return for stock. As an illustration of the stringency in the money market, he said that the Standard Oil company borrowed from its shareholders all the money they would lend and paid 10 per cent interest.

The money thus raised was still insufficient, but financial backing was obtained through the sale of stock to leading capitalists and the business of other refiners was taken over by payments either in stock or cash. The ablest representatives of such concerns were enlisted in the administration of the joint undertaking.

Invites In All Competitors.

"And here I may be pardoned for saying," Mr. Rockefeller wrote, "that the Standard Oil company made a record without precedent in the history of commercial enterprises in turning to its weaker and bankrupt competitors and offering them a chance to recoup their waning fortunes without any risk on their part except the putting in of their plants, many of which were superannuated and not equipped to cope with the more up to date refineries even of that time.

"I am happy that all who took stock prospered and did much better than they could have done under any other circumstances."

WOMEN TO MAKE OWN GOWNS, BUT MUST HAVE SILK

Save at One End, but Spend at Other.

Is the gentle art of home dressmaking coming back? Verily, it would seem so, judging by the great demand for dress goods by the yard Chicago women in their fight against the high cost of living are now turning to the arts and talents of their mothers' day.

They are getting down the "Mary Jane" dressmakers' forms from the attics, putting on the flat irons for pressing, oiling the sewing machines, and setting extra places at the lunch tables for the seamstresses in preparation for the spring clothes campaign.

300 Salesmen Report Record.

Earnest K. Hellway of the John V. Farwell wholesale dry goods house says that the 300 salesmen who travel for that firm bring in word that dress goods by the yard are selling better this year than they ever did before, and concludes that women are going to make their own spring wardrobes. "Silk," he said, "is particularly popular."

E. W. Beale, silk buyer for Mandel Bros., smiled when asked about the sale of silks this week.

"I should say they are buying silks and they don't care how much they pay," he said. "Why, our January sales have been more than double those for any previous month. The women are buying silks for everything.

Price of Silk Going Up.

"A colored woman came in the other day to look at silks and we showed her something at $4.45 a yard. She asked, 'Haven't you something better?' and bought six yards at $7.75. The price is going up."

Mrs. William H. Hart of Benton, Ill., president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs and leader through that office of 67,000 women, is boasting of a dress which she made herself from a blue serge suit of last year's vintage, combined with black satin for trimming.

WOMAN ROUTS HOLDUP MAN.

Waukegan, Ill., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Mrs. Katherine Terlap, while returning home after a call as a midwife, routed a holdup man, garbed as a sailor, last night. When he demanded her purse she reached into her pocket to get a flashlight. He fled.

POLICE CHIEFS OF LAGRANGE AND BROADVIEW SPLIT

According to Chief of Police Joseph Huszer of Broadview, Chief of Police Worth Douglas of La Grange appeared in court yesterday before Justice of the Peace Charles G. Krotz of Broadview and apologized for cutting the tires on the motorcycle of the Broadview police department.

"Chief Douglas was with Paul Sehen of La Grange, whom I arrested for speeding," said Chief Huszer last night. "While I was in the station with Sehen the chief cut up the tires on my motorcycle, and when I protested he threatened me with his revolver. I arrested him, and he was in jail about an hour.

"Yesterday he appeared in court and apologized. We let him go."

Chief Douglas was asked about it.

"Me arrested?" he said. "I should say not. It'd take more than—no, I wasn't arrested. I did go over there to court today, though. A friend of mine had some mixup with Chief Huszer about his motorcycle.

"No, I won't tell you his name."

TWO ARRESTED AFTER AUTO CRASH.

Edward B. Anderson, 2924 Burling street, and John H. McParland, 5011 West Grand avenue, were arrested yesterday, the former on a charge of disorderly conduct, the latter on a charge of driving an auto while intoxicated. Anderson owned and McParland drove the car wrecked in front of 3850 Washington boulevard Friday night, injuring Angeline Valentine and Viola Bowers, chorus girls, 1824 Washington boulevard.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

The Newest and Finest of All Light Sixes

In these days of advanced engineering it is a very simple matter to design a six-cylinder motor that is both powerful and speedy. The complications arise, however, when to these qualities, must be added new standards of dependability and economy of operation.

There, in one paragraph, you have an explanation of the three years of experiment and testing behind our new five-passenger "Glenbrook" model.

A few months would have sufficed to produce the "average" power plant and chassis—but we have never been interested in "average" achievements.

So we worked for three long years, patiently meeting and solving every problem that confronted us.

Then came the final tests—the merciless trials of power, speed and endurance—and the proud realization that our car was indeed the finest of all light sixes.

The rest of the story you probably know, for the public has rendered its verdict in no uncertain terms.

The "Glenbrook" stands unchallenged as the greatest dollar-for-dollar value in the field of five-passenger motor cars.

We predict that it will maintain this position for several seasons to come.

No—this is not a bankers' convention. These men are farmers—practical farmers—from 31 states, representing millions of rural population in the organization of a national federation of farmers at Chicago, November 12-13, 1919.

Mainstay of American Ideals
Stabilizer of Business

Farmers' organizations all over the country sent these men to the national convention, in the solemn conviction that not only agriculture, but the future of the nation itself, depends on a strong, aggressive, nation-wide federation of farmers.

They stand for the sixty-billion-dollar wealth of American agriculture, distributed among forty million citizens. But they represent far more.

They represent the level-headed, constructive conservatism of the farm—its unwavering adherence to American traditions—the force to which all other right-minded forces are turning for support these days.

They are spreading their gospel and their influence through the farm papers.

These papers are their voice as well as their guide. The farm press belongs to them in a sense not found in the relation of any other publication to their constituencies.

We have no hesitancy in saying that it is a public of this class that makes your best market.

You Address This Audience in the Farm Papers of America

You talk directly to these fine types of men, their wives, sons and daughters, and all they represent when you use the farm papers.

For everything you make or sell—for the highest quality—for the most exclusive, as well as the ordinary lines—your richest and readiest market is the farm home.

You do not cover this market unless your message comes to them through their own papers.

These men and their families are more than subscribers—more than readers. They are literally "The Family of the Farm Newspapers."

By a house to house canvass, north, south, east and west, the National Department of Agriculture has determined that the farm papers stand first in the influence that guides farm people.

Seventy-four per cent of the farmers of the United States tell the department that farm papers are their greatest help.

TAKE CHILDREN 5,000 MILES TO ESCAPE "REDS"

Only Hope of Russia Lies in Education.

BY FREDERICK A. SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VLADIVOSTOK, Dec. 13.—What Siberia needs right now is less big red roughhouse and more little red school house.

However, having knocked over the kitchen stove in the free for all, Russia and her Siberian stepbrother might, now that the place is quite successfully afire, stop throwing cheval mirrors out of second story windows and running upstairs and downstairs with feather pillows under either arm. It is high time somebody remembered the kiddies asleep on the second floor back.

If the row in Russia is intended to benefit posterity—a thought which Mr. William Howard Taft presumably would term a violent hypothesis—then in the name of Ivan Ivanovitch why not hustle the children off to school and make sure there will be a bit of posterity left after the flatirons cease to fly.

Bridges Blown Up.

After a Siberian journey of about 8,000 miles I have just returned from the bolshevik front. It was a thrilling expedition, without other companions than my two Red Cross blankets, a typewriter, and a collapsible bag. It was an inland voyage over a stormy sea. For nine days, going from Vladivostok to Omsk, I lived upon an antiquated car which was the last on an antique train.

Frequently we were compelled to pause because bridges ahead of us had been blown up by Siberian bolshevists. At other times we crept gingerly along tracks that recently had been dynamited by the same agents of Russian idealism. In addition to all that the trans-Siberian railroad is not running today in its best form.

Have Been Cheated.

The children whom I saw in Siberia have been cheated, cheated for hundreds of years back. And they are still being cheated. Let me advance the contention that if the peoples of the west hope to establish a closer relationship with the peoples of the shattered Russian empire they must first help the Russians to realize that there is an abyss and that education of children is the one way to bridge it. It cannot be done by selling mining machinery and agricultural implements. It cannot be done by sending armies to the aid of Kolchak or to the aid of Lenine. At the present moment Russians understand only the creed of force.

Will the children of Russia respond to instruction and association? They will do so without the shade of a doubt. There are now 900 Russian children in barracks on Russian island at Vladivostok. Taken from the environment of their fathers by the American Red Cross and moved to places of safety they at first were inclined to be sullen, reserved, suspicious. But teachers and books were brought and in the daily routine of their lives were introduced little lessons of ethics, conduct, gentle manners, and a trustfulness that one's being true to one's self establishes a mutual faith with others. That delightful little colony of kids on Russian island already has started to stretch a span across Dr. Dillon's chasm.

Develop Nationalism.

A few years more and any leader of passionate propaganda, who tries to put a rifle or a fire brand in their fingers and bid them go forth to kill must needs have something beside his own enthusiasm to convince these sons and daughters of a blessedly rich country that they should slay or impoverish their own brothers and sisters. They will possess an instinct of nationalism that is sadly lacking today. They will be ready to step into line with that certain assurance that comes from consciousness of justice, rather than from a prejudice of class.

Many Russians have endeavored faithfully to carry the book to the child. The present minister of education of the Omsk government is striving to that end. The bolsheviki make education one of their avowed chief aims. But, under the most favorable conditions in peace times, the facilities were pitifully inadequate. Five years of warfare and the paths to the temple have become almost entirely blocked. The boys of 12 have grown to be soldiers of 17. And they are fighting not the monster which robbed them of their right to reason, but something vague, intangible, distinguishable mainly by the crimson blood and the whiteness of suffering and the blackness of despair.

"ADS" TO TELL OF INTER-CHURCH WORLD MOVE

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 10.—At an all-day meeting of the general committee of the inter-church world movement today, following the three days' conference of church leaders, general approval was given a campaign of advertising in connection with the world's evangelization program.

It was estimated that nearly $1,000,000, possibly more, will be devoted to that purpose this year. The start will be made Feb. 1, with publicity in the religious papers, and will gradually be extended until it embraces every medium of publicity in an effort to bring the world's evangelization campaign directly before all the people.

The committee elected John D. Rockefeller Jr. a member and made him vice chairman. The chairman of the committee is Robert Lansing, secretary of state.

To the committee will largely belong the task of raising the budget of $1,300,000,000 decided upon at the conference here. The allotment for each denomination will not be made until it is ascertained what each is capable of raising.

Only Iron Hull Is Left of Famous American Ship

New York, Jan. 10.—Only the iron hull of the American line steamship St. Louis remained today when firemen finally extinguished the flames, after a painter's torch set it afire late Thursday. The damage is estimated at $1,000,000.

EX-TURK ENVOY TO U. S. PROPOSES A NEW PROGRAM

Wants Turks to Choose Nation to Rule.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 28, by courier to Paris, Jan. 10. Ahmed Rustem Bey, former Turkish ambassador in Washington and now one of Mustapha Kemal Pacha's principal collaborators, at the head of the nationalist movement in Anatolia, in an exhaustive memorandum he has written for THE TRIBUNE lays down three guiding rules for the settlement of the Turkish problem.

First, he says, it must be established that the task of directing Turkish administration should be intrusted to one single power. It has been Turkey's bitter experience, he points out, that the powers cannot agree when it is a case of conjointly introducing reforms in that country. Rivalry breaks out among them, transforming their action into a struggle for power at the expense of Turkey.

Turks Must Choose.

Second, Turkey must herself choose, through a national assembly specially called together for the purpose, the power which is to take in hand her administration.

Third, this power, having accepted the task, Turkey will sign a convention with it, under the guarantee of the league of nations, fixing the conditions in which assistance will be given.

In laying down these principles Rustem Bey has merely put in concrete form the view which prevails now among the Turks. They may be regarded also as representing the view of the majority of Americans who have looked into the situation on the spot.

Conditions of Mandate.

What are the conditions in which the outside power will give Turkey a hand in her internation administration? Ahmed Rustem Bey enumerates ten.

First, this assistance is to be given for a limited period—not less than fifteen years, and not more than twenty-five.

Second, the activities of the assisting power are to be confined to the administrative and economic fields, and they are to be exercised uniformly throughout the empire, without breaking up its geographical and political unity.

Third, the Ottoman government is to remain absolutely free in the domains of internal and external policy, except that it would debar itself from concluding alliances with any other powers during the period of assistance. Turkey would enjoy the right of diplomatic representation.

Fourth, the constitution will remain in force. But the assisting power will be associated with the Ottoman government in its constitutional rights, such as the dissolution and prorogation of parliament and the convocation of a constituent assembly.

Must Consult with Porte.

Fifth, the assisting power will elaborate its decisions in consultation with the Ottoman government, but its decisions will be executory in any case, and will receive the pro forma sanction of the government.

Sixth, the Ottoman government will enjoy the right of initiative also in administrative matters, but its projects, to become executory, must have the sanction of the assisting power.

Seventh, the liberty of the press will be maintained.

Eighth, the sultan's rights as sovereign of Turkey and caliph of the Mohammedans will be confirmed.

Ninth, Turkey will enjoy the right of recourse to the league of nations against any infringement of the letter or spirit of the convention by the assisting power.

Tenth, the minorities in Turkey are to be provided with the same guarantees of national development as the Turkish minorities in Bulgaria, Greece, and elsewhere, and as the Jewish and other minorities in other countries.

Rustem Bey believes that complete neutralization of Turkey, instead of a foreign mandate over Constantinople, would satisfy future Russia's claims to free use of the straits.

Valley Aviation Clubs Meet Here to Aid Cause

The Mississippi Valley Aviation Clubs association has called a convention, to begin tomorrow in the City Hall Square hotel, for the purpose of advancing aviation in the midwest and south, putting landing fields in big cities, recruiting commercial flyers, and similar projects. Governors of various states, or their representatives, will be in attendance. Adjt. Gen. F. S. Dickson will represent Gov. Lowden. Others who will attend are Commodore L. E. O. Charlton of the British embassy at Washington; Gov. Goodrich, Indiana; Lieut. Col. Bishop, Canada's ace; Luther Bell, president of the Aircraft Manufacturers' association, and Col. O. M. Biggar of the air service board of Ottawa. The members of the convention expect to get into touch with Mayor Thompson concerning the proposed landing field in Chicago.

BROKEN TRAINS BUMP TOURISTS OVER GERMANY

Traveler's Log Shows Extended Delays.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—[Delayed.]—How thoroughly Germany's railroads are shot to pieces is shown clearly by the log of a tired traveler who just has returned from eighty hours of way freight touring in Saxony and Bavaria.

There are no reservations in post-war Germany. Having obtained a seat, one proceeds to wrap up against the cold—for a heated car is almost unknown—and prepare to watch the loading and unloading of freight for at least 30 minutes out of every hour of the journey.

Here Is a Voyager's Log.

But the log gives a comprehensive idea of the contrast between conditions today and the vaunted German transportation system before the war. Extracts follow:

Dec. 15.—Stood in freezing cold four hours.

Dec. 19.—Leipsic to Chemitz. Trip took three times what it did in pre-war days.

Dec. 22.—Chemnitz to Plauen. Twelve hours for what once was a three hours' trip.

Dec. 24.—Plauen to Nuremberg. Thirteen hours—formerly three.

Dec. 29.—Nuremberg to Munich. Told there was no train until 7 this morning. At the station at 6:30 and was told 7 o'clock train wasn't running today. First train was 10:18. Arrived Munich 10:30 p. m.

Dec. 30.—Munich to Berlin. "Fast train" took only 13 hours, being only a few minutes more than an hour late.

Advantage to American.

And these were the experiences of a traveler willing to pay the much increased charges for "first class" coaches when they were available. There were only second, third and fourth class cars most of the way.

GERMANS GAIN ON AMERICANS' TRADE IN ITALY

Teutonic Agents and Paper Spreading.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

MILAN, Jan. 5, via Paris, Jan. 10.—Coming from England and France, where the language may well be classed with the dead ones, the sound of German falls queerly on the ears of an American in Italy. You hear it first in the train, after you have entered Switzerland and taken on fresh passengers.

It is the language of the German salesman. He has come to Italy in great strength. You might even say the German business men were "invading" Italy, were it not for the fact that North Winship, who is the American consul here in Milan, the most important business center of the country, does not like the word "invade." But Mr. Winship agrees with Oliver M. Smart, who is secretary of the American chamber of commerce, that Germany is making a big bid for commercial supremacy in Italy and is a real rival to American business.

Here Is an Incident.

"Here is an incident which illustrates the situation," said Mr. Smart. "Quite recently a local firm ordered some knives for a printing machine from an American salesman. It gave credit in New York. The American concern had to ship within a month. Well, it couldn't do that, so it asked for an extension of a short time.

"Thereupon the Italian firm canceled its order. It had in the meantime received a bid from a German firm at a very favorable price. This price was possible because of the low exchange. At any rate the Italian firm was only too glad to have its contract with the American firm lapse, as it saved on the deal.

Print Paper in Italy.

"There is machinery coming in from Switzerland which no doubt is German made. The Germans are publishing a paper in German here in Italy, and are openly competing with the American and British. The rate of exchange is a big factor in Germany's favor. On the other hand we know that Germany has only limited quantities of some commodities and of others in which she used to deal considerably, she has almost nothing."

NO CLASH OVER CHANGE IN CAR LINE CONTROL

Reorganization to Be on Harmonious Plan.

A great deal of what is being said outside of La Salle street concerning what is transpiring there with reference to the street railway situation, appears to be based on lack of information.

There is no conflict of interests, present or past, and there is no scramble for proxies.

The board of operation which runs the street railroads will be harmoniously organized next month, and with proper consideration for all the individuals concerned.

Local Banks Reduce Debt.

Member banks in the Chicago federal reserve district made a heavy decrease in their borrowings last week. The reports show a reduction of over $13,000,000 in loans on government securities, and more than $24,800,000 in loans on other securities, the total decrease being $37,-896,248.

Other reserve banks also decreased their borrowings by $11,490,000, bringing their total loans down to $6,050,000.

Federal reserve notes issued by the bank decreased in volume $11,792,670. The figures as a whole are the best, from the viewpoint of contraction, that have been reported in months.

New York Shows Deficit.

Through a decrease of $63,589,000 in cash, the surplus reserve of the New York Associated Banks, amounting the previous week to $60,304,360, was wiped out and instead there is shown a deficit of $2,912,680. These deficits are being recorded with considerable frequency. The money market has not heretofore been seriously influenced by them, since they have been of short duration.

There was a contraction in loans of more than $22,500,000, but net demand deposits also ran off, the decrease being $46,745,000. Government deposits stand at $302,303,000, a decrease of $9,505,000 compared with the previous week.

UNFILLED STEEL ORDERS LARGEST SINCE OCT., 1918

Unfilled orders for steel on the books of the United States Steel corporation on Dec. 31, 1919, aggregated 8,265,366 tons, the largest amount since October, 1918, and an increase of 1,137,036 tons over unfilled orders on Nov. 30, 1919. The corporation's monthly report was issued yesterday.

The great demand for steel is shown in the large increase in unfilled tonnage, which compares with a gain in November of 655,662 tons over October, a gain in October of 188,030 tons over September, and a gain in September of 175,535 tons over August. The December increase was made despite the fact that the effect of the steel strike had worn off, although the coal strike situation was a handicap. But the great increase is impressive when compared with the increases in October and November, when the steel strike was in full effect.

Unfilled tonnage on Dec. 31, 1918, was 7,379,152 tons; on Dec. 31, 1917, 9,381,718, and on Dec. 31, 1916, 11,547,286.

STOCKS SWING BACK AND FORTH ON DAY'S TRADE

Prices Show an Irregular Front at Close.

The New York Times.

New York, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Stocks advanced during the first half of today's market session and then fell back rather quickly, the net result of trading being, however, an irregular front of prices at the close, withh gains more frequently found than declines.

Presumably short covering acted to lift a number of industrial shares at the week end, and there were signs of pool activities here and there. Issues whose floating supply is supposed to be relatively small were bid upward with force prior to 11 o'clock. After cable dispatches were received reporting a revolutionary disturbance in Germany selling increased and this pressure was pronounced at the close.

Swings Are Sharper.

Except that the forward and backward swings were somewhat sharper than before, the day's business was about of the same quality as that of the preceding days of the week.

The last few days have added little actual knowledge of matters which will affect business, trade and international financial undertakings of the near future. The unusual firmness of money rates for this season of the year has not brought any surprise to the financial community, but the continued scarcity of credit and the reiteration of cautionary advice upon its use has altered some preconceived ideas within the stock market.

Rise Made Impossible.

With industry showing positive signs of earning large profits for a time at least, the trader in stocks is faced with a shortage of one of the chief supports of a bull market. That is not to say that stocks would not be able to rise if underlying conditions justified a forward movement, but without adequate credit supplied by the banks a free scope for speculative activity of the sort which brings rapid advances would not be possible.

DEPRECIATION WIPES OUT PROFIT ON AUDITORIUM

Net earnings of the Auditorium Hotel, Theater, and Office building for 1919 were more than sixt times those for 1918, according to the annual report issued by President R. Floyd Clinch to stockholders of the Chicago Auditorium association. For the year ended Nov. 30 net earnings were $103,739, compared with $16,029 for the previous year. However, the report shows a deficit of $4,302, due to the charging off of $108,041 for depreciation.

"Proper charges for depreciation were not made in previous years," President Clinch reported, "and this year the board of directors, under advice of the accountants, has set up depreciation against the property in accordance with the rate usually allowed. This depreciation reserve should have been put on the books proportionately each year since the erection of the building."

The balance sheet places adjustment of depreciation reserve from 1889 to 1918, inclusive, plus the 1919 deficit item at $2,220,192. From this is deducted the 1918 surplus of $108,835, and a total deficit of $2,111,356 is shown. Total earnings for 1919 were $375,121, divided as follows: Hotel, $223,780; theater, $82,500; office building, $68,841.

CHICAGO....STOCK TRANSACTIONS

The Chicago stock market was generally firm. There was slight easing off at the close in sympathy with New York, but final prices averaged better than the previous close. Armour preferred was a feature, moving up nearly 2 points to 112⅞. The last sale was ⅛ lower. The buying appeared to be influenced by consideration of the segregation plans now pending.

Montgomery Ward firmed up materially, International Packing was fractionally higher, and Swift & Co. shares closed up ¼. Union Carbide was in considerably better tone.

GRAIN MARKET IN BEAR HANDS THROUGHOUT DAY

Rumors of Changes in Europe Affect Trade.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Selling of grains and provisions by all interests was heavy during a good part of the day, due to a general feeling of bearishness that prevailed.

There was also a great deal of selling on the rumors regarding the political conditions in Europe and that the Ebert government in Germany had been overthrown. When prices were the lowest good buying appeared and the request of Secretary of the Treasury Glass for $150,000,000 with which to feed Austria caught the traders short and started a covering movement which ended in a sharp rally. At the close corn was off 1 to 2½c, the latter on January; oats, ¼ to 1⅛c; rye, 1⅝c, and barley, ½c. Pork, 30c; lard, 52½ to 55c, and short ribs, 45 to 55c for the day. Southwestern corn markets lost ⅜ to 2½c; Minneapolis oats were off ¾c, and Winnipeg ⅞c lower, with only 65 cars in there.

Closing prices, compared with a week ago, show corn 3⅝c higher for January and 2⅜ to 2½c up for other months. Oats ⅝c lower for May and ⅛c higher for July. Rye, 1⅝c, and barley, 1c higher. Pork up $1.10 to $1.40; lard, 32½ to 40c, and ribs, 35 to 47½c higher.

Bears Rule Corn Market.

Believers in lower prices for corn had things their own way the greater part of the day. There was heavy local and commission house selling, and, while there was free buying at $1.34 for May on resting orders, the buyers were finally satisfied and a drop to $1.33 followed, or 2⅜c under the previous day's close.

The pit element became oversold in the last half hour of trading, and when the announcement that congress had been asked to grant a credit of $150,000,000 to Austria to purchase food was received, there was a rush to cover.

A rally of over 1c from the inside figure followed, with the close at intermediate figures. Reports on the political situation in Germany had some effect on sentiment.

With the exception of a slight easing in the car situation in parts of central Illinois there was no material change in the condition in the corn belt, and country offerings were small in consequence.

Liquidation On in Oats.

General liquidation was on in oats, with heavy selling by commission houses that was attributed to a leading local long. Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down, and there was free selling by the local element. It was much harder to trade the buying than the selling. At the inside figure prices were off 1¾@2¼c. The proposed loan to Austria, removal of hedges against sales of 400,000 bu to the seaboard, and free buying by a large cash house caused short covering and a bulge at the last.

Outside markets materially outbid Chicago for cash grain downstate, and after the close St. Louis bid 85½c for No. 3 white, sixty day shipment, or 2½c over the final figure on Chicago May.

Longs in rye sold freely, and there was also pressure from bears. Cash houses were persistent buyers, with sales of 50,000 bu to the seaboard at 12½c over May, track Baltimore. No. 2 on track brought $1.82½@1.83, or 1c under May. Receipts, 11 cars.

Barley offerings were small and in good demand, with prices firm to 1c higher. Spot sales were at $1.43@1.58, and fancy might have brought $1.60. Receipts, 14 cars.

Timothy seed firm. Country lots, $9.00@13.00 per 100 lbs. Cloverseed strong. Country lots, $40.00@52.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 50c higher; March, $33.10 per bu of 60 lbs.

Heavy Selling of Lard.

The report that the German government has been overthrown and the British commission has been reselling lard was the basis for heavy selling of lard by packers and longs, and pressure was sufficient to carry prices down 52½ to 55c from the top, with the close 10 to 12c above the low point. Ribs finished at the bottom, with losses of 45 to 55c and pork lost 30c. There were deliveries of 400,000 lbs of lard and 1,000,000 lbs ribs on January sales. Cash trade is moderate and the buying not as good as of late, although eastern interests who have bought lard all week were on the buying side again. Packing in Chicago since Nov. 1 aggregated 2,006,000, or [illegible] hogs less than last year. There were predictions of a larger movement of all live stock. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Corn traders said that the element that has been conspicuous on the selling side on bulges around $1.37 for May corn during the week were the heaviest buyers on yesterday's break. The impression in certain quarters was that the big sales had been of short stuff and had been taken back. The local element was bearish and can see nothing but lower prices, while commission houses which have been bearish all week said at the close that with outside markets outbidding Chicago for corn in the interior, contradicting the theory that a larger run is imminent, there had been decline enough to put the market in better condition to respond to favorable influences. Political unrest abroad is looked upon by those who are seeking consolation on the bear side and they are against any permanent upward movement.

One of the largest local longs who has been active in oats for more than a month was an enormous seller yesterday through brokers. All the big commission houses pressed the selling side to an unusual degree, especially around 82c for May. Absorption of the offerings by one of the largest cash houses, round lots being taken, especially around 82½c, was responsible for the advance of 1¼c from the low point. Much of the buying on the break was against cash sales to the seaboard, one house doing a large business.

Claims were made of an improvement in the car situation in parts of Illinois. Inquiry from down state brought the reply from Cairo: "We are practically shut down, also other elevators in same fix on account of no empty cars. Railroads claim they have none, and it looks like a joke to us when such reports come out. Our reports from our Champaign buyer, who is thoroughly informed as to Illinois grain belt conditions, says cars are very scarce."

Schwarz & Co. delivered 1,000,000 lbs short ribs here yesterday, the first so far this month. They were taken largely by Cross, Roy & Saunders and Bartlett-Frazier. The 400,000 lbs lard delivered went to the Anglo company. Cross, Roy & Saunders sent out 300,000 lbs.

"A new class of buyers for May and July product dominated the provision market during the week, and finding only moderate opposition, soon became aggressive and confident of their position," says W. L. Gregson. "The present outlook is for continued firm and perhaps higher markets, but what selling is taking place is substantial and quite possible of delivery, and is not likely to be overdone, and the reverse can easily be the case with the buyers in the finals."

The business of E. W. Bailey & Co., heretofore carried on by the late E. W. Bailey, will, beginning Jan. 12, in accordance with the wishes of E. W. Bailey, as expresed in his will, be conducted by E. W. Bailey & Co., an Illinois corporation, the capital stock of which is controlled by E. W. Bailey's estate. The officers of the corporation will be George C. Bailey, first vice president; John A. Low, secretary, and R. E. McCarthy, treasurer. The latter has been with the Bailey house over forty years. George C. Bailey takes the Board of Trade membership of E. W. Bailey.

I. H. Simon has applied for membership in the Board of Trade. H. G. Newhall and Ernest Jacobs have posted their memberships for transfer.

The annual dinner of the New York oat trade was given yesterday. Chicago was represented by L. F. Gates, president of the Board of Trade, John Kellogg and a few other Milwaukee and Minneapolis grain men were also there.

Annual meeting of the Chicago Board of Trade association will be held Monday afternoon. Reports for the year will be issued showing what the board has done the last year.

When corn does move freely from the country the trade is likely to be surprised at the small amount that comes to Chicago. Last night St. Louis bid $1.43 for No. 3 white, $1.42 for No. 3 yellow, and $1.40 for No. 3 mixed in Illinois, 30 day shipment, with 1c premium for 5 day shipment.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 301,806,000 bu, corn 44,701,000 bu, and oats 103,885,000 bu. Last year receipts of wheat were 362,285,000 bu, corn 43,219,000 bu, and oats 175,140,000 bu.

WHEAT SUPPLIES

Joseph Wild, with E. W. Wagner & Co., estimates that the United States had a total supply of 997,000,000 bu wheat in all positions at the beginning of the season, and after allowing for bread and seed requirements and exports to Jan. 1 there remained 277,000,000 bu available for export on that date. He says the difficulty of exporting 120,000,000 to 150,000,000 bu wheat during the next six months is apparent. If 150,000,000 bu are shipped the United States would have a surplus of 127,000,000 bu on July 1. The world's Jan. 1 surplus he estimates at 507,000,000 to 537,000,000 bu.

HIDES CLEANED UP

In their weekly circular letter of Friday Bolles & Rogers company say: "There has been heavy trading in the packer market, both in native and branded hides, cleaning up the balance of the 1919 slaughter, aside from a few selections. The clean-up of packer hides, nothwithstanding they were sold at a great sacrifice, has given the country market a better outlook and will do much to stabilize the leather market, which has been rather shaky on many lines for some time past. We are also advised that the country kill will hardly be up to usual volume. In view of this, coupled with the fact that there are no surplus stocks of hides anywhere, we cannot see what is going to prevent a steady demand for hides at good prices."

A Prominent Chicago Merchant Said:

"I am a better business man when I have no outside worries. Let the other man have investment worries—I refuse. Perhaps I don't make over 5½ per cent on my money, but I don't pay an income tax. Municipal Bonds have not lost a nickel for me in twenty years. The other man pays the taxes, but I get the benefit by buying tax-secured Municipal Bonds. My experience has been that municipalities pay the principal and interest on their loans promptly—they have paid me for twenty years. I am never worried and have my mind free to run my business."

Put your money in Municipal Bonds and forget your worries. 5% to 5½%, exempt from Federal income tax and exempt from worry, is worth investigation. Send for our descriptive circular on one of the following Municipal Bonds today without fail:

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Answers to inquiries are based upon information which THE TRIBUNE believes reliable, fair, and unprejudiced, but beyond the exercise of care in securing such information THE TRIBUNE assumes no responsibility.

Inquiries must bear the signature and address of writer in order to receive attention. Answers thought to be of public interest will be published. If an answer is not of general interest it will be mailed provided stamp is inclosed. Address letters to Investors' Guide.

Interested in Safe Investments Only.

The Investors' Guide is conducted to advise people who wish the greatest possible degree of security for their investment. It does not consider the prospects of making large returns on the money put out. It does not mean by this that speculative investments are necessarily wrongful. The wrong comes when ventures, speculative in their nature, are represented as being absolutely secure. If a man wishes to risk his capital in the hope of a big return and recognizes that he is risking his capital, that is one thing. If a man or woman wishes to be absolutely sure that an investment will not be lost, this person must be content with a much smaller return. It is for people of the latter type that the Investors' Guide is conducted.

There are many projects honestly conceived which have good prospects of bringing large returns. With these, however, the Investors' Guide has no relation. It concerns itself with security of principal and only with that.

Baltimore and Ohio.

M. C.—The Baltimore and Ohio prior lien 3½s have a first lien on 703 miles of main track and a first collateral lien on 378 miles. Although the road is earning only part of its interest charges, these bonds are entitled to a good rating. They sell a little below the level of equally good bonds probably because 3½ per cent bonds are unpopular.

Brief Answers.

M. E. C., Indianapolis, Ind.—The Great American Refining company has an authorized capital of $10,000,000 and operates a refinery at Jennings, Okla. No details are available. The company has only a moderate commercial rating.

C. K.—Albaugh Dover stock is quoted nominally at 50 bid, 55 asked. Ad-Photoscope is purely speculative as far as we know.

The Franklin Sedan, $3935—freight and war tax paid. Averages 10,000 miles per set of tires and 20 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Some are justly laughed at for keeping their money foolishly; others for spending it idly. He is the greatest fool that lays it out in a purchase of repentance. —Benj. Franklin.

Any Weather Is Franklin Weather

OUT in the cold for hours—perhaps for days in an unheated garage—no need to worry about the Franklin freezing. It carries no water.

No matter how cold the gasoline, or how poor, the Franklin Electric Carburetor Heater vaporizes it almost instantly. And from the dash you may adjust the supply of hot air to the carburetor to get the most efficient mixture in any weather.

These are the simple facts of Franklin superiority in cold weather. Franklin performance in warm weather is equally notable.

There is no water cooling system to boil, hence the motor cannot overheat. To prove it, 116 Franklin cars ran 100 miles each on low gear in 10 hours' time without stopping the engines.

Try two miles of low gear running at 10 miles per hour or better with any water cooled car and you will get an idea of the marvelous cooling system in the Franklin car.

What Is Economy?

If you don't care how much trouble your car is, you don't want the Franklin. If you buy a car as a plaything and not as a utility, perhaps you don't need a Franklin.

But if you are past the stage of motoring where you find pleasurable excitement in discussing some of your car's peculiarities or difficulties, the Franklin is designed for you.

If economy of nervous energy is important to you—if care-free service is what you want from a motor car—the Franklin is your ideal car.

These things are genuine economies even though you may not be able to measure them in dollars. But the Franklin offers dollar economy, too.

Operating Economy

The biggest cost in operating any car is depreciation—although few ever figure it. Franklin owners are urged to figure it, because no matter how far a Franklin car has run or how many years it has served, it is, our records show, worth a larger proportion of its list price than any comparable car.

This is true because years and years of service are built into the Franklin car. It is impossible to build a car of finer material or closer workmanship. With its light weight construction the Franklin has to be especially good. Its strength must come from quality and not from cast iron.

For the last eighteen months several thousand Franklin cars have averaged better than 12,500 miles per set of tires. This from records kept by Franklin owners.

Similar records also show an average of more than 20 miles per gallon of gasoline.

On these two items alone a Franklin owner saves from $25.00 to $50.00 a month compared with the expense of running any other fine car.

Franklin Performance

The things a Franklin car will do, do not seem real when told in words. They are so unusual.

In a Franklin car you simply cannot feel a jolt. The car absorbs it before it gets to you.

Skidding in the Franklin is almost impossible. It is surefooted on any pavement.

You may give the steering wheel a sudden jerk one way or the other and the car will come back to its original direction.

You can drive all day at 40 miles per hour over roads which are desperately uncomfortable in a much heavier car at half the speed. You can venture anywhere, not only in a Franklin open car but in a Franklin Sedan, at the same speed and with the same relaxation in driving.

If you have ever toured you have discovered that a certain number of miles per day is all you care to do—it may be 150 or possibly 250 miles. Any more than that tires you.

But you can imagine what the superior driving comfort of a Franklin must be from the fact that Franklin owners habitually tour from 200 to 400 miles per day. Such easy traveling is not possible in any other car.

Get the Facts First

Before you buy a car, get the Franklin facts straight in your mind by a Franklin road test. You will discover that the Franklin will outperform any car you have ever driven

Bear in mind what shrewd old Benjamin Franklin said: "Some are justly laughed at for keeping their money foolishly; others for spending it idly. He is the greatest fool that lays it out in a purchase of repentance."

Your skin needs Different kinds of Care at Different Times

Before you go out, protect your complexion from the blighting cold this way

More and more women are discovering how they can remain powdered and free from shine for five or six hours. Before powdering they apply a bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream

DO respect the individuality of your own skin! So many people forget that their skins have as much character, as much temperament, as they have themselves.

Your skin is not a piece of fabric that can always be cared for in the same way. It is a living thing which has different needs at different times.

IN cold weather, for example, your complexion is quite unlike its usual self. The exquisite satin texture which it has in summer, in winter is often lost. It is the irritating action of the cold, combined with the withering effect of dry furnace heat that robs it of its oil and makes it harsh and dry.

In winter you must give your skin a special kind of care to counteract these influences.

Before you go out, rub a tiny bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream into your skin. It disappears instantly, leaving your face soft and smooth. There is no oil in Pond's Vanishing Cream, so it never reappears in a wretched greasy shine—and it gives your skin the protection it needs from chapping and roughening.

THEN, about powdering—just because when the weather is warm and your skin is moist you can get the powder to go on smoothly and stick on for a while, do not expect it to stay on in winter without a powder base. Your skin offers a very different surface to the powder then.

Before you powder, rub a tiny bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream into your face. Instantly it will disappear, leaving the skin softened. Now see how smoothly the powder goes on, how natural it looks. It will stay on two or three times as long as ever before. Because it is without oil, Pond's Vanishing Cream can never reappear in a shine.

HAVE you ever stared in the glass and wondered miserably what gave your skin that dull, lifeless look?

Very, very often a dull skin is only one that is improperly cleansed.

At night before retiring is the occasion when your skin should have a special kind of cleansing. Only with a good oil cream can the dust that has been working into the pores all day be removed. Before retiring give your face a thorough cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream. The first time you do this you will be mortified and delighted at the amount of dust that comes out. Pond's Cold Cream has just the amount of oil to make it best adapted to cleansing the skin and clearing up clogged pores.

WATCH out for the times when your face looks lined and your skin lacking in vitality. These are the times you need massage. Pond's Cold Cream is made exactly the consistency to work well into the pores and give a perfect massage.

Your skin needs two creams, one with and one without an oil base

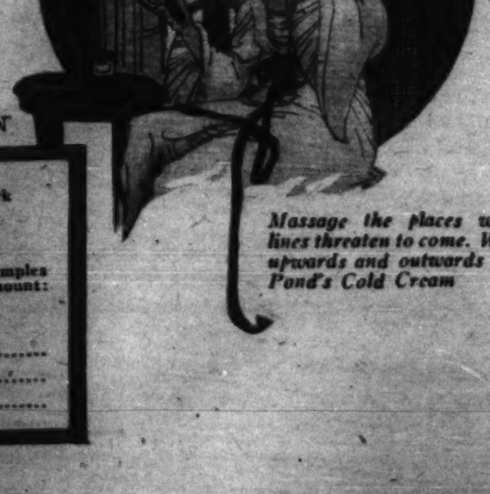
For a powder base, for preventing chapping or for a quick freshening up, you cannot use a cream which contains oil. You need Pond's Vanishing Cream for use in the day or evening. It contains no oil and never reappears in a wretched, greasy shine.

For cleansing, and for massage, your skin needs Pond's Cold Cream. It has just enough oil to enable it to get well into the pores and to remove the dust and dirt lodged deep in them, and just enough body to make it perfect for massage.

Neither of these creams fosters the growth of hair or down.

Get a jar or tube of each cream today, at any drug or department store. With these two creams you can give your skin the different kinds of care it needs at different times. It will be a revelation to you to see how lovely your skin can be.

The tiny clinging dust specks that work deep into the skin should be removed each night with Pond's Cold Cream



Massage the places where lines threaten to come. Work upwards and outwards with Pond's Cold Cream

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

DORIS MAY and DOUGLAS MACLEAN will have to share a caption together. Reason? Why, they're twins, you know! Meaning that both were recently created stars and at the same time by Thomas Ince.

Miss May used to be Miss Lee—these girls do have such a penchant for changing their cognomens! She was born in Seattle, Wash., in 1902, and educated at a convent there. Her first work for the screen was "doubling" for Mary Pickford in "The Little American." Then she played in a number of pictures with Charles Ray, and was loaned to the Mission Productions for "Send Him Away with a Smile." She's 5 feet 2 inches high—suts a bid dirl!—weighs 117 pounds, and has golden hair and blue eyes.

Mr. LacLean is a minister's son—and you may not believe it, but his father is said to be quite interested in his budding genius. It was dad's idea to have this young man become an expert mechanical engineer, and with this project in view he sent him to Northwestern university. Somehow or other, though, the boy was of a different mind. He wanted to go on the stage. And he did go on the stage, his first work being with Maude Adams in a curtain-raiser. Later he appeared in "Peter Pan," and so the bridge building business lost a recruit.

There'll be more to tell about Mr. MacLean's picture work when he has played in a few more pictures. But in the May-MacLean debut production, "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave," he was a whiz, I thought!

An Easy Way To Remove Wrinkles

Smiles and frowns—both cause wrinkles—because they stretch and crease the outer skin. But if neglected, wrinkles soon become deep and are hard to remove.

A healthy, vigorous skin is quite elastic, expanding and contracting naturally. But if the skin is neglected, it becomes too dry or too oily and loses its firmness and elasticity.

If your skin has become loose, flabby, or sags and is wrinkled, the new astringent skin treatment, with Graham Beauty Secret, will quickly restore it to its natural, healthy, vigorous condition.

Try this treatment. Before retiring, wash the face with warm water—not too hot. Do not use soap. Dry thoroughly—and apply Graham Beauty Secret—a soothing, astringent gray paste. Do not rub or massage the skin. When the paste has dried thoroughly, remove it with warm water, and apply Graham Skin Pure.

This treatment will tighten the cuticle or outer skin—nourish the cutis or inner skin tissues—smooth away the wrinkles—restore the natural elasticity—stimulate the circulation of the blood in the underlying tissues, and make your skin delightfully smooth, fine textured and vigorous—radiant with the glow of health.

The astringent skin treatment tightens the skin—also contracts coarse, enlarged pores, draws out blackheads, lifts up sagging skin, and bleaches a sallow, discolored skin without the slightest irritation or injury.

HOW TO GET GRAHAM BEAUTY SECRET

The better class of shops and toilet counters can supply you with Graham Beauty Secret and Skin Pure. If your dealer cannot—send us the coupon with $2, and we will mail you a full size jar of each—postage and war tax prepaid—with booklet, "Graham Astringent Skin Treatment" that gives complete instructions. Or—we will send the booklet Free if you give your dealer's name.

Prima Donna

Prima Donna Dresses offer the large woman, for the first time, the opportunity to wear gowns of queenly charm and satisfying beauty, at moderate cost.

Looking at them on the rack or in the hand gives no idea of their real charm. They must be tried on to appreciate how they accentuate the best lines and tactfully disguise the poorer ones.

Therefore, in asking for them in your favorite store, insist on trying them on.

FOOTPRINTS ON THE SANDS OF TIME are well enough, but the next generation of Americans, in many cases, will have something more substantial to leave behind them. Footprints of children as a positive means of identifying lost or kidnapped youngsters are beginning to be used extensively by the police in several cities. In the picture Inspector Joseph Faurot, New York's famous fingerprint expert, is explaining the system to a mother at the New York bureau of missing persons.

The TEENIE WEENIES

THE HOSPITAL WAS READY JUST IN TIME

BY WM. DONAHEY

IT was a cold, windy evening. The Teenie Weenies sat about the tiny fireplace in the old shoe house and listened to the wind as it howled through the branches of the rose bush high above the roof.

"This is just the sort of weather that gets under my skin," growled Grandpa as he pulled his chair nearer the fire.

"It's mighty good weather for a spell of sickness," commented the Old Soldier. "It's a good thing we have the hospital, for if we had an epidemic of sickness we'd have an awful time takin' care of the sick in this old shoe house, as we are crowded in here now as thick as ants."

"Well, we couldn't get very many in the hospital," said the Doctor. "There is only space for four beds now."

"That's not very many. That's what I say," said Paddy Pinn.

"Well," said the Doctor, "you see there's my office, the operating room, a room for the nurse, a place for special food to be cooked and a ward of four beds. That is a great deal to crowd into a cigar box, even if it is a big one."

"Of course, in the summer time, the porch on top of the hospital could be used," said the Lady of Fashion, who was sewing beside the tiny reading lamp. "But in the winter it isn't of much good, unless it could be fixed up with windows."

"That's the idea!" cried the Doctor. "It wouldn't be much work to put windows in, and then we would have a real hospital which would take care of everybody in case of a spell of sickness."

The little people discussed the idea of enlarging the hospital, and before they want to bed that night they had made arrangements to start the work the very next day.

Several of the little men found an old automobile curtain which furnished enough isin-glass to inclose the sides. A stove was put up which was made out of two thimbles, and in a couple of days the work was done; but not a day too soon, for that very night the Dunce went to bed without his supper and that was a very sure sign that he was sick.

The next morning the Dunce was still sick and several other Teenie Weenies complained, so the Doctor was very busy for a time.

"This looks very much like mumps," said the Doctor after he had examined the patients. "Send out for a pickle, General, and we'll soon find out whether it is or not."

In a short time three Teenie Weenies brought a small pickle up to the shoe house, and the Doctor quickly cut off a small piece with an ax and carried it in to the Dunce. The Dunce tasted the pickle at the Doctor's suggestion and then he let out such a howl he scared everybody in the house and caused the Cook to spill a thimble of soup he was putting on the stove for dinner.

"Jimminie c-c-c-crickets!" bellowed the Dunce. "I'm killed, I'm killed!"

"It's the mumps," said the Doctor. "Now get him over to the hospital as soon as possible."

The poor Dunce was taken to the hospital immediately, and that afternoon the Clown, the Sailor, Gogo, Zip, Tess, and the Lover twins followed him.

The Doctor watched over the patients with the greatest care and the Lady of Fashion and Mrs. Lover took turns nursing, while the Turk kept the tiny stoves filled with wood.

In a few days the little patients felt much better and they spent their time in the big sunny room on the second floor of the tiny hospital playing all sorts of games and telling stories.

"Crickety!" exclaimed the Dunce one morning, "I wish we could always have the mumps, so we could stay here, for it's a dandy place to live, and we get such good things to eat, too."

"How would you like some pickle, Dunce?" asked the Clown with a wink at the Sailor.

"Ah, bah!" shouted the Dunce and he stuck out his tiny tongue at the Clown.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

The Whimsical Three

SIR JULIAN KAND & CO.

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

Concerning the Somewhat Surprising Adventure of Lady Felicia, the Prince and the Scrap of Paper.

ONLY a woman, and certainly of all women there present, only Cynthia Bellamy, could have been capable of so deliberate and calculated an act of cruelty. She came in fresh from her golf match to the winter garden at Ranelagh, where Felicia was the central figure in a somewhat extensive tea party, comprising, among others, Sir Julian Kand, the great banker, and Van Clarence Smith, the young American polo player, and threw her bombshell with deadly malice.

"You've all heard the news, of course?"

They were all interested. Afterward, Felicia felt that she ought to have been warned by the glitter in her quondam friend's eyes, but the news itself was too unexpected.

"Glendower's engaged to Maggie Foljambe. It will be in the Morning Post tomorrow."

There were murmurs of incredulity, almost of stupefaction, and whilst Mrs. Bellamy gave confirmatory particulars, every one avoided looking at the person who might be supposed to be chiefly concerned. Van Clarence Smith, under the pretext of lighting a cigaret, was standing in front of her, interposing his six feet two inches between the two women. Not that Felicia showed any signs of needing such protection. After that first queer look of despair which had flashed for a moment in her eyes, her behavior was entirely normal. Mrs Bellamy, a little disappointed, but still excited with her news, fluttered off to join her own friends, and a few minutes later the tea party, into which she had introduced an element of sensation, was broken up. Sir Julian drew Felicia on one side.

"Lady Felicia," he begged earnestly, "will you allow me to take you back to town in my car?"

"You are very kind," she replied, "but I think Mr. Van Clarence Smith——"

"I ask this as a special favor," he persisted. "I should be glad of a few minutes' private conversation with you."

She looked at him in faint surprise. He was a tall man, with a heavy black mustache, sallow cheeks, a somewhat lumpy figure, but keen, black eyes and slow, forceful manner. One of the richest men in Europe, he was also one of the most confirmed bachelors living. A momentary thought brought a queer light into her eyes. She laughed softly to herself.

"I don't suppose Van will mind," she said. "Yes, I'll come, with pleasure. I shall at any rate be sure of reaching home safely. Forgive me."

She turned aside for a moment and called her escort over to her.

"Van," she whispered, "I am driving home with Sir Julian."

"The mischief you are!" he answered, a little aggrieved. "What's the matter with the Renault?"

"Nothing," she replied, "but I just want to do this."

"Where shall you be tonight?" he asked.

"Dining somewhere with you, if you'll have me. I am certainly not going to the Foljambes' dance. A grillroom please. I shall wear a hat and veil."

"The Milan at eight?"

She nodded and would have passed on, but he detained her.

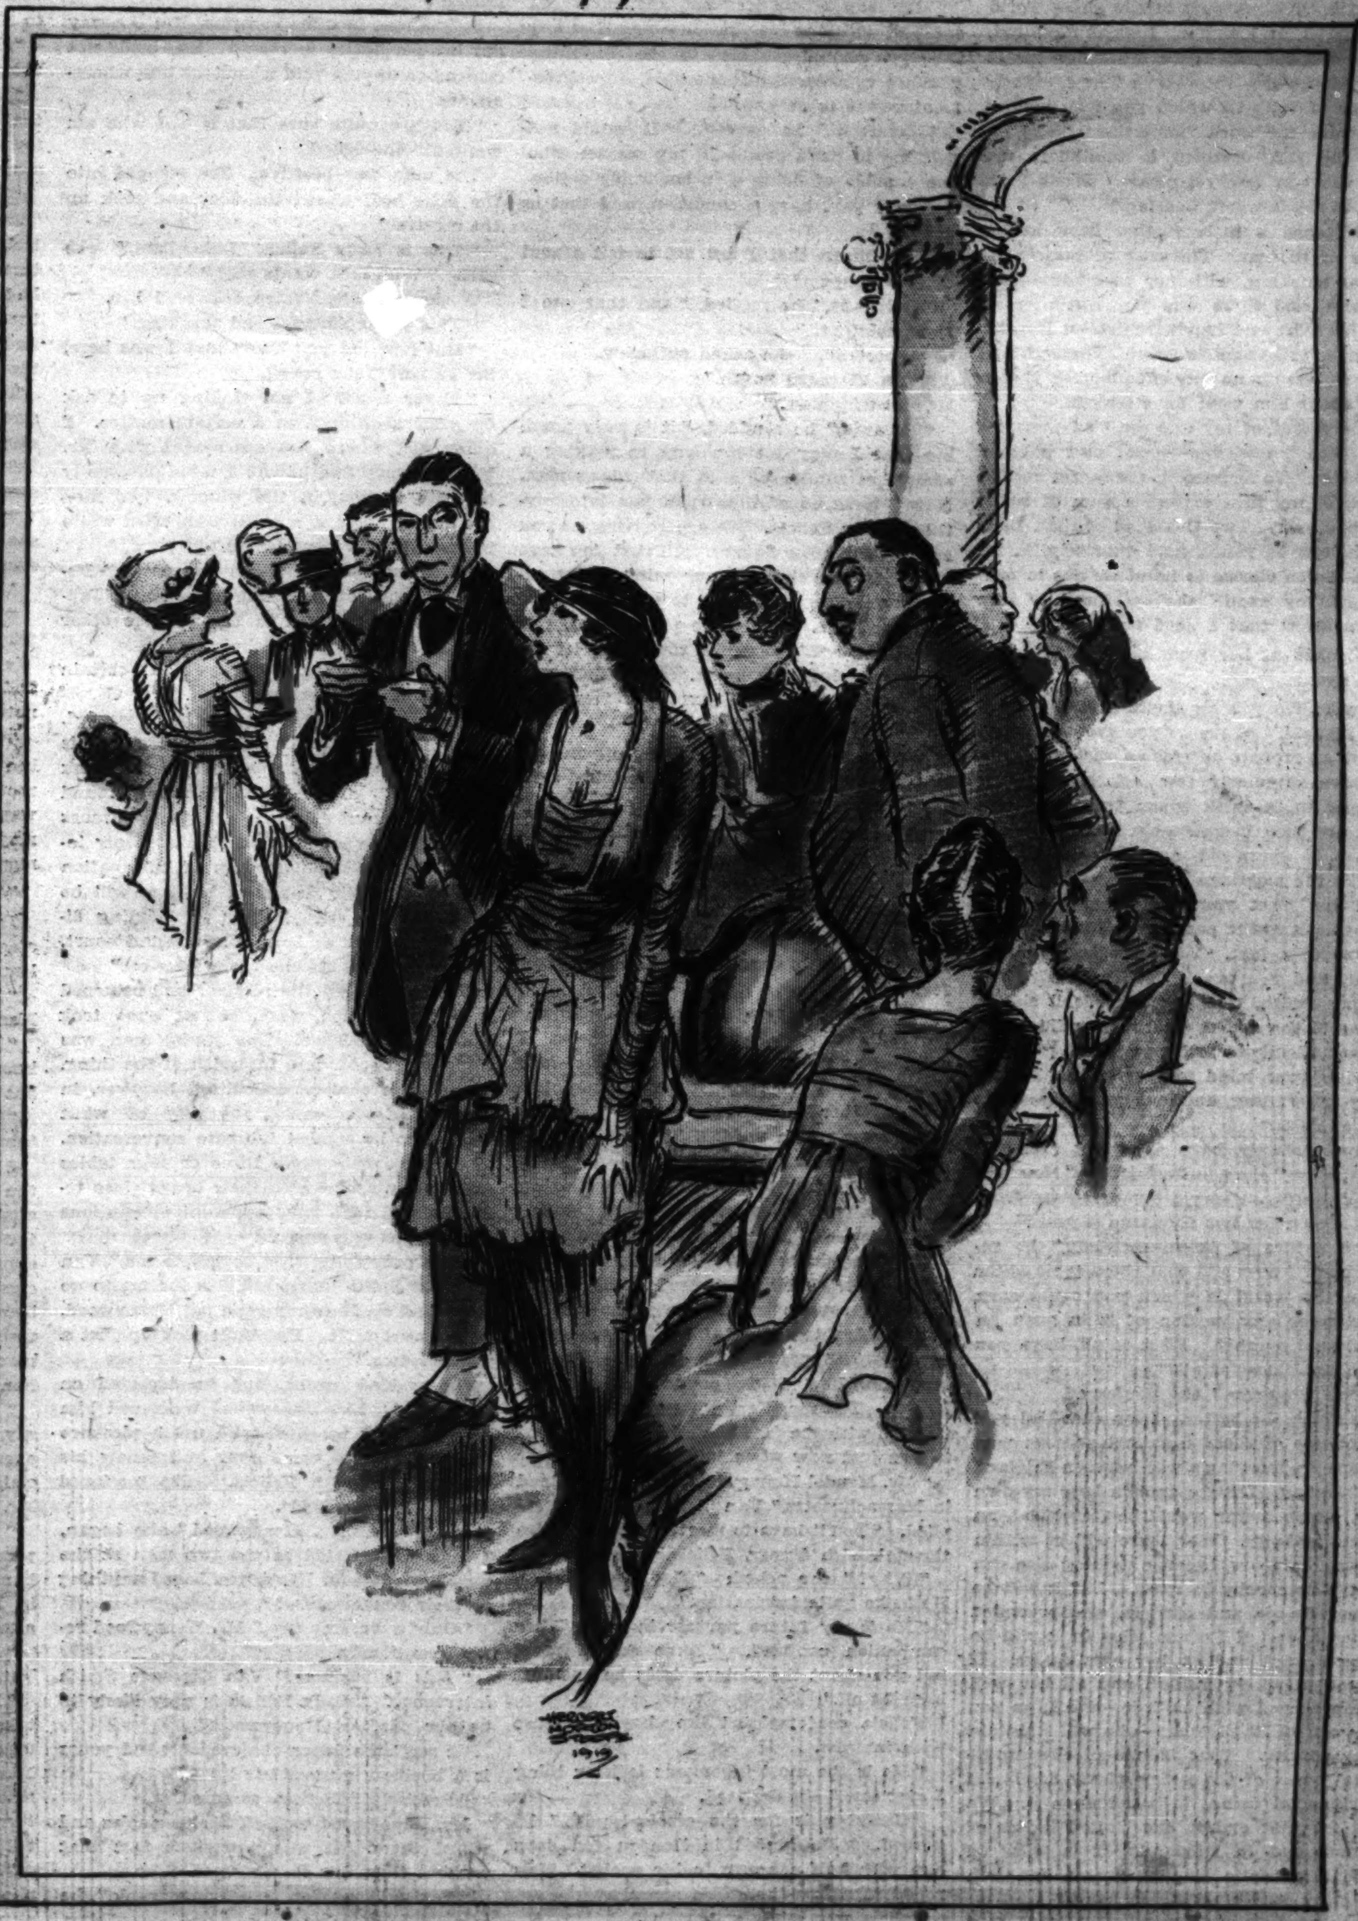
"Say, what does the old boy want with you?"

"I'll tell you at dinner time," she promised. "He simply said that he wanted to speak to me particularly."

There was a distinct frown upon the young man's face.

"You don't think he wants to marry you?" he exclaimed.

"I can't imagine it," she sighed. "Of course, one never knows. We may have mistaken his character all these years. He may be one of these secret philanthropists brimful of heart and sympathy."



Afterward, Felicia felt that she ought to have been warned, but the news itself was too unexpected. "Glendower's engaged to Maggie Foljambe. It will be in the Morning Post tomorrow."

The young man's hand tightened upon the riding whip which he had been holding.

"What about Glendower, Felicia?" he asked.

She shrugged her shoulders.

"Well?"

"Did he give you any intimation of this?"

"None."

Van Clarence Smith hesitated. There were just a few times when he looked a little like a prize fighter. This was one of them.

"Look here, Felicia," he said, "you haven't a brother. The only people left to you seem to be old fossils."

She shook her head firmly.

"It won't do, Van," she said. "Glendower has behaved abominably, of course, but after all I had my chance. At [illegible] o'clock."

Felicia took her place in the sixty horse power Rolls-Royce and in due course was spirited away toward London. She was a little confused by the unexpectedness of what had happened—the engagement of a man whom she had made up her mind to marry—but she was yet conscious of some curiosity as to what her companion might have to say to her. He did not leave her long in doubt. While they were still in the avenue he turned toward her.

"Lady Felicia," he began, "I am one of the richest men in the world, and one of the most successful bankers. I am also an incorrigible bachelor."

"Thank heavens!" she exclaimed. "I was afraid you were going to propose to me!"

"Nothing," he assured her coolly, "is further from my thoughts. On the other hand, I may be in a position to be of service to you."

For a moment her eyebrows were raised. He proceeded, however, in the same cold and calculating voice.

"I am not supposed to know, of course, that you are in need of either sympathy or assistance. That is part of the sham world we live in. I am above it. I speak my mind, and when I see the truth I am not afraid of it. Hence my success. I know exactly the tone of voice in which you feel inclined to murmur the word 'impertinent,' and exactly the look destined to annihilate me. Keep them in reserve, please. What I am going to say is worth hearing."

She leaned a little further back in her corner of the car. The odor of his cigar—he was smoking, with her permission—was aromatic, and there was a quaint perfume from his shirt and handkerchiefs of Russian leather or some similar scent. These things, however, were in no way effeminacies. Everything about him went for strength.

"The secret of my success," he went on, "has been knowledge—social and political knowledge. To acquire it, the secret service branch of my firm expend a sum of 50,000 pounds a year. Two thousand of that, Lady Felicia, can be yours, paid quarterly, in advance, if you choose to be of service to me."

"Upon my word!" she exclaimed. "How do you know that I need money?"

He looked at her from under his heavily lidded eyes.

"I will give you an abstract of the situation," he said, "so far as you are concerned. You are an orphan, and for an ancient family you have singularly few relatives. Your aunt and uncle, with whom you have been living, are poor, disagreeable, and intolerant. You are 26 years old, and you have failed to make the marriage they expected of you. When you meet your aunt tonight she is going to ask you to pack up and leave. That I know for a fact. You have two hundred a year, and you are in love with Mr. Van Clarence Smith, who is on the debit side of fortune to the extent of about a million dollars, and Glendower, whom you had probably made up your mind to marry, has become weary of waiting and engaged himself to some one else."

"You certainly have a correct grasp of the situation," she admitted drily. "Now will you explain what services you require from me in return for two thousand a year?"

"The nature of them, certainly," he replied, "and I may add that there is no other way in the world in which you could earn that sum or any portion of it in such an unequivocal manner. First of all, have you any political ideas at all?"

"None whatever," she confessed.

"So much the better. I am thankful you are not one of those fanatical persons who go about prophesying a war between England and Germany. Let me explain here my own views. Such a war would be fratricidal, an absolute insanity. War there will be within the next ten years, because nothing else can save the monarchy in Russia, but it will be between Russia and Austria, and provoked by Russia, and if France joins in it will be her own fault and at her own desire. If England is wisely guided, and all her well wishers abroad wish as I do—and I, as you know, am an Englishman—she will maintain her insularity. That is one of the fundamental bases of the policy of my firm. All our financial future is based upon it. We work for that end in the United States of America and in England. It is work in which a patriotic English person can join with clean hands. Will you help?"

"But what can I do?" she demanded. "Of course I would help if I could."

"You would have to leave that to me," he said. "I should want you to maintain your present circle of friends in London. You have connections and friends who hold high positions in the army, the navy, and politics. Through you, in indirect fashion, I may sometimes be able to influence people whom I could not otherwise reach. With your aid I may sometimes obtain information from which I should be otherwise debarred. And let me tell you this, Lady Felicia," he concluded, "I have others helping me who bear names as honored as your own."

She moved in her place a little uneasily.

"It seems perfectly wonderful," she admitted, "and yet, in a way, it makes one feel uneasy."

"It should not," he said firmly. "Remember that we work for the greatest of all causes—we work to keep England out of war. You could not undertake a more patriotic task."

"You were born a German," she remarked thoughtfully.

"True," he acknowledged, "but I am a naturalized Englishman, and by far the greater part of my fortune is invested in England and America. Therefore, you see, I have at least as much reason as you have for being patriotic. You consent, of course?"

"How can I help it?" she answered. "I consent, with one reservation—that if at any time you should ask me to do anything which I considered dishonorable, our agreement comes to an end."

"Naturally," he agreed. "It would not suit me to have people in my service who are capable of doing a dishonorable action. I on my part have a condition, and that is secrecy."

"You mean that I am not to tell a soul of our compact?"

"Only one," he replied, "and that one I shall nominate."

"Who is it?" she asked curiously.

"Van Clarence Smith."

"But why Van?"

"Because," he confided, "it is very possible that I may see my way to making a somewhat similar offer to that young man. Now I have no wish to rush you into anything, Lady Felicia. We are arriving, as you see, in Grosvenor Square. All that you have to do, if you change your mind about accepting my proposition, is to send me a line to Park Lane. If, on the other hand, you remain favorably disposed toward it, let me know your banker's name. After that, you will simply wait until you hear from me. You understand?"

The car had stopped, and the footman was holding the door open. Felicia laughed softly as she stepped out.

"A most absorbing ride," she declared. "You have really almost made me forget my troubles, Sir Julian."

Van Clarence Smith heard Felicia's story at dinner that evening with mingled suspicion and enthusiasm. Felicia laughed the former to scorn.

"Sir Julian has no designs upon me," she assured him. "A woman always knows. I am just as mystified as you are as to how he expects to get value for his money, but that is rather his lookout, isn't it?"

The young man nodded.

"What's the alternative?"

"Leicestershire and a hundred and eighty a year, a post as companion, or the stage," Felicia replied.

"Nothing doing there," he declared firmly.

"I agree," Felicia assented. "Of course, the thing sounds rather like a chapter out of the 'Arabian Nights,' but on the other hand, two thousand a year to Sir Julian is something like a five-pound note to me . . . Tell me, Van, who is the queer little man with the face like a boy's who bowed to you just now when he came in?"

"Mr. Mendel Honeywood of Okehampstead in Massachusetts," Van Clarence Smith replied. "You'll have to meet him when we're through with dinner, Felicia."

"Why?" she asked. "Not that I mind. He looks quite fascinating."

"He is my future partner in crime," her companion confided. "Some day I must tell you about the picture deals he has just brought off."

Felicia contemplated the boyish figure with interest.

"He is the most ingenuous looking thing I ever saw," she declared.

"Useful phiz for the crooked path," he agreed. "He landed in London ten days ago with half a crown in his pocket. He's roped in a few thousands already."

Felicia was slightly disturbed.

"Just what are your plans, Van?" she inquired.

The young man's face became set.

"Felicia," he said, "there's a matter of five hundred millions in my family—dollars, I mean—not pounds. If the history of the railroad deals by which most of that was made could be published, I should say that there isn't a Van Clarence Smith living, except myself, who hasn't qualified for Sing Sing. The whole of my family have been thieves, buying and dodging the law the whole of the time. I don't set up to be any better. I am going to do what I can for myself—within the law, if I can, outside it if I can't. And the little man over there is my chosen partner."

Felicia laughed softly.

"What a trio!" she exclaimed. "Here am I, a sort of secret service, semi-political adventuress; your little friend with the wistful face a professional crook; and you his pupil! what a pity——"

Felicia did not finish her sentence. She was suddenly aware that the attendant from the telephone box outside was standing before their table. He bowed as she looked up inquiringly.

"Lady Felicia Lakenham?"

"That is my name."

"You are wanted on the telephone, madam."

Felicia rose in some surprise. On the way out her perplexity increased. She could not remember having told a soul of her whereabouts.

"You are quite sure that it is I who am wanted?" she asked.

The man was positive. She stepped into the little box, closed the door and took up the receiver.

"This is Lady Felicia Lakenham," she said. "Who is it wants me?"

A slow, familiar voice answered her.

"This is Sir Julian Kand speaking."

"But how did you know that I was here, Sir Julian?" she asked.

"Never mind. I am ringing up to ask for your assistance in a certain matter. I know just where you are seated with Mr. Van Clarence Smith. At a table diagonally opposite to you, in the window, two men are dining. One is a small man, with white hair and sallow complexion."

"I know the two whom you mean," Felicia acknowledged. "One looks like a Japanese who has lived in Europe, the other like an English professional man."

Sir Julian's tone betrayed a certain amount of satisfaction.

"You have observation," he observed. "The little man is a Japanese nobleman. His companion was once a cashier in the Bank of England, although he has now found more important employment. They discuss tonight a subject in which I am deeply interested. The slightest item of information concerning their doings or sayings will be acceptable to me. I shall be starting directly to pay a call at No. 89 Milan court. Please call and see me there later on."

Felicia replaced the receiver and returned to her companion, whom she at once took into her confidence. The young man was disposed to enter into the spirit of the thing. There were obvious difficulties, however, in the way of overhearing anything of what seemed to be a most intimate conversation. The two men were three or four tables away, they spoke with their heads close together, and with very apparent precautions against eavesdroppers.

"The only thing that occurs to me," Van Clarence Smith suggested, "is for me to go down and speak to my little pal Honeywood, at the next table. He might pick up just a word or two."

She nodded assent, and he departed on his errand. Mr. Honeywood welcomed him cordially, and accepted with much pleasure an invitation to come over and renew his acquaintance with Felicia. She motioned him to sit by her side.

"Tell me, Mr. Honeywood," she began, "we are interested in the two men at the next table to you. Have you heard anything of their conversation?"

"Only a word or two," Mr. Honeywood replied cautiously.

"This is business," Van Clarence Smith intervened. "Lady Felicia is very likely to be our partner, Honeywood."

"I see," the latter observed. "And yours is a business interest?"

"Precisely!" Felicia assented.

Mr. Honeywood took off his spectacles and wiped them. It was a curious fact that without them his face seemed older.

"You will pardon my being frank," he said. "I notice everybody and everything. It is a habit of mine. Those men, Lady Felicia, noticed you pointing them out to Mr. Van Clarence Smith. From that moment they hunched up together and have scarcely raised their voices above a whisper. So far as you two are concerned, you would do better not to take any more notice of them. If there's a word or two to be heard, you shall have it."

Mr. Honeywood went back to his place. His two neighbors were now rapidly approaching the close of their meal. The smaller man had drunk nothing but water, his companion a small whisky and soda. They were drinking coffee now without liqueurs. Mr. Honeywood, to all appearances, was buried in the evening paper for which he had sent.

"It's a queer world," Van Clarence Smith observed. "Those two men don't seem to be any more than a couple of harmless business men fixing up some sort of a deal, yet they've got old Kand going."

The persons under observation at that moment left their places, the foreigner signing the bill and tipping the waiter. They disappeared in the direction of the hotel. Mr. Honeywood laid down his paper. He looked across the room, and, though his summons was of the slightest, they both understood it. They left their places and made their way toward him. Mr. Honeywood rose to receive them.

"Say, waiter, one moment!" he exclaimed sharply.

The man, who had been about to remove the things from the adjoining table, turned toward the speaker and was dispatched for a special brand of cigars.

"They talked," Mr. Honeywood said simply, "like men who were hatching a plot. Just look at the table, though, before any one disturbs it. The little man with the white hair had a trick of moving his forefinger about the table cloth as he spoke. I believe you'll find some figures there. Look across toward the courtyard, with your back to the room."

They stood for a moment before the deserted table. Upon the table cloth were still clearly to be traced the marks of fingers. Felicia glanced at them and then turned away. It had been an affair of seconds.

"You are very observant, Mr. Honeywood," she said. "A one and eight noughts, whatever they may stand for."

Mr. Honeywood was pleased.

"That may or may not be useful to your friend," he remarked, "but it is interesting. We know now that they spoke of figures, and large figures, too. A one and eight noughts represents a hundred millions."

There was nothing else to be learned from the deserted table. They all three left the room together, Mr. Honeywood making his way into the lounge and Van Clarence Smith ringing the bell for the lift. At the last moment Felicia's courage failed her.

"Come with me," she begged.

He assented promptly. As they walked along the corridor of the fourth floor he leaned down toward her.

"Felicia," he began earnestly, "that fellow Kand——"

"Don't be silly," she interrupted. "I don't know what his interests in life do consist of, but he is certainly not a woman's man."

"What does he want to see you here for, then?"

She shrugged her shoulders and touched the bell of No. 89. The door was opened almost immediately by a maid, who ushered them into the sitting room. Sir Julian was standing upon the hearth rug, smoking a cigar. A few feet away a woman was seated before a typewriter—a dark-browed, massive woman. By her side was a little pile of manuscript. Sir Julian promptly introduced her.

"You know Miss Miller by name, I dare say," he observed. "She is the European agent for the American Playwrights' association. This is Lady Felicia Lakenham and Mr. Van Clarence Smith."

"A business woman, young people," the person designated remarked as she shook hands with them both. "I had a production in Paris last night, and only crossed this afternoon. Won't you be seated?"

"Shall I wait for Lady Felicia outside?" Van Clarence Smith suggested.

"By no means," Sir Julian replied. "I take it that you are in Lady Felicia's confidence, and I include you willingly in mine. Miss Miller, too, knows of my interest in the matter we have been speaking of," he added, turning to Felicia. "If you have anything to tell me, pray do not hesitate."

"I am afraid I have very little," she replied. "And what I have is due to the observation of a little friend of ours, who was seated at the next table. The man in whom you were particularly interested had a peculiar habit—I noticed it even where we sat—of tracing what seemed to be signs upon the table cloth with his forefinger. I glanced at the table cloth after he had left, and twice I found a one with eight noughts after it."

"A one and eight noughts," Sir Julian repeated. "One hundred millions!"

For a moment he stood quite still. Then his face and manner underwent a singular change. His eyes flashed with a sort of dull fury. He seized a cushion and flung it to the farther end of the room. He muttered some incomprehensible words to himself, words in some foreign language, but obviously profane. The veins upon his clenched fists suddenly stood out. Watching him closely, Felicia realized with amazement that he was to be much in love with her, and had little doubt but that she reciprocated the sentiment to a considerable degree. And the worst of it was that Spice had just discovered that he had fallen in love with her, himself.

Spice had made this astonishing discovery while winging his way home after having sent Lorenz' airplane tearing off into space valkyrie-like with its burden of slain. He realized that the joy of victory was centered in Marcia's approval. It was really Marcia's triumph. Her intelligence and courage had saved Aria's life, saved the crisis, made it possible for Spice to redeem himself after having played the fool for a number of weeks, wrought retribution on the wicked, possibly prevented future murderous attacks. Spice, an extremist, underwent a sudden and violent about face in his feeling toward Marcia. This maiden whom he had treated with the scant ceremony one might show a demirep became a demigoddess, was treated to a swift apotheosis in his esteem.

Then, as he sped onward through the air Spice leaped to the conclusion that she had compelled his admiration from the first, but because he resented her relationship the very force of the attraction she held for him had aroused his bitter hostility. He was now filled with a sudden, burning disgust for his unmanly perversity which he told himself was that of a spoiled, petulant child. To form an unreasoning prejudice against a lovely girl of sweet disposition and then because her charm and desirability are disturbing to treat her with scorn was an act unworthy a man and a soldier.

Once started on this train of shameful remorse Spice went from bad to worse. He could think of nothing else. It eclipsed the exultation of his achievement. He felt more like a chastened school boy than a victorious gladiator of the air. In the revulsion of his feelings he flew to the opposite extreme and was convinced that he had been in love with Marcia from the first and had wilfully misplaced his ardor. And now, he told himself, it was too late. Marcia and Isaacs had probably fallen in love with each other and in all honor he was bound to accept the result of his childish folly. Wherefore at fresh cross purposes he gazed at Marcia like the Peri at the gates of Paradise while Marcia wondered and asked with Omar:

"When all the Temple is prepared within,
why nods the Drowsy Worshipper outside?"

. . . .

Whether or not such a man as Bernardo Aria could be coerced into quitting the fight at the crucial moment because his only child, a daughter, was a prisoner in the hands of his deadly enemies, was a question which in no way concerned Mr. Christian Olesen, alias "Ole Bull."

This talented scoundrel had agreed to undertake the abduction of Esther Aria and to deliver her person at a certain small, yellow house not far from the quarantine station at Thompkinsville, Staten island, for which service successfully performed he was to receive $10,000, cash. Five times that sum would not have tempted Ole, but for the fact that his plan was one which entailed no danger to his life or liberty either in the event of success or failure. He intended that the girl should be a voluntary factor to her own custody and that such reasons as he might offer to obtain her consent should be true ones.

Ole was far too clever a crook to undertake the violent kidnapping of an able bodied girl and one who must be as carefully guarded as his prospective victim. But if he were able to persuade her to accompany him of her own accord and by means of representations which were not false, he did not see why he should run any particular risk of getting into serious trouble.

His specialty was persuading people to do things which might result to his material advantage, and he was an artist in his line. Nature had endowed him with many physical and temperamental qualifications for inducing people to part with whatever it was in their possession which he happened to want. He was tall and handsome with pleasing, clean-cut features which wore habitually a mirthful, kindly expression. His skin and eyes were clear, the latter of a keen and piercing blue. He had a highbred air and wore his well cut clothes like a gentleman. He had been an actor until it was noised about that members of the companies he played with were wont to suffer losses of money and jewels. He had also been a mounted policeman until dishonorably discharged for being convicted of blackmail and taking bribes. He had also done time for impersonating an officer of police.

Such was Ole, a good looking, plausible, and prepossessing young scoundrel, much favored of the fair sex, with winning manners and an easy flow of language which could talk the face off a grandfather's clock. With everything in his favor to earn an honest living he much preferred graft, which he found more lucrative and entertaining. In character he was neither vicious nor cruel, but merely what might be called, "a wrong 'un."

It took Ole about twenty minutes after his arrival on the scene of action to get some. Arriving at the yacht club, where nobody thought of questioning his nonchalant entry, he sauntered into the office, and looking through a window which opened on the veranda, immediately discovered a girl who precisely fitted the description furnished him, talking to a dark young man whom he correctly guessed to be Dr. Isaacs.

Ole turned to the desk, ostensibly to get a match, and with his back to the open window asked the steward if he could tell him who the young lady talking with Dr. Isaacs was. As chance ordained it, Marcia at this moment stepped over to the big telescope, which she turned on the departing Sylvia, and Esther, standing near was joined by Isaacs. The steward glanced out and said: "That is Miss Aria, sir." Thus was the false identity established in Ole's mind beyond the shadow of a doubt, though already sufficiently convincing through Tony's error.

It was an afternoon of fateful cross currents and the mischievous sprites which had set the ball rolling in an oblique direction continued to carry on. Isaacs and Esther went down to the landing, got into the launch, and returned to the house. Marcia had been forced into an acceptance to dine with one of her step-sisters and was therefore ready for almost any wild adventure which might excuse her failure to appear. Ole could never have persuaded Esther so much as to give him a few moments private attention, but Marcia, accustomed all her life to the exchange of casual remarks with strangers, was more amenable.

Wherefore, when about to order a car she was by no means dismayed at being addressed by Ole. He walked down the veranda to where she was sitting, raised his hat, and said in a quiet, self possessed way: "Miss Aria, may I say a few words to you on a matter which vitally concerns the safety of your father and Admiral Elting?"

places. I saved a little money once, but I went and got the 'flu' and that took it all."

The mother, arms folded across her lap, was listening as if stunned. What sort of an outside world was this that did not recognize that her daughter was an exceptional creature to be waited upon? She, her mother, had always understood—had willingly been the servant. Was this her Ellen, who had demanded her breakfast in bed, had scolded because the right hang had not been given to a gown—her Ellen, who used to come home with her shoulders thrown back, slowly removing her gloves, a bored expression on her pretty lips?

"Is it just a year that I have been gone, mother? No, I spent years in that furnished room. I think it must have been haunted by all the other lonesome souls that had used that same washbowl and pitcher and the thin towel. You reached it by a dark stairway that was dimly lit by a gas jet. There was the smell of leaking gas and the accumulation of generations of dust. There was the week when I couldn't pay the rent. Do you know what the streets of the city are like, mother, when you find that you have lost anchorage? You get to wondering what it is all about, this life of ours. You look up beyond the clatter of the streets and you see the stars blinking down. I had never really seen the stars before, mother—never really paid any attention to them.

"I used to stand in front of the big store windows at night, when the traffic was stilled," the girl continued after a pause. "I used to see young couples looking wistfully at the furniture sets. I saw girls like myself envying the expensive furs on the wax models. And I seemed to understand what other folks were thinking about, mother—their longings and anxieties and heart breaks and temptations. I was not the only person in the world with a desire in my heart. I was just an atom. Millions had lived before me and millions would follow. I would not always be young. It was last spring that I saw a Greek's window full of violets that were fading. They had been so beautiful for a few days with the dew on their petals, and then—that was life, mother. That night I noticed the crow'sfeet about my eyes. O, it had been so silly of me, mother, the notion that the world was made just for me—that God had made me beautiful and given me a beautiful voice, so that I, different from all others, should go petted through life."

"Ellen!"

"And the time came when I thought a good deal about you—the sacrifices you had made to keep my hands soft and send me away to school. And I realized how unappreciative I had been, how ridiculously I had taken everything for granted. And when it began to get cold again this winter, mother, and I heard the rattle of coal from wagon to bin, and I saw the bleak months stretching ahead, and I needed shoes that would cost so much more than ever, and the furnished room began to get shivery, and there was ice on the water pitcher—I got to thinking about this old burner here. I gave up, mother. Pride was all gone. I just wanted to come home. I was homesick for you—for this. And I came home. I'm all through."

Faded fingers stroked the black hair that bulged out at the ears in accordance with the moment's whim. For a long time they sat there, the wind brushing branches against the frosted panes, the clock ticking on the mantel, the cat purring on the rug.

With a sigh the girl arose to go to bed. At the stairway she turned back and crossed over to the piano that years before had been paid for so dearly.

Her fingers wandered over the yellow keys in a chord. Then she lifted her head, dreamily, wistfully, and the instrument responded plaintively to an old, old song. And when, after a bar or two, the girl sang softly in accompaniment, there was in her voice all the pathos of what she had learned of life.

She had barely finished when there was a knock at the door and old Mr. Meisner came into the room.

"Here's the package you wanted from downtown," he said to the mother.

"Ellen's home. Hadn't you noticed? She's here—here to stay."

"I know," nodded old Mr. Meisner. "I knew before I came in. I was at the door when she started to sing and I waited outside to listen. But she's not here to stay. I heard how she sings now. The world will claim and keep her when she tries again—a girl with a voice like that."

SPICE

SYNOPSIS.

Sydney Penfold Isham Chester Elting is his name, but his initials spell "Spice," and the nickname has stuck. Back from France, with nothing to do since his discharge from the aviation service, he stumbles on an unexpected adventure in the home of Bernardo Aria, a famous financier, where, by chance, he helps shoot down three would-be murderers, emissaries of a band of anarchists against whom Aria is secretly operating on behalf of the government. Aria needs some one to pilot him on night trips to Washington by airplane, and Spice jumps at the opportunity for excitement. He quickly encounters a disturbing element in the breezy advances of Marcia Briggs, his newly acquired stepsister. His father, an admiral, married a widow while his son was in France, and Spice resents this bitterly. Moreover, he finds himself infatuated with Aria's beautiful daughter, Esther. Marcia is irrepressible, however. At the Aria country home, to which the Elting yacht has brought the Eltings and Marcia for a visit, the girl comes upon Dr. Adrian Isaacs, the financier's chief aid, just as he has killed another of the plotters, a scoundrel named Johnson, who has been masquerading as the yacht's steward and has sneaked into the Aria hangar to disable the airplanes. From Isaacs Marcia learns that Spice has gone to town with one of the Aria automobiles to investigate a dubious dive known as the 101 club. A paper found on the dead steward indicates that this is the assassins' headquarters. When Spice telephones that his car has been stolen from in front of the club, Marcia takes a hand in the game. Being a born mimic, she telephones the club, simulating the voice of the dead Johnson, and commands the inmates to return the car forthwith. Then, by chance, she overhears talk of a plan to attack Spice and Aria from the air and shoot them down during one of their flights to Washington. Warned of this by Marcia, Spice executes a bold counter-stroke. With Isaacs' help he captures two of the conspirators who have been hanging about the neighborhood. One, an aviator named Tony, is tied up in the hangar while Spice takes with him the other handcuffed in the airplane seat usually occupied by Aria. In the battle which follows Spice's prisoner and the two occupants of the attacking plane are killed. Marcia, out for a swim at dawn, encounters Isaacs and the latter's story of Spice's exploit is interrupted by the surprising spectacle of the supposedly imprisoned Tony soaring away from the hangar in the Aria hydroplane.

ELEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

The Final Coup.

TONY, that ingenious adventurer, machinist, and airman, owed his astonishing escape to Oakes' passion for the sport of fishing. The alert minded criminal, finding himself securely manacled, or rather pedicled, to a heavy ringbolt let into the cement floor, suffered a few moments of dark despair. Isaacs, taking no chances on his being able to accomplish the Houdini trick of slipping his handcuffs, had attached him by the simple expedient of snapping one of the steel bracelets snugly around an ankle and the other to the ringbolt. Thus secured, it had seemed hardly worth while to place a guard directly over him, though the hangar was kept under observation.

For a few moments the situation looked rather bleak to Tony. He understood immediately Spice's plan and was forced to admire it. More than that, he greatly feared that it might prove successful, in which case he felt that he might expect a period of long confinement, this to one of Tony's nervous energy and temperament rather worse than sudden death.

Finding himself alone, his sharp eyes examined his immediate surroundings, when they fastened at once upon three potential factors for escape. The first was a bulky implement standing against a work bench in the farther corner of the hangar, about thirty feet from where he sat in the perforated iron lawn chair. The second was Oakes' long bamboo fishing pole with hook and line attached, resting on two nails in the wall about three feet beyond the extreme limit of his reach. The third was the hydroplane.

Tony waited in considerable tension until he heard Isaacs, outside, tell Oakes to go to his breakfast. Then, there appearing to be nobody else about, he acted with swift and cunning purpose. Stretching out as far as he could, he managed to dislodge and secure the fishing pole by means of his iron chair. To his joy he found that Oakes had rigged ganghooks in groups of three. A few skillful sidelong casts and he had hooked the implement in the corner, which was one of those heavy tools for cutting wire rigging, or small iron rods, and is composed of an upright with a strong parrot beak and a three foot iron lever.

Drawing this gently across the floor, in fearful dread lest the line should break, Tony secured it, and, squirming about, managed to brace it in such a manner that with the light steel chain in the cutting break he threw his weight upon the lever and clipped himself free. Slipping to the small door in front he opened it about an inch and his heart gave a joyful bound at sight of Isaacs, well off shore in the dinghy and apparently philandering with a red headed girl in a bathing suit.

Tony next turned his attention to the big doors which liberated the hydroplane and found that they could be quickly opened. A swift examination of the machine showed it apparently ready for flight. Having worked at the construction and adjustment of its type, Tony knew all about its operation. It was secured, and, wishing to make sure that it would fire promptly and without failing him at the critical moment, Tony partially muffled the exhaust with the mattress from Oakes' bed and started the motor.

These were the first peculiar sounds heard by the pair far out in the dinghy. They lasted but a few seconds, for Tony knew they must rouse an alarm, and, finding that the machine was apparently all tuned up for immediate flight, quickly swung open the doors and flew. His emotions as the splendid fabric rushed out upon its launching track, skimmed the water, and began to rise were perhaps the most glorious that this aviator of gory buccaneers had ever experienced.

Tony's next consideration was to effect a speedy landing in some lonely spot in the environs of New York and to slip away before he could be identified in connection with the hydroplane. Although the biggest city in the western hemisphere, still for reasons of topography the vicinity of New York is rich in lonely spots, these to be found in the wilds of New Jersey, back of darkest Hoboken, or in the salt marshes behind the Long island beaches. These last offered the best immediate sanctuary for Tony, who, being thoroughly familiar with the region, headed straight across for Long Beach, a distance of thirty miles, and dropped down into the sedge and shallow water at the eastern end of this strip of sand.

It was still very early in the morning and although his alighting must have been remarked from many points there was nobody in sight as he taxied to the head of a broad channel, got out on the bank, and quickly made his way across to the ocean side, a distance of several hundred yards. Once clear of the machine he felt himself in no pressing danger.

Tony was dressed precisely as might be any other of the thousand of young men enjoying a holiday in that populous region of summer resorts. He was in striped flannel trousers, negligee shirt, blue serge coat, and a white yachting cap. Isaacs had searched him, but, finding no incriminating documents, had left him his money and pocket articles. He might, so far as appearance was concerned, have just left his hotel for an early morning promenade. But there was one thing which it was most necessary for him to keep concealed, and that was the shining steel anklet and its chain pendant. Finding a pin about his person, he pulled the latter as high as possible and secured it to the inside of his trouser leg, then eased his belt so that his ankle was well covered.

Coming out on the sea beach, he found it practically deserted between the scattered summer edifices. In the distance loomed the big hotel and other caravansaries. Tony made his way toward these and, coming presently to the channels of transportation, made his way back to South Brooklyn, where he went to a chop suey restaurant and dispatched a messenger with a note to Big Mike.

The president of the One Hundred and One club listened in somber silence to Tony's story. He was entirely unmoved by Tony's brilliant escape. He took Lorenz's failure and probable destruction as already accomplished, and grunted disparagingly at Tony's sanguine hope that he might have managed the business after all. For Mike had fallen victim to a pessimism which was based on superstitious fear.

"We ain't none of us goin' to put it across," said he, heavily. "There's a jinx some'rs or other. Them first three guys were bumped off through a fluke—young Elting just happenin' to go up on the roof. You fellers can explain it any way you like, but we knew that Johnson wasn't alive at half past 10, that night he phoned us. He got his not later than 1 o'clock that afternoon, and if that wasn't him talkin' then it was his ghost buttin' in to give us the double cross."

"Well, let's wait a shake," said Tony. "For all we know Lorenz may have put it over."

"Put nawthin' over. Chances are he's put over himself by this time, and the other feller with him. Aw, what's the use? S'ppose Elting's got them two and your mate perforated? That'll make seven gone to hell on this job. I'm done."

There was no moving him. Mike was out of the murder business for good. More than that, he cursed the anarchist arguments and funds that had ever got him into it. It was one thing to pass the word to bump off some bull or gangster that was getting troublesome or dangerous and another to attempt assassination of a man who seemed to have surrounded himself with an uncanny, protective intelligence which appeared to be en rapport with the spirit world. Mike was scared from the top of his grizzled scrub to the half soles of his brogans, and he did not mind admitting it. Tony himself had taken Johnson's first message and could not explain it satisfactorily, even to his own mind. But, unlike Mike, he was free from superstition, also more in need of money.

"These bolshevists are no good anyhow," growled Mike, who was something of a reader. "Their dope is all bunk. They might put their stuff across in time of war, when everything is all balled up like a smooth shod team o' dray horses in a spring thaw, but they can't get away with nothin' in time of peace. Even them ignorant Roosian peasants give 'em the bounce when they found they couldn't keep what they'd stole. Those that got any sense in the workin' classes are strong agin 'em. All the backin' they got is from bums with nothin' to lose and nuts like these here college professors with high brows and ivory behind 'em."

In vain did Tony argue for another attempt. Mike was not only obdurate but insisted that the One Hundred and One club be immediately dissolved. He argued that it had in fact already been partly dissolved by the demission of seven of its active members not only from club but all other mundane affairs.

Keeping himself very hard to find, Tony with some few others then decided on a final coup, but of a different sort. This threatened in some ways to be even more difficult, if not dangerous, and was something which would require an agent of respectable presence who must be an accomplished actor. A daring swindler and confidence man known as "Ole Bull" was selected for the part and instructed by Tony in his rôle.

Briefly, this was to kidnap Esther, and the details were left to Ole, who gave it out that he had a plan. The time was drawing near when there would no longer be anything to gain by Aria's removal, and it was reasoned that as a desperate measure his paternal affection might be taken advantage of to compel his quitting the arena in his championship of the nation against anarchy. Tony had not much hope for the success of the scheme, but Ole was fairly confident, though declining to divulge his plan. Tony gave Ole a vivid verbal description of Esther Aria. He had seen her (as he thought) several times with Isaacs, at a considerable distance through his strong glasses, and once on the veranda of the yacht club.

You can't go wrong," said Tony. "She's some doll, Ole. About 5 feet 8, of swell shape, with a bale of hair the color of a ship's copper bottom just cleaned in dry dock, and a sort of show girl face. Reg'lar chicken."

"That don't sound much like a flapper Kyke," said Ole, doubtfully.

"She ain't. The Aria family is a different breed. This branch came years ago from Spain."

"It don't sound Spanish, either," Ole objected.

"Well, I can't help what it sounds like," Tony snapped. "I'm telling you what she looks like. Weighs about 135 or 140, and all girl. Reminds you of a Liberty loan poster or 'Feed Starving Stockholm,' or something like that."

"All right," said Ole. "I guess I can spot her."

. . . . . .

"You look happy," Isaacs observed as he and Marcia waited for Esther and Spice to come down and make up the set.

"I could run round in circles and bark." Marcia spun her racquet in air and caught it deftly by the handle. "Spice back victorious and without a scratch, Mr. Aria decorating me with a pearl pendant, Esther asking me to stop here while the admiral and mother run around to Newport for the week's end, you looking very cheerful and without that 'I'd like to eat you' glare. It's a very lovely world, Adrian, dear."

"It won't be so bad, once we get it tidied up a little. After a free-for-all fight things naturally take a little repairing. Well, thank God our end of it here is almost tied off. Mr. Aria hopes to finish his work when he goes to Washington this Saturday. If nothing happens to prevent his appearing—well, I mustn't blab state secrets even to the dear head of the Stupidity Service. That hug and kiss I got when Spice hove in sight has shifted my ballast a little."

"I warned you several days ago that something nice was going to happen to you pretty soon. Then, as you were saying when you interrupted yourself, if nothing prevents Mr. Aria's going to Washington in a few days' time, it will be all over but the lynchings?"

"We shan't need any lynchings. The I Won't Work party will go the way of that arch-bolshevist, William Hohenzollern."

"Then Mr. Aria will be safe?"

"I hope so—and believe so. It is not as though he were a tyrant. These attacks were not inspired by personal hatred or revenge, but merely to get him out of the way. Once it is too late to accomplish anything by his removal they must naturally cease. Besides, they are not going to disburse a huge sum to satisfy their spite. Nobody would tackle the job, knowing that the bonus would not be forthcoming."

"You don't think the admiral is in any danger during the next few days?"

"I don't see why he should be. All the same, I wish I could have persuaded him to give up or postpone this Newport trip.

"You would feel safer if he were here?"

"Yes. We are so nearly finished. It seems a pity to run any risk at the eleventh hour."

Spice and Esther coming down at this moment they went ahead with their game. The Sylvia was leaving for Newport late that afternoon, Mrs. Elting intensely glad to get out of the sound for a little change, and Marcia intensely glad to get out of the Sylvia for a little change. That which added in generous measure to her happiness was the marked change in Spice's attitude toward and treatment of her.

Another source of joy for Marcia was the result of a heart-to-heart talk, which she had maneuvered with Esther and in which that direct and honest damsel had told her that she really was not in love with Spice at all, adding naively that she had imagined herself to be so for awhile, as nobody had ever made love to her before and she had found the process to be very thrilling and delightful. Esther concluded by saying with great simplicity that as it was evidently her father's wish that she should marry Adrian some day, there was of course nothing else to be done about it.

To Marcia everything seemed to be clearing up like the last few hundred feet of film in a motion picture melodrama. The bad men had been perforated and planted or whisked off into empty space, the tangled skein of missplaced amours unknotted, blind prejudice dissolved in the clear light of comprehension—even the hydroplane had been reported and Oakes dispatched to fly it back.

All that now remained, so far as Marcia could see, was for Mr. Aria to conclude his coup d' état successfully, and for Spice to discover that he was madly in love with her impatient self. This done she might draw a deep breath and get set for the next lap—Spice's lap, which is to say the conjugal lap. In the natural course of events in the human race there might be still another lap—no, not the infernal triangle, but the maternal—but Marcia did not explore the realms of her imagination to these depths.

But the trouble was that Spice while now showing Marcia a sort of eager courtesy as if desiring to make amends for his past disdainful treatment of her did not show any inclination to go beyond this. On the contrary there seemed to be a certain painstaking politeness, even a touch of shyness about his intentions which made Marcia want to laugh while at the same time giving her a feeling of constraint. This, with a curious intent look in his eyes when she glanced up suddenly at times and found them fastened on her puzzled her extremely.

For it never occurred to Marcia, so candid about her own state of heart, that while Spice had been sarcastic with her, so had she in self defense been equally ironical with him, and that recently to hide her feelings she had carried this to such an extreme that Spice was quite deceived. He had arrived at the conclusion that whatever might be Marcia's opinion of him as a fighting man she held his personal attributes in low esteem. More than that, he believed Isaacs struggling with a paroxysm of anger. He snatched a strip of paper from his waistcoat pocket, glanced at it, crumpled it up, and threw it into the fire. Miss Miller rose to her feet with a slow smile.

"Let me offer you young people some cordial," she suggested, opening a cupboard and producing a liqueur bottle and some glasses. "If you have quite finished damaging my property, Sir Julian, perhaps you would like some of your own brandy?"

Felicia and Van Clarence Smith were frankly curious. Sir Julian recovered himself with an effort.

"I found that your news confirmed a very disturbing suspicion of mine, Lady Felicia," he explained. "An attempt is being made to take from my hands a financial loan of some importance."

"Those figures, then," Felicia began.

"They are convincing," Sir Julian declared. "One hundred million was to be the amount of the loan."

"And you mean to say that those two insignificant looking people," Felicia exclaimed, "were talking finance on such a scale?"

Sir Julian poured himself out and drank a glass of brandy.

"One of them," he said, "was Prince Ioto, an envoy from Japan."

"And the other?" Van Clarence Smith asked.

Sir Julian hesitated.

"The other man," he replied, "is in the financial department of our secret service."

Van Clarence Smith set down his liqueur glass empty.

"I guess Wall street finance," he remarked, "is kind of A, B, C, compared with what goes on right here."

Sir Julian nodded. He was rapidly becoming himself again.

"Finance among us," he observed, "is continually subject to political considerations. I am much obliged for your help, Lady Felicia," he went on. "If it is any satisfaction to you to know, it, you have thoroughly earned your first three months' emolument."

The young people went off together. Sir Julian stood listening to their retreating footsteps, waited until he heard the lift bell ring and the rattle of the doors.

"That's hell!" he remarked tersely.

His companion swung round in her chair and faced him.

"Nothing else to be done, I suppose?"

"Nothing," he replied. "It's a delicate situation. I offered the loan through our German house, under the pretext that we had funds there. If Ioto is here and treating to lay with the British government, he must be acting under express directions from his government. If I move further in the matter I shall only awaken suspicions that might be fatal."

"Yet you don't mean to give up?" she asked quietly.

"I must think," he muttered.

Prince Ioto was greeted, on the following afternoon, by the very great man whom he had come to visit, cordially, but with just a suggestion of that condescension which the Britisher invariably employs in his dealings with even super-civilized orientals.

"It has given us very great pleasure, Prince Ioto," the cabinet minister declared, "to accept the suggestions made by you to Mr. Lumley for a loan of a hundred million pounds."

Prince Ioto listened without change of countenance. If the speaker expected any expression of satisfaction or gratification he was to be disappointed.

"The terms," the cabinet minister went on "are scarcely those which we should accept from any except an ally. It gives us pleasure, however, to consolidate in such a fashion the excellent understanding between our two countries."

There was the barest flicker of a smile upon Prince Ioto's lips.

"You consider the terms generous, then?" he asked.

"Without a doubt," was the well satisfied reply. "There is certainly no other country in the world from whom you could borrow on such a proposition." Prince Ioto shook his head very slowly.

"That is not quite so," he said. "I have been offered better terms since I arrived in London."

The cabinet minister was surprised, more than a little annoyed. Then he remembered that he was dealing with an oriental and sighed. Even in the big affairs it seemed that the spirit of huckstering remained.

"You mean that an emissary of a foreign country has offered you better terms than his majesty's government for this loan?" he asked incredulously.

Prince Ioto hesitated. Just at that moment there was a knock at the door and a young man presented himself. He addressed the cabinet minister with the impersonal air of a perfect secretary.

"There is an inquiry upon the telephone, sir," he announced, "for Prince Ioto."

The Japanese rose to his feet. His host pointed to an instrument by his side.

"If you will speak here, prince," he said, "I will take the opportunity of giving my secretary an important letter."

"It is not necessary that you leave the room," Prince Ioto protested.

"You will excuse me," the cabinet minister replied blandly.

Prince Ioto took up the receiver.

"I am Prince Ioto," he announced. "Who wishes to speak to me?"

A woman's voice answered him at once.

"I speak on behalf of one whose name I will not mention over the telephone, but who is acquainted with the business which has taken you to Downing street. You follow me?"

"Perfectly," was the composed reply. "Pray deliver your message."

"I am to say," the voice continued, "that a certain offer made to you within the last twenty-four hours must not be spoken of in government circles."

"Must not," the Japanese murmured.

"There is honor even in diplomacy," his unrevealed interlocuter went on. "If you should betray the confidence which has been placed in you, you will make an enemy whose hand is heavy and farreaching."

"Is that all?"

"That is all."

"Then you can tell the person for whom you speak," Prince Ioto pronounced, "that I shall say what seems fair and right to me to those who are my friends, and that no threats will deter me. If I decide to maintain a reserve with regard to certain matters it will be for national reasons. Where I work for my country personal considerations do not exist."

Softly he replaced the receiver upon the instrument, and stood motionless, his hands hanging down by his sides, looking through the high, barely curtained windows into the gathering gloom of the streets. So the cabinet minister found him when he returned five minutes later. He waved his visitor back to his chair and pushed the cigarets toward him.

"Let us have a few minutes together, Prince Ioto," he proposed. "You were speaking of another offer."

"Sir Julian Kand approached me on the day of my arrival in England with an offer of a loan of a hundred million pounds."

"Kand?" the cabinet minister repeated. "But he is an Englishman! If you had dealt with him privately a portion of the funds would have come through the Bank of England."

"Sir Julian spoke of large surpluses lying at their bank in Germany," Prince Ioto continued deliberately. "The money was to have come from there."

The cabinet minister smiled in a somewhat superior fashion.

"Kand is a very good fellow," he said. "He would have consulted us before he had moved in the matter."

"Sir Julian Kand is a German," the Japanese remarked.

"A mistake, I can assure you," the other replied, smiling. "He became a naturalized Englishman fifteen years ago, and very seldom even visits the country of his birth."

Prince Ioto was more thoughtful than ever.

"You believe that?" he asked simply.

"The whole world knows it," was the somewhat impatient reply.

"Many years ago," Prince Ioto said pensively, "I came on a mission to this country. I was in the close confidence of the mikado, and it pleased his majesty to send me here and to Germany and to hear my report concerning a prospective alliance between ourselves and one of the two countries. I advised my master to conclude a treaty with Germany."

"We have forgotten all that," the cabinet minister declared magnanimously.

The slim white hand of Prince Ioto flashed through the twilight in a protesting gesture.

"Ah, no!" he said. "One does not forget. It was no personal matter with me. I like England, and I have never liked Germany, but I saw into the future then as I think I see now. Germany is still your enemy. Germany is prepared for great things and you are not."

The statesman was becoming more reserved.

"These matters," he said, "have been discussed between your government and mine. They were fully considered when the treaty between us was signed."

"It is true," Prince Ioto replied. "It is also true that many of the politicians of my country do not agree with me, but I am right, and time will prove it." The cabinet minister smiled.

"We have considered this matter of possible trouble with Germany from every point of view," he declared, "and we have dismissed it from the range of practical politics."

Prince Ioto rose to his feet. His host touched the bell. For a single moment the former hesitated. There was still something in his mind, one disclosure which he could make. He stood thoughtfully silent. Imperturbable though he was, that faintly cynical smile which had parted the lips of his companion decided him upon a middle course.

"There is one more thing," he confessed, "arising out of my negotiations with Sir Julian Kand, which troubles me. I do not clearly see whether it is my duty to reveal it, or, in justice to Sir Julian, to remain silent. I shall consider that matter for some hours."

The cabinet minister smiled pleasantly.

"My dear prince," he begged, "pray do not worry about it. A summons on the telephone there would bring Sir Julian round at any time, and he would not hesitate for a moment to tell me the whole story of his negotiations with you."

The butler was standing in the doorway. The cabinet minister shook his departing visitor heartily by the hand. He did not notice even the latter's silence.

"We shall meet tomorrow at Wedderburn house," he said. You will find all your old acquaintances delighted to welcome you back to London."

"That will be very pleasant," Prince Ioto murmured.

The departing visitor waved aside his waiting automobile and, buttoning his overcoat around him, turned through the Horse guards and toward St. James' park. The eternal shrouds of February mist blended with the falling twilight. It was a mantle of veritable obscurity through which he moved, through which the gas lamps, the distant lights of Piccadilly and Buckingham palace, glowed like little specks of fire. He walked on very slowly, his hands behind his back, his head upturned to the starless sky. The roar of the traffic, the brazen voices of the great city, came to him here with a muffled insistence. His lips moved for a moment to the thoughts which passed through his brain.

"O, mighty city," he murmured, "to what end will your blindness bring you?"

The instincts of a lifetime were strong, and Prince Ioto was no dreamer. He took a path to the left, another to the right. Always the footsteps of which he had been dimly conscious since he left Downing street followed him. Now, in the Broad walk, he saw shadowy figures on either side, never closing in yet always at the same distance. He stopped short. The figures loitered. He quickened his pace—they followed suit. His slight frame became tense, his fingers stole to the middle of the agate headed cane which he carried. So he walked forward, always with his half invisible escort. His pulses were steady, his heart light with the joy of living. Intrigue still flourished, then, even in this city of foolish people!

He was in the Mall now, walking in the middle of the broad path. An automobile with brilliant searchlights passed him very slowly. The horn was blown without apparent cause, twice quickly and then twice slowly. Those attendant escorts of his seemed to fade away as though upon some signal. The car passed on. Prince Ioto paused to light a cigaret. He was an epicure in sensations, and he needed this, his one sensuous form of enjoyment, to complete the rapture of the moment. He had caught a glimpse of the man in the automobile. He understood.

Prince Ioto, on the next night, was the lion of a very remarkable gathering at Wedderburn house. With a gentle ease of bearing which charmed everybody, and a memory which was truly remarkable, he renewed many old friendships in the social and diplomatic world. Never had the charm of his manner been more universally acknowledged. People moved everywhere with a word of praise for him upon their lips. Toward the close of the evening his host brought Felicia to his notice.

"Prince," he said, "I desire to present you to Lady Felicia Lakenham. She remembers your being kind to her as a child, upon your first visit."

Felicia was inclined to be nervous, but the kindly little gentleman with the insignificant stature and wonderful smile quickly put her at her ease. A little timidly she laid her fingers upon his coat sleeve.

"Prince Ioto," she murmured, "I have a favor to ask."

"It is granted," he replied.

"I want your autograph."

The polite smile faded at once from Prince Ioto's lips.

"You know the house well," he said. "Take me somewhere where I can use a pen."

She took him to a corner of the great library, which was almost deserted. He withdrew a thin sheet of paper from his breast pocket, a paper already covered with writing inside, scrawled his name across it, and handed it into her keeping. Afterward he looked at her for a moment thoughtfully.

"You are English?" he inquired.

"Naturally," she answered, with a little laugh. "Lord Wedderburn is a distant connection of mine. You stayed with us once, many years ago."

He bowed a little coldly. Once more he offered his arm. They passed into the reception rooms without another word. They were immediately surrounded, and Felicia moved away with Van Clarence Smith. She was looking a little pale.

"Fix that all right?" he asked her.

"Yes," she admitted.

"Kind of worried, aren't you?" he ventured, after a moment's hesitation.

"Absurd of me, of course," she replied, with the air of one seeking to rid herself of a disagreeable impression. "He was so charming at first, yet when I carried out Sir Julian's instructions and he handed me over the paper he was like ice. He asked me if I were English."

Van Clarence Smith smiled reassuringly.

"Prince Ioto is a great patriot," he reminded her, "and above all, a great Japanese. He believes in their own standards and their own ideals."

"I understand," she murmured. "A lady of Japan would scarcely——"

Warned by her tone, he stopped her.

"We are westerners, Felicia, and don't you forget it," he declared. "And now?"

"Let us get the thing over, if you don't mind," she begged.

Sir Julian was waiting in Miss Miller's sitting room when Felicia was ushered in, a few minutes before midnight. A certain look of strain seemed to pass from his mouth and about his eyes as he stooped down toward the fire and laid the paper which she had brought him upon the embers. In that moment, before the flames leaped up to conceal it, it seemed to Felicia that one sentence stood out in magnified characters:

"Nor in the event of a European war, shall the troops of his imperial majesty, the mikado, be under any circumstances used or transported outside the boundaries of Asia."

Felicia pointed to the sentence and looked up at her companion.

"What does that mean?" she asked curiously.

He smiled.

"Remember our bargain," he said. "No questions."

She made a little grimace.

"At least tell me what that paper was which I collected from Prince Ioto in such a roundabout fashion?" she begged.

"That," he replied slowly, "was a copy of the draft agreement between the banking house of Kand and the Japanese imperial government. Prince Ioto is indisposed to accept our conditions and has placed the loan elsewhere."

Felicia gazed at the little pile of ashes. She was still puzzled.

"I don't understand," she confessed, "the meaning of that clause about Japanese troops."

Sir Julian lit a cigaret with firm fingers.

"That clause," he explained, "was just a whim of one of my partners. He dabbles a little in world politics."

"He must be a very interesting person," she observed.

Sir Julian was looking through the walls of the sitting room. For a single moment his expression had changed. Then he moved to the sideboard and poured himself out a liqueur of brandy.

"We will drink," he said, almost reverently, "to my partner!"

THE HIDDEN BOWER

By William H. Hamby

Wherein Is Demonstrated the Sovereign Virtue of Giving Folks Something to Think About.

ELSIE WAYNE noticed the impertinent man by the cigar stand in the hotel lobby was looking her way. The sign, "Public Stenographer," over her desk had caught his eye, and she knew he was trying to think up something to dictate.

She hoped he could not. She was tired and her spirits drooped a little. She had had a hard day's work, and there was yet an hour's copying. Besides, she had already been annoyed twice this evening by men of his type. She knew how to manage them, but it seemed to grow a little more irksome each time. She began to click her typewriter. He was coming.

"Hello, little one," he said with a smirk, leaning on the rail that shut in her desk, "your pencil sharp?"

"Yes." She opened her notebook and poised her pencil, ready. She was very businesslike in spite of her soft, wavy brown hair and finely featured, girlish face.

He dictated a letter—patently trumped up—which he signed "The Martin-Ellery Commission Co." Then he flipped a silver dollar into her lap.

"Keep the change, little one." He was through, but did not go. Instead he made several efforts to start a conversation.

"I'm going out to Kansas in the morning." With the shallow egotism of his kind he was talking about his affairs.

Suddenly she stopped and looked up with a look of simple, friendly interest.

"Are you? Then you will get to see the wheat in bloom."

"Wheat in bloom? O, shucks! You are stringing me—wheat don't bloom."

She nodded seriously, and let her eyes look as though she might be seeing it. "Everything that grows blooms—except mushrooms. When the wheat looks that misty white, just after it has headed, it is blooming. You'll see thousands and thousands of acres of it in the morning. Notice the soft, misty beauty of it."

She was clicking at the typewriter again. He turned away, scratched his head, puzzled, pulled his hat a little forward, and went off and sat down with a newspaper.

Elsie finished the letter, and addressed it as the impertinent man had directed.

"That," she said to herself, "is a new commission firm, or else he is a pure fake." She was well acquainted in the commission district. For two years she was stenographer for the leading commission firm of the city and had left to take this place in the hotel.

During a lull at the cigar counter, Lula drifted over for a little chat. Lula was a typical cigar girl, quick and sharp at slangy badinage, an avowed flirt to stimulate trade. Yet Elsie knew that as far as ultimate virtue was concerned, Lula, like the most of her kind, was as good a girl as if raised in a convent. Only she had accepted men and life on a frank, coarse level, and had become cynical and embittered.

Those were the things Elsie had fought against in her heart day and night. She wanted to keep that inner bower of faith and sweet dreams and delicate emotions, which so far had made her, unconsciously, here in this public office where people from the ends of the earth met and passed, a sort of sweet fountain in a desert of dry greed and searing passions.

Lula leaned carelessly on the railing. "How do you do it? What is your system?"

"Do what?" Elsie rested and smiled up at the world-wise, pitifully sordid young face of her fellow worker.

"Get rid of them," said Lula.

"Well, usually," Elsie replied thoughtfully, "I give them something else to think about."

Lula shook her head dubiously. "I don't care what they think about, just so I can sell them cigars. If they'll keep far enough away so I don't smell their breath, they can all go hang for me. I don't want any of 'em. They're all alike—I know them too well."

Lula hurried away. A man was tapping a quarter on the cigar case.

Elsie shivered a little, although the June night was still warm. There was pity in her heart for Lula—and fear for herself. Fear that she too might become cynical and calloused, and lose faith in the fine heart of man—the man of whom she had always dreamed.

She was very tired tonight, and started guiltily—she was afraid there were tears in her eyes—when a courteous, well modulated voice at the rail asked:

"I beg your pardon, but is it too late to get out a little copy for me?"

She looked up and replied pleasantly, "No; I can do it."

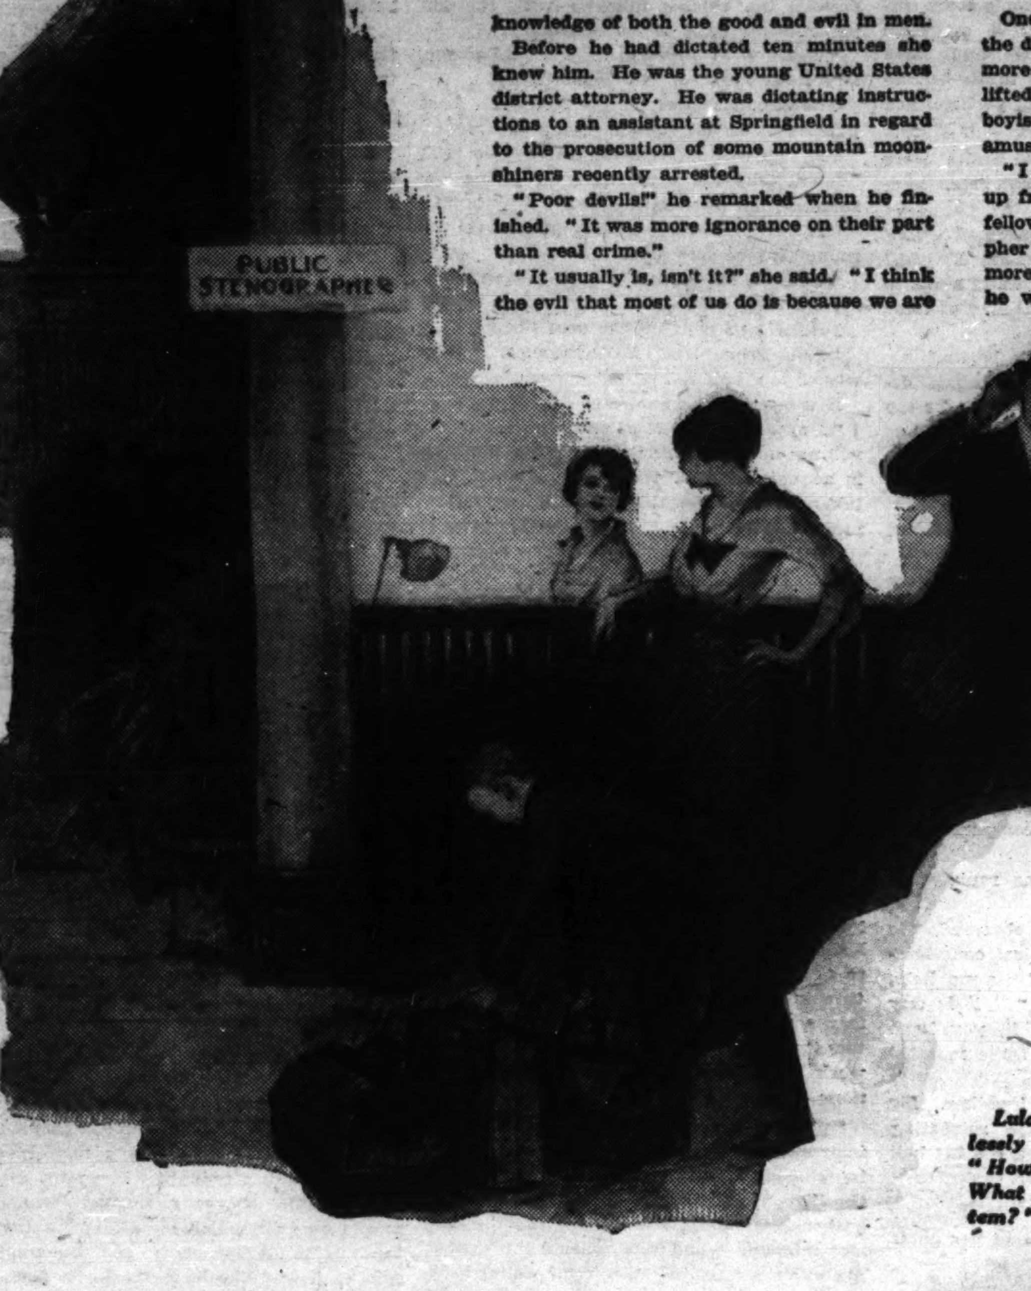
He was rather a large man—plainly a man of force, with thick, dark hair, high forehead, and deepset gray eyes. In speaking to her he had removed his hat, and somehow the little unaccustomed tribute brought another choking to her throat.

"Perhaps you are tired. It is pretty late—and my work will take an hour. If you'd rather, I'll try to get some one else."

In both his tone and his look were exactly the sort of consideration that makes a woman proud of being a woman. A sort of deference, and yet a recognition that she was a fellow human being, a co-worker in a busy world.

"I'll be glad to do it," she answered, both pleasantly and truthfully.

One of the compensations of keeping a bower in our heart—a bower of faith and beautiful, untarnished sentiment—is that we can recognize it in another. It is not the cynically, worldly wise ones who know people—not at all. It is the one with an open heart and simple faith who has intuitive knowledge of both the good and evil in men.



Lula leaned carelessly on the railing. "How do you do it? What is your system?"

Before he had dictated ten minutes she knew him. He was the young United States district attorney. He was dictating instructions to an assistant at Springfield in regard to the prosecution of some mountain moonshiners recently arrested.

"Poor devils!" he remarked when he finished. "It was more ignorance on their part than real crime."

"It usually is, isn't it?" she said. "I think the evil that most of us do is because we are ignorant of the better things we might do at the time."

His gray eyes looked at her searchingly for a moment—perfectly respectful, but more personal than before. Until then she had been a stenographer, a very efficient, pleasing young woman, but merely a stenographer. He had scarcely been conscious that her hair was a soft brown and her eyes a deep blue.

He smiled in a speculative, friendly way.

"You must be the young woman I have heard so much about."

"Heard so much about?" she repeated, surprised.

He nodded. "I'm all over the district—going much of the time, you know, and run into all sorts of people. I think I've heard you mentioned a dozen times."

The color came to her face. She was not at all sure what men like the last one might say of her.

"For instance," he continued, "a man in the lobby, of whom I inquired about a stenographer, told me what you said of wheat blossoms in Kansas."

They both laughed.

"And not two weeks ago," went on the district attorney, "a pickle drummer in a Frisco day coach quoted some decidedly interesting observations of yours about the war. O, yes, and one of my prisoners had a package of sweet pea seed in his pocket. Said a stenographer at the hotel had told him how to raise them; and he was going to try it—if he did not go to jail."

In a half hour the copy was ready, and he read it over.

"Fine!" he said heartily. "I certainly appreciate your doing this for me."

"Good night." And instinctively he held out his hand.

Once in her room, she sank down into her chair and let herself cry. She had been wanting to cry all day. But this was with relief. It was not wasted after all—this struggle to keep a bower fresh and green and sweet inside; and there were really, truly men, lots of them, like one she dreamed of. In the wisdom and faith of a woman's heart she multiplies the man she trusts.

One morning three weeks later P. T. Allen, the district attorney, was again at the Baltimore. He came over to Elsie Wayne's desk, lifted his hat, and smiled in the friendly, boyish way of a fellow who has something amusing to tell.

"I heard of you again yesterday as I came up from Joplin," he said. "I met a young fellow, a bank cashier, who said a stenographer at the Baltimore had told him sycamore bark was good for the headache and he was going to take the cure."

She laughed. "Yes, I told him that to float on the river and look at sycamore bark on the bank was a sure cure for headaches. I'm glad he decided to take a vacation."

It was a hot evening late in July. Men in the hotel lobby stood in groups near the electric fans, and new arrivals came up to the desk with moist handkerchiefs in their hands. Elsie had decided to go home early, but before she closed her desk she saw the impertinent man of the wheat blossoms coming her way. His hat was tipped as impertinently as ever, and he appeared to be half drunk also. But he had a real letter this time.

"Hello, little one," he began familiarly again. "Wish you'd take a letter and mail it with a special delivery. My partner is out of town, but will be in on an early train, and I want him to get it early.

"'Mr. J. T. Ellery, City.

"'Jim, we won't have time to close out that last string of cars. Things been coming thick and fast today. Just got a wire from Chicago and I go out at 8 to collect on that last shipment. Have Watson file the petition in bankruptcy at noon sharp tomorrow.

"'S. M.'"

The letter was scarcely finished when another man was waiting, a large, trustful sort of young man, with a good country face. He seemed badly upset, and his hand trembled as he made figures on the back of an envelope.

"You wish some work done?" Elsie inquired.

"Yes—I—don't write very well, and my hand shakes so. If you'll do it for me on the typewriter—I'll tell you," he said, "what I want him to know and you fix it up, won't you?"

"It is to Henry Walters. Him and me are brothers and we own a farm down there. This year we started a canning factory at Garden View—to can tomatoes. We been doing a big business—and been selling most of them to a company here—Ellery & Martin. They paid all right up to last week. They asked us to send a dozen cars at once.

"We did it, and the check not coming the second day, I got scared and came up here this afternoon. I've been looking around. You tell Henry that—it looks awfully shaky. If we lose that twelve thousand dollars it will smash us. You tell Henry I'll do all I can, but he better arrange to borrow five thousand on the farm."

"Mr. Walters, when did you ship those cars?"

"Monday."

She studied a moment.

"You are right," she said, "about that company. They are going to apply for a receiver at noon tomorrow."

The young fellow went pale and his hand shook, and he breathed hard.

"But look here," she said briskly, "I doubt if those cars have been delivered. If they haven't, you can attach them. Get out at daylight in the morning and see if you can find them. If you can, attach them quick, by 9 o'clock if possible. By all means before noon."

And she gave him detailed directions as to how to go about it—whom to see and what steps to take.

In the afternoon paper Elsie found a news item with a prominent head:

"ELLERY-MARTIN COMPANY FAILS.

"The Ellery-Martin Produce and Commission company filed a petition at noon today in the Federal court in voluntary bankruptcy. Their liabilities are listed at $136,824, resources at $22,438."

One item in the account of the company's failure brought a smile and a quickened beat of the heart of Elsie.

"Twelve cars of canned tomatoes from the Walters Canning company of Garden View, Mo., which were on the siding but had not been unloaded, were attached just two hours before the petition was filed, by Alfred Walters, a member of the firm.'"

Two weeks later P. T. Allen, the United States district attorney, came to Elsie's desk and greeted her in a friendly way, with a pleased smile. But his hat was off again, and there was a deference in him she had felt on their first meeting—an instinctive respect for womanhood in general, tinged unconsciously with a touch of appreciation for this woman in particular.

"You really are quite a wonderful gardener, Miss Wayne," he said, with appreciative raillery. "I still keep hearing of the original, encouraging remarks of yours. You seem always planting the seed of an idea in the head of even the wayfaring man who is a fool.

"And truly," he said, looking at her with such a frank, serious admiration she felt herself blushing, "I wonder if any greater compliment could be paid either a woman or a man than to say 'he sowed good, wholesome ideas in all sorts of soil.'"

When he was gone Elsie sat in a glow for a quarter of an hour. She had not really known before how hungry her heart had been for real appreciation. She had tried to keep the bower in her heart fresh and blooming; she had kept her faith in mankind, and tried to be generous even toward their faults. But she had not expected and had received no visible signs that it meant anything to any one else but her, until Allen came.

But now she had a good deal to think of, and many times every day without quite admitting it her eyes glanced up from her typewriter and swept the lobby hoping to again see the young man with the fighting jaw but tender mouth, and the clear, gray eyes that held visions as well as wisdom; the man who knew without being told she kept a bower of peace and sweetness in her heart.

It was evening early in August when she saw him again. Just two days before the state convention of the dominant political party. Already many of the advanced politicians were arriving. She knew them by their very walk, and the way they got each other in corners and talked with an air of great mystery. She knew also it was being freely talked that Allen should be nominated for attorney general.

Her heart gave a little jump every time she heard his name mentioned. It would be splendid for him to have that office—and he so young. He would make a record for himself and the state. She was sure of that. And it seemed somehow to make the world feel like a good place to live in when a man who had the fine, sweet well of human kindness and the unsullied dreams of youth in his heart, could be thus honored even by old, hardened politicians.

It was 8 o'clock when he first appeared in the lobby, shaking hands, talking, and jesting with the men. A half hour passed. She glanced up from time to time with a waiting little flutter in her throat to see if he was coming.

Then, directly, she saw him coming straight for her. But something was wrong. A paper was clutched in his hand. His face was flushed. His chin set. Plainly, he was angry, fighting mad.

"They accuse me," he said, as to a friend in trouble, "of giving my cousin Alfred Walters a tip in time to save his shipment from the creditors of the Ellery-Martin Commission company. They claim there was no other way for him to have discovered in advance that the company was to go into bankruptcy. I'm going to dictate a reply and brand the whole thing as a lie."

"Mr. Allen"—Elsie laid down her pencil and looked at him with a smile—"you are angry, aren't you?"

"Of course I am angry," he said heatedly. "It is not this nomination that counts. They can beat me out of that and it would not matter much. But it is the attack on my professional honor—"

"Mr. Allen," again Elsie smiled a wistful, thoughtful sort of smile, rather timid, but determined, "it is not a good plan to dictate when one is mad, is it? Aren't we likely then to hit at the wrong side of men—to stir up their ugly, unfair prejudices? Wouldn't it be—of course, you know best—but, wouldn't it be better to appeal to their other side—their sense of fairness?"

Some of the flush left her face. He was looking at her with open admiration. "Perhaps you are right. You nearly always are."

"If you will trust me so far, I wish you would let me answer this, and you say nothing until you see the morning paper."

He thought a moment, looking her thoughtfully in the eye. "I'll leave it with you—till tomorrow," he nodded appreciatively.

Elsie went to the telephone and asked that a reporter for the morning edition of the Times be sent to her at the Baltimore at once.

When he came she had the typewritten sheets to which a notary was just certifying her affidavit.

The accusation made the night before against the United States district attorney by a prominent politician who had happened to be one of the creditors of the Ellery-Martin company had made a big stir. It was a bomb in the camp of Allen's friends, who had considered his nomination for attorney general as certain. The circumstances were so suspicious—Alfred Walters being Allen's cousin—that it looked impossible for the attorney to prove his innocence in the matter. They expected Allen would reply and grabbed for the morning paper.

They found on the front page of the Morning Times an article:

"THE ALLEN MATTER CLEARED UP.

"A Stenographer of Unimpeachable Veracity Explains the Ellery-Martin Com. Co. Deal.

"Had Accidental Information of the Coming Failure and Warned Alfred Walters."

Then followed a detailed explanation of the circumstance, which was sworn to by Elsie Wayne.

The newspaper commented on the excellent standing and intelligence of the stenographer making the affidavit, and on their own account had wired Walters and secured an identical statement from him.

Allen was overwhelmingly nominated. Elsie was thrilled at his triumph and splendid speech of acceptance.

The next morning after the convention she was back at her desk. It was a hot August morning and the keys looked as tired as she felt. Somehow she dreaded a whole day of pounding away at that clicking machine, and her mind kept slipping away from her work.

"Good morning!" She gave a start and looked up. It was Allen leaning on the rail, smiling. "It is too hot a day to work. It is a day for the field and water. Come on. My car is out here—and a lunch. We are going to have a holiday."

She went with an eager sort of joy. She would have a whole day to talk to him. She loved to talk to him. A whole day with him in the country, in pleasant fields and wooded roads—a lunch by the little river.

When they were out of the city and spinning along easily with the long shade of the woods still across the roads, she looked up at him shyly, and thought how proud she was to be a friend of such a great man. He was a great man, and would be greater. It was a big reward for all the trying in the past to have helped him a little.

And then a happy thrill—a half inarticulate hope sprang up. Maybe he was going to offer her a position in his office—as his secretary. It would be a fine salary, and, best of all, she would work with him—and be near him.

As they turned the bend in a smooth, shady road, he slowed the machine down to a creeping pace and looked down at her with his friendly smile—a smile that always seemed to make her feel of vastly greater importance than she ever imagined herself.

"Well, little girl, you did it all right. You gave me the nomination."

She flushed happily.

"I could not have got it without you—and I can't run the office without you. Won't you come with me to Jefferson City?"

"Oh, I'd love to," she answered promptly. "It would be lovely. It is awfully good of you to make the offer. What does the state allow your secretary?"

His eyes, which had been opening wider and wider in surprise at her reply, suddenly smiled and he broke into a laugh.

He slipped his arm around her and drew her close and tenderly.

"No, dear heart, I didn't mean secretary. I meant as Mrs. Attorney General. Will you, darling?"

She was blushing so she could not look up and her voice was lost completely. But the answer was entirely satisfactory to him.

The NEEDED NOTE

by Oney Fred Sweet

The Songster Returns to the Nest So Lightly Forsaken.

THE greeting was over—the exclamations of surprise and joy on the part of the mother, the limp surrender on the part of the girl.

"You mustn't make over me like this, mother," the girl entreated, watching her parent struggle with the fire to give it new glow, "but I will wait for the tea, and then I want to go to bed and sleep—just keep on sleeping."

"Coming home without letting any of us know," fluttered the older woman. "Why, any number of folks would have been only too glad to send their machines to the train. They're all so proud of you, Ellen. They've all taken such an interest in your success."

The girl shrugged her shoulders beneath the provided shawl as if the raw night had not yet been fully escaped. She edged the rocker closer to the stove. She was a regal type—tall, black eyed, perfectly profiled, black hair bulging out from her ears in accordance with the moment's whim.

"There has been only one pessimist about you," the proud mother beamed. "Old Mr. Meisner has been the only one in the whole town to shake his head and be dubious of what you would be able to do. But what does old Mr. Meisner know—living all shut up next door here?"

The girl was scarcely listening. For the time she was disinterested in everything save that she was back again in the surroundings that she had once scorned—the ugly wall paper, the hideously designed carpet, the cheap home touches. Of all the places in the wide world that she had set forth to conquer here alone was refuge. Her thin soled, high heeled shoes removed, she wriggled her stockinged toes on the worn fender of the old hard coal burner and half closed her eyes. Anxious fingers were adjusting the shawl at her shoulders.

"And you didn't forget your mother. The applause and the fame and the fine hotels didn't make you forget. Old Mr. Meisner has said that you were cold and haughty and snobbish and proud, but look how you've come back, quiet, to see your mother first and sit here commonlike—why, even more commonlike than you used to be, honey."

There was a spot in the stove's isinglass where it was charred past permitting a red glow from the coals within. It had been that way ever since Ellen Brooke could remember, and she sat with her gaze fixed upon the blemish.

"Somehow I never thought of your coming home on a night like this, dearie. Next summer—I thought, maybe, when the yard was full of lilacs and the birds were back—I thought maybe then you might be coming home for a rest between your concert seasons. I thought you might make some changes in the house then and have it for your summer home. But tonight, with it so raw outside, and me sitting here nodding over my mending and thinking about you, and then to have you step in like this—just step in as though you'd only been across the street for a minute instead of away for a whole long year."

The girl sipped the tea and sank back in the rocker. O, it was good to be home! It was good to sink helplessly into the arms of some one who really cared. And a year before she had sniffed at the thought of ever coming back. She cleared her throat.

"You mustn't fuss over me any more mother. You've done enough of it all my life. You mustn't fuss over me. I'm no prima donna. Can't you see? It's been a long time since I've sung a note, even in practice. Old Mr. Meisner, with his ideas on this and that, is the only one who has been frank. The others here—well, I wrote some of them for money when things were at their worst. I got their letters turning me down, so they all know. I'm a failure, mother, a failure. And I've come home—I've come home because there was no place else to go."

The pride in the mother eyes turned to consternation. Ellen, her girl, who had grown so tall and haughty and beautiful, and whom every one said had a voice so wondrous—Ellen a failure! The mother eyes stared, unbelieving—stared and then filled with pity tears. She leaned cautiously to throw her arms about the girl—cautiously, because for so long the daughter had spurned the caresses that had gone with babyhood. But there was no spurning now. The stretch of years was bridged and once more they were mother and child.

"There was the money that you worked so hard for, mother," the girl went on. "It didn't seem like much when I got there. There were so many things that I wanted and I bought them and my schooling was cut short. I was proud enough while that money lasted—proud, snobbish, overbearing, everything that I used to be when I was here, mother, only more so. You see, I was so sure it was only a question of time before I would have my big engagement to sing."

"I knew it was your engagement that was taking your time," the mother hastened in eager justification. "It was foolish for me to expect to hear from you. I should have known all along how busy you were, honey, but there were times when if you had just written a card——"

"Even when the production failed, after a run of a week," the girl rambled on in terms that left the mother bewildered, "I wasn't the least bit discouraged; I didn't come down from off my high horse. I thought there would be plenty of other chances. But the manager shook his head and he used almost the same words that Mr. Meisner, next door, used when I went away: 'Beauty, stage presence, voice, but a voice without sympathy or feeling.' And I laughed at the manager just as I laughed here at old Mr. Meisner."

"They were jealous of you," flared the mother.

"But there were no more chances to sing, mother. I had to try other things. I went and sat in the employment agencies to wait for just any sort of work; my money was gone. They sent me out to addresses where they thought that even with my lack of skill at anything I might fit in, and somehow I didn't fit. I never tried to sing any more; there was no opportunity to practice. And I was getting shabby and losing faith in myself. Always there was that hope of my getting back my footing, but it simply simmered down to a case of keeping body and soul together. There was one thing about waiting on tables—I got enough to eat. But I couldn't make good at it except in the cheap

Coats for Midwinter Wear

by Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—First of the New Year resolutions: I will get coat; no matter what temptations there may be to swerve me from the goal of ultimate satisfaction, no matter how many cunning little three piece suits smirk at me with prices cut in two, I shall resist them all. I shall never find myself again in the ignominious position where I have to wear a sports coat of camel's hair over an expensive afternoon frock of velvet or satin—or else stay at home from the party.

We are showing today a number of wraps, mostly designed for afternoon wear. They range from one of burly angora cloth to the ermine trimmed velvet. They show you that it is with wraps as it is with frocks. Most of them are long-waited, and practically all fight hard for the new silhouette. That is to say, they give fullness at the sides and are drawn in about the ankles. And they do not have that excessive tailoring which puts them beyond the woman who wants to make instead of buy her afternoon wrap.

At the left is a cape of steel gray satin, lined with light gray duvetyn and trimmed by a collar plastron pitting dark squirrel against light squirrel in a border of squares. The tassels are also of squirrel. With this is worn a gray satin hat from which spring two fronds of paradise.

The fear complex has been left out of the lady who would wear the coat just above this. Like the famous heroine of a certain railroad advertisement, she goes her snowy way without dread of either soot or cleaner's bills. For this coat is of white grosgrain silk, trimmed with ermine, and accompanied by cap of ermine, set off by snowy ostrich tips. A charming wrap for the girl in her 'teens and limousines!

To the right, just below this, we find one of those charming, ineffably draped things of the season. This is of deep blue satin, with sleeves of beige velours embroidered with blue and silver. The lining is also of beige velours de laine, and light stone marten forms collar and cuffs. The hat of deep blue velvet with plume of the same shade is an echo of Francis I.

It takes a very gifted coat to do for both morning and afternoon wear. The next mantle is nominated; for its castor colored velveteen, trimmed with rabbit of the same tint, is neither too dressy for matching chintzes, nor too rough and ready for somebody's tea. A feather toque in pheasant colorings goes along.

Observe well the next coat, for it shows you that a garment may be conspicuous without being showy, and that the most conservative destiny may be wrought out on original lines. First of all, this coat is of buff tricotine and the fur is that wonderful golden otter. A marvelous combination! Then it has a belt of the fur, drawn through a buckle of the fur and dipping a trifle in the back. (They do that quite a good deal.) Then it has a back panel, beginning at the waist line, but initiated by lines of stitching above the waist, and slightly longer than the coat itself. (They do that quite a good deal—indeed, the preference for having uneven hems is noted almost as much in coats as in frocks.) This coat, like the one I just described previously, may be worn either morning or afternoon. The hat which goes with it, however, is a very après midi affair of buff velvet with edge of matching ostrich.

The group of three models in the right foreground begins with a coat of black satin, lined with white satin and trimmed with unspotted ermine. Not unspotting, however! For you observe the great pockets which mark the outlines and give that desired fullness at the sides. The hat is black velvet, draped beyond any need of trimming.

Stitching in time saves the fashion. It would certainly seem so when we look over many of the new models, the smartness of which is absolutely determined by those queer little twists and quirks of stitching which ramble off like a Greenwich village street. Thus, the next coat is delivered from monotony entirely by the work of the needle. It has, in fact, no other trimming. This coat is for morning wear, and is made of heavy woolen angora cloth in pearl gray. The kind of hat Napoleon wore when he wished he hadn't is here carried out in black velvet and white felt and feminized by a fancy aigrette.

Last comes a coat of castor colored velours de laine, trimmed with rabbit of the same tint. The rabbit is trimmed flat, and a new fur idea is given in the interstice of straps and buttons on collar and cuffs and girdle. The application of the fur pieces in front is also rather new. With this is worn a hat of castor fur and velvet.

For southern wear many of the wraps being prepared by the specialty shops follow the mode of the old time French cape known as the "visite." This was a quaint, long, narrow affair gathered up about the neck. This model was followed out at one place in white velvet gathered to a band of ermine and lined with pomegranate red crêpe de chine. White wraps are, by the way, being exploited much for the Florida resorts. So are the black ones. Both depend for their beauty largely on vivid linings of orange and citron and rose and henna.

White millinery also is being made much of. The midsummery horse hair is the favorite, and these charming garden party affaris are, like the white or black wraps, particular that the lining be very colorful. Thus, a wise white horse hair places next to the hair an underbrim of orange or blue or capucine red. Sometimes, too, the flowers that trim this white hat are in color—buttercups, by the way, are highly favored—but some stunning white hats go right on with it by electing white velvet hops or some other bit of snowy horticulture.

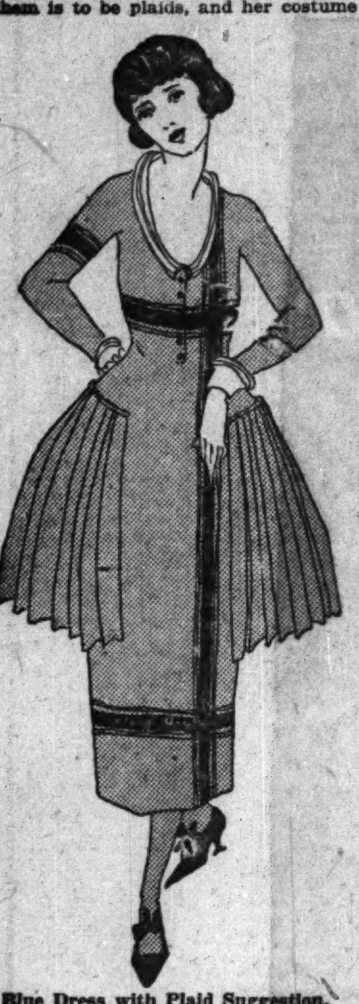
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.

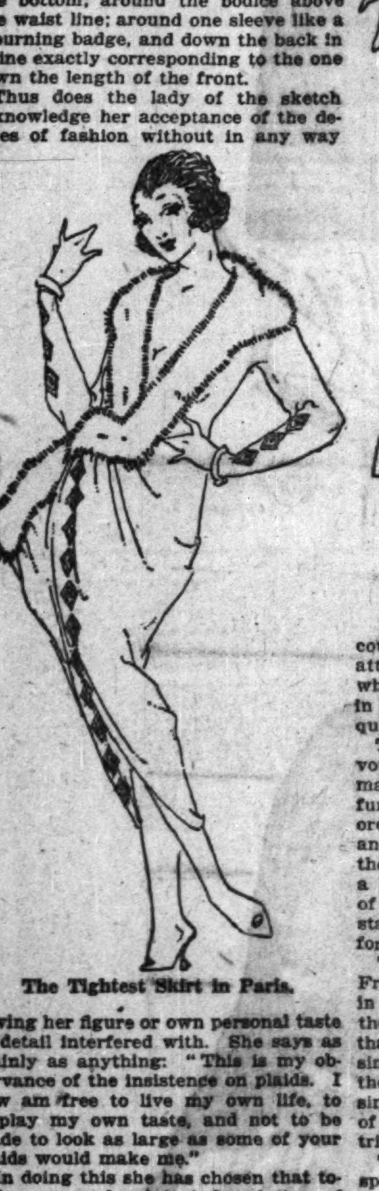
HINT OF SPRING STYLES.

PARIS.—[Special correspondence.]—The lady of the first illustration might be designated as the conventionalized conception of the spring styles. The chief feature of them is to be plaids, and her costume is laid out in one comprehensive check. It is a yard square. Down the front of the bodice it runs from throat to hem; around the skirt six inches from the bottom; around the bodice above the waist line; around one sleeve like a mourning badge, and down the back in a line exactly corresponding to the one down the length of the front.



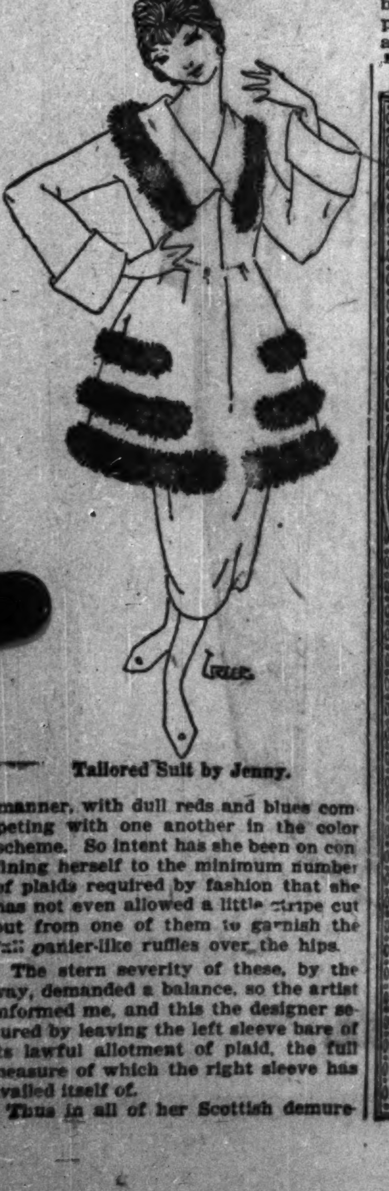
Blue Dress with Plaid Suggestion.

Thus does the lady of the sketch acknowledge her acceptance of the decrees of fashion without in any way having her figure or own personal taste in detail interfered with. She says as plainly as anything: "This is my observance of the insistence on plaids. I now am free to live my own life, to display my own taste, and not to be made to look as large as some of your plaids would make me."



The Tightest Skirt in Paris.

In doing this she has chosen that totally new and original foundation of dark blue material for the costume, and her plaid is strictly in the Scottish manner, with dull reds and blues competing with one another in the color scheme. So intent has she been on confining herself to the minimum number of plaids required by fashion that she has not even allowed a little stripe cut out from one of them to garnish the [illegible] panier-like ruffles over the hips.



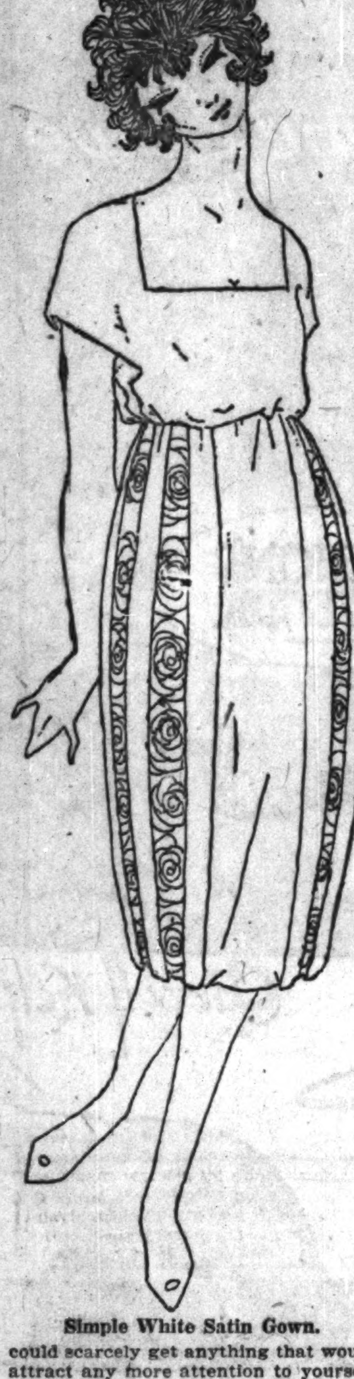
Tailored Suit by Jenny.

The stern severity of these, by the way, demanded a balance, so the artist informed me, and this the designer secured by leaving the left sleeve bare of its lawful allotment of plaid, the full measure of which the right sleeve has availed itself of.

Thus in all of her Scottish demureness does this young woman display herself in the person of a manikin in one of the smart houses, as surely the first sign of the Parisian spring as is the robin in Lincoln park for Chicago.

The lady in the second sketch is Spinelly as she appears nightly at the Palais Royal in a series of costumes that has set Paris to talking. This costume is celebrated for having the tightest skirt of any now in captivity and the most reckless of collars. The latter begins at the waist line on the right of the bodice and extends northward round the neck, until it gradually descends on the other side in a line completing the V shape, the point of which is at the waist line. The white fur which has formed this outline ends its career in a big loop at the lady's side. The skirt is short, as well as tight, and has little motifs of bright green leather sewed in a line from waist to hem. A few of these appear also on the sleeve.

A practical little costume this for wear on sensational occasions. You could scarcely get anything that would attract any more attention to yourself when you go to the opera or receive in your boudoir or salon, or attend a quiet little after the theater supper.



Simple White Satin Gown.

The accompanied tailor suit has been voted one of the most successful for many years. This one is trimmed in fur, but already the model is being ordered for the spring in bands of braid and satin, with the color scheme and the material preserved. Rich tan in a heavy, coarse material, with bands of brown fur, constitutes the suit as it stands. The line is lovely and excellent for Americans. Jenny is its author.

The last illustration shows what the French can do with nothing whatever in the way of material and how simple they can be when they set out with that intent. To be sure, it is not the simplicity of mere innocence because they didn't know any better, but the simplicity of art. It is, you know, one of the highest and most difficult attributes of art to attain.

The dress is of white satin; the bodice speaks for itself—anything so simple as that defies description. The skirt is plaited on the sides, and these four wide plaits over either hip are held in place at the bottom. Between the folds are big scarlet and gold roses, which the plaiting now conceals, now discloses, as one walks.

How to Use the Patterns

If you have any question relating to sewing that you would like to have answered write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

THE girl's dress, No. B703, shows a little different finish at the joining of the waist and skirt that transforms it from an ordinary design into something decidedly pretty and attractive. Children and young girls are most often quite decided in their likes and dislikes about what they wear, and while consciousness and vanity are by all means to be discouraged, it seems right that they should be allowed to express an opinion and have some voice in regard to what they wear. And their clothes, no matter how inexpensive and simply made, should always be pretty and attractive.

No. B703 is a good design for a dressy dress and, of course, the material is a matter of individual choice. The making will not be difficult, all notches and other marks being clearly indicated on the pattern. But, of course, the different measurements of the pattern should be compared with those of the child for whom it is to be used—and remember the more accurately and methodically you learn to work, the less undoing and maybe injuring of your work will be the result.

The belt from the point where it goes through the buckle on the back should be faced with some light silk or other suitable material.

Finish the skirt opening in the front with a "wash" placket, the kind cut in one long strip, going from the top on one side around to the top on the other side. Then arrange the fullness in the middle front so as to conceal the placket opening.

This strip should be cut on the length of the material. Two inches wide will be about right for so small a dress, and one inch longer than the two lengths of the slit. Baste it on in a seam on the wrong side, beginning at the top, and when the end of the slit is reached, make tiny clips in the dress each side of the ending point, and holding the opening out straight so it makes one long line, sew in small backstitches around the end, taking in just enough of a seam to come inside of the clips, then continue in a narrow seam to the top on the other side. Stitch in a seam close to the bastings from one end to the other, then turn in the opposite edge of the strip and hem it down over the seam.

If this is well done there will not be even a slight pucker at the end of the opening. Then one side of the doubled strip is allowed to stand out for the extension side of the placket and the other end will turn in for the faced side, without any sewing showing on the right side.

No. B779 is a good pattern for a sacque that may be made of a variety of materials. Many women will like the warmth that a sacque like this, made of flannel, will give for morning wear with some odd skirt. If any housework is to be done, the skirt should be of some wash material, however, as it never seems clean or suitable to work in nonwashable clothes. The slight fullness that the tuck on each side front will give is a good thing for most figures. The skirt part is cut in one with the waist, and the belt serves to keep the fullness in place.

Pattern No. 619 shows an attractive one piece apron, easy to make and to get in and out of. Probably many women will make several, picking up right lengths in percale or gingham on the remnant counters of the stores. Instead of being seamed under the arms, the edges are bound entirely around the apron. Bias binding of some color in contrast to the ground of the apron material will make an attractive finish. Or the edge can be turned in all around and basted down, then a rather coarse quality of ricrac braid basted on so that the points on one side extend beyond the edge. Then the apron is stitched twice around the entire edge, once as close to the edge as possible, and the second stitching should be about one-half inch inside.

Bindings such as should be used on any edges shaped as those of the apron just referred to should always be cut on the bias of the cloth. The length or warp threads and the woof or cross threads are crossed at an exact right angle to one another, to form a perfect or "true" bias. If the material is wide and not long, bias strips are needed; one corner of the cloth may be turned to give a strip the right length, thus saving cutting into the entire width.

After the cloth has been folded so that the warp exactly crosses the woof threads the fold is creased and the first cutting done through the fold. This edge is on a "true" bias. A pasteboard or other measure, clearly marked as to the width desired for the strip, is laid so that the square end of it is exactly parallel to the cut edge and then the width marked at intervals. Each strip should be measured to get accuracy, for laying a cut strip on the cloth to cut others by almost invariably makes those cut from it a little wider.

Any line off the straight of the cloth is more or less of a bias, and sometimes for facings, where there is no strain, one may use pieces that are not strictly perfect biases, but never for trimming purposes, or where the edge to which the bias strip is to be applied is much curved or shaped.

Cloths with diagonal threads, like serge, cheviot, and crêpe, should always have the bias strips cut from the right hand selvedge of the cloth, as you look at it from the right side. Then the diagonal threads will run at right angles to the cut edge. If they are cut from the opposite side, the diagonals will run parallel to the cut edge, and, no matter how accurately the measuring and cutting may be done, the strips will look bad.

For All to See.

At a formal dance one evening, my partner being a tall and muscular man, lifted me off my feet, and to my embarrassment both dancing pumps fell off, and behold, I had a hole in each of my stockings! M. B.

Squelching a Road Hog.

Being the mother of a rather attractive girl, there are usually young men calling on my daughter. One night a few weeks ago I was out driving in my car. As I was rounding a dark curve in Palmer square a car behind tooted to pass me. I was hardly able to see my way and was undoubtedly "hogging the road." However, as I endeavored to move to the right this speed demon in approaching stuck his head out and yelled wildly, "Get over, you bonehead." I could not help but glance at this sporty roadster fading into the dim distance.

Arriving home a few minutes later, much to my surprise I saw the same green car parked in front of our home. Upon entering, my daughter introduced me to this vociferous young man. Politely and with well modulated tones, intending to make a good impression, he uttered, "I am so pleased to meet you."

It rather amused me to see this personality so changed, and I could not resist the temptation to reply, "Oh, but we have met before."

Charmingly he said, "Have we? I am so sorry I did not recollect."

Revenge may be sweet, and I could not suppress a smile at his growing discomfort when I replied: "Yes, we met about twenty minutes ago in Palmer square."

His visit was exceedingly short. E. E. B.

Jumped to Safety.

During my senior year in a training school for nurses I was on night duty and had several convalescent patients among those under my care.

About midnight I answered a signal from one of the convalescents' rooms and was told that she suspected there was a mouse nibbling at a box of cake that had been brought to her and which she had placed in the closet. I got a broom and the patient brought out the box and shook it, when a tiny mouse jumped out; but instead of using the broom to kill the mouse, I made one good jump for a nearby chair, leaving the patient to shift for herself.

I had read and heard of timid women and mice, but to be one of them, and under such circumstances, disgusted me, and so unprofessional! It is needless to say that the doctors and other nurses who heard of the incident never failed to remind me of my courage. L. A.

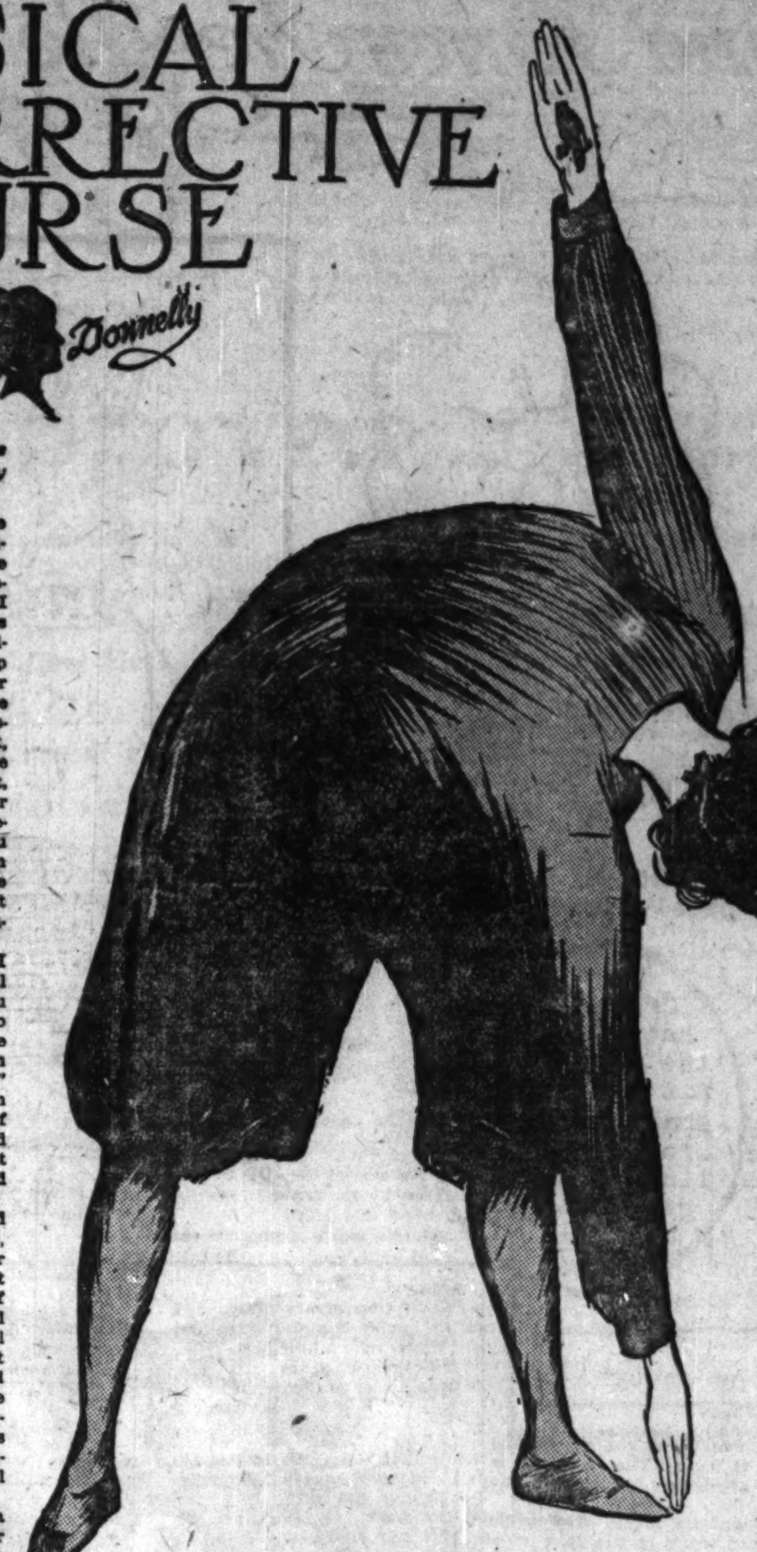
Out of the Past.

Some years ago when returning from South Africa I was the happy bridegroom at a mock marriage performed on the high seas. The young woman has since entered the moving picture field. Last summer I attended a motion picture show with my wife and my mother, and the latter recognized the mock wife on the screen. Unthinkingly she said, "O, Freddie, there's your wife!" F. H. J.

PHYSICAL CORRECTIVE COURSE

By Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.



TODAY I give you the side body bending exercise—the last of the exercises in this physical corrective course. I have given you exercises for the neck, for the shoulders, for the old lady's hump on the back of the neck, for the neck hollows, for the bust, the waist, the muscles at the side of the waist, the fat on the back, the hips, legs, ankles—in fact, a corrective exercise for every ill that may be remedied by such; exercises you might easily detach from the balance of the course and apply with great profit to the ill you are particularly troubled with.

The side body bending I give you today is an all round remedy. All you need to be convinced is to try it and repeat it five times. "I feel its effect on the muscles of my neck," exclaimed a young woman after doing it a couple of times, "and my back and legs and waist. I guess that ought to make me slim and svelte."

It is really an improved form of the straightforward, well known touch the floor with your finger tips. It combines all the benefits of this much recommended exercise with an additional stretch on the muscles at the side of the waist—and if you, by any chance, have that bulging over the corset back you will find this thoroughly effective in gaining a straight, youthful back.

For the waist line it has a quicker reducing power than the forward bend. In fact I could go on at length describing the virtues of this side body bending movement, but if you are not interested you probably will not try it, but if you are you will, and you will see for yourself what it does for the muscles of your body from head to feet. If you will only stick at it for one month I will guarantee you not only a slimmer waist line but a few years shed and a general rejuvenation.

Ready, now! Feet about two foot lengths apart, erect standing position, abdomen in, knees stiff, head up, chin in. In other words, a good erect standing position. Then stretch arms sidewards, stretching to finger tips. Now, keeping abdomen flat and knees stiff, try to touch with the finger tips of the right hand the toes of your left foot, keeping the left arm outstretched. Do this five times. Then reverse, touching the toes of the right foot with the finger tips of the left hand. Simple to understand, isn't it?

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Tribune."

Answers to Inquiries.

MARGARET: THERE ARE TWO causes for ingrowing toe nails. Improper footgear is one and cutting the nails wrong is another When cutting your nails cut them either square across or slightly concave. Lift the ingrowing corners of the nail and push a small pledget of absorbent cotton into the space. Slowly increase the size of the piece of cotton until the edge of the nail, having been lifted above the flesh on the side, no longer irritates it. Wear a shoe that is broad at the toe.

* *

MARY JANE: THE CONSTANT smarting of the feet can be relieved by a five minutes' hot bath night and morning with a little alum in the water, about an ounce of alum to two gallons of water. Wipe the skin carefully, then rub with cold cream or olive oil, and dust with talcum powder. Change your shoes and stockings night and morning. Avoid wearing patent leather shoes, particularly in a warm room. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for perspiring feet if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

Splendid Treatment for Wrinkled, Flabby Skin

She who coddles herself all day in an overheated house and finds her skin flushed and flabby as a consequence, can quickly freshen up for the evening by just bathing her face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered Saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. She will find this most refreshing. It smooths out the wrinkles and draws in the saggy tissue almost immediately, and the face appears considerably rejuvenated.

The ingredients, of course, are perfectly harmless and no trace of the treatment remains on the skin. Be sure to ask the druggist for the powdered Saxolite.

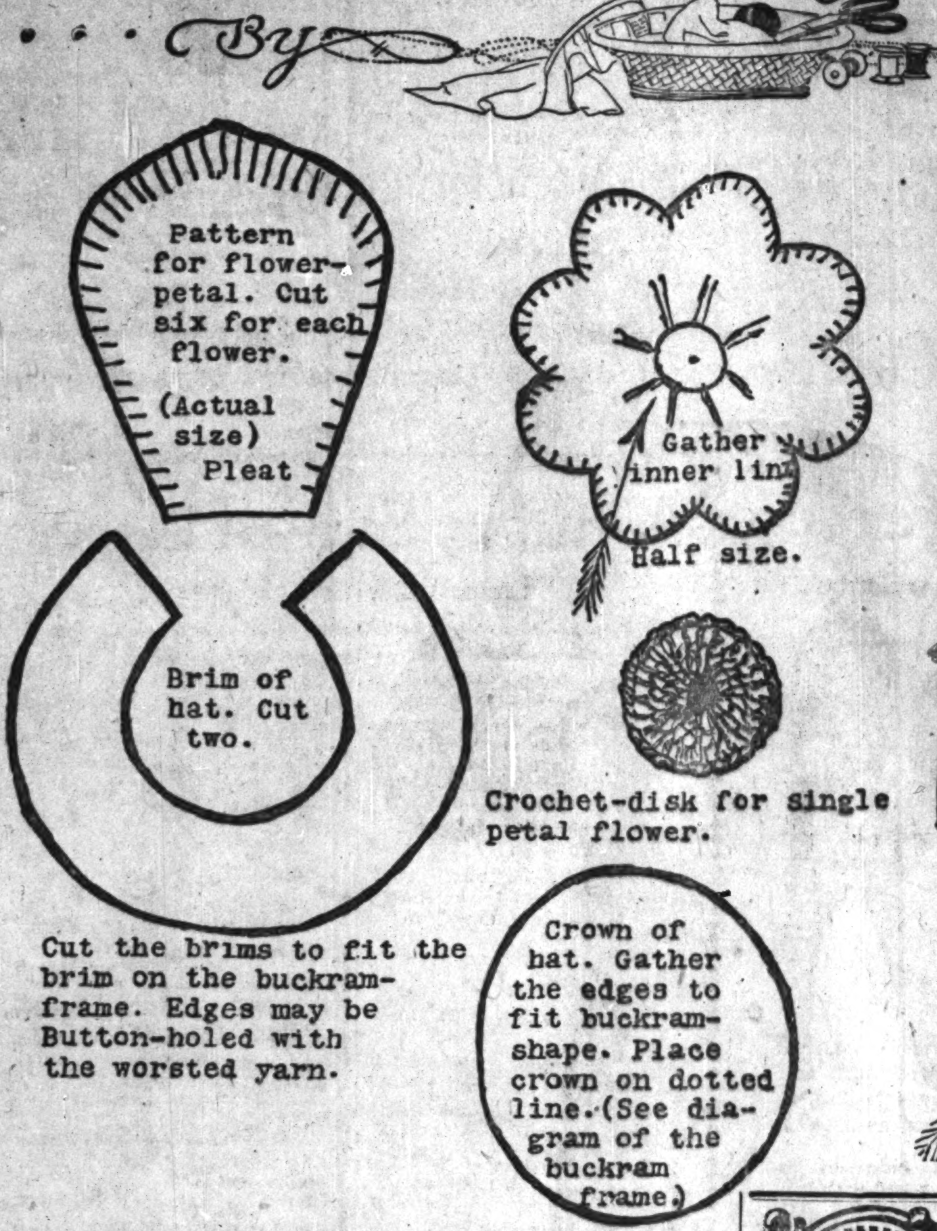
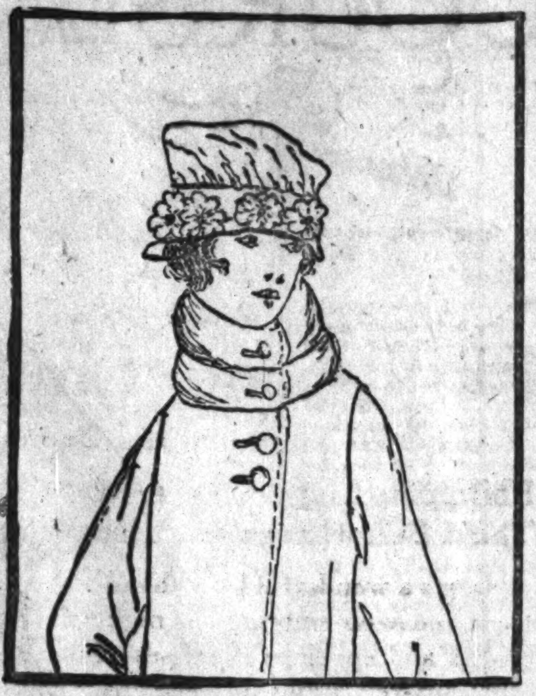
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

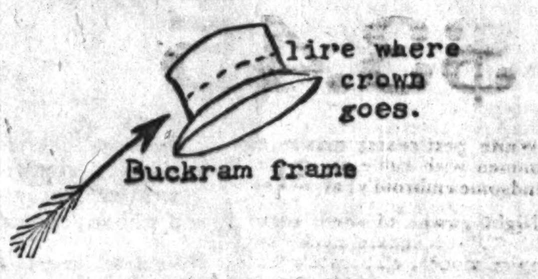
By Clotilde

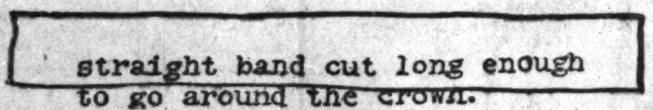


Pattern for flower-petal. Cut six for each flower.
(Actual size)
Pleat
Gather inner line
Half size.
Brim of hat. Cut two.
Crochet-disk for single petal flower.
Cut the brims to fit the brim on the buckram-frame. Edges may be Button-holed with the worsted yarn.
Crown of hat. Gather the edges to fit buckram-shape. Place crown on dotted line. (See diagram of the buckram frame.)



As the hat looks when it is finished.





HAT FOR ROUGH WEAR.

THE hat illustrated is designed for stormy days and rough wear. It is guaranteed to keep its shape and also keep the hair dry. It is becoming and practical, and, best of all, it can be made by any woman who can do a bit of fancy work.

The material is a wire or buckram frame, something like the illustration; also three-quarters of a yard of dull finish enamel cloth, in brown or black, and one-sixth of a yard of flannel in any desirable shade. If the hat is brown, flannel in old gold or burnt orange shades would be good; if black, the many shades of blue, terra cotta, or warm tan would be pretty. Last of all, some worsted yarn in a color that would contrast with the flannel chosen.

By following the diagram any one can cut out the four pieces of enamel cloth, the two brims, the crown, and the straight band. The trimming is made up of flowers made from the flannel.

Two designs are given. The single petal pattern would be the most effective, only it takes a little more time to make the flowers. If the single petal flowers are chosen the process of making is to cut six petals for each flower, then make a line of graduated buttonhole stitches around the curved edge (see diagram). Make a plait in the straight edge, join the six petals, and place a crochet disk in the center of the flower.

If the eight-scallop disk is selected for the flower, the edges are buttonholed with an even length stitch. Two long stitches run up to the middle of each scallop. The inner edge is gathered up and a button the size of a nickel is covered with the enamel cloth and placed in the center of the flower. The eight flowers are arrangd on the straight band after the edges are turned under and the band is arranged on the hat. The lining goes in last.

ETIQUETTE

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

COURTESY ON STREET CARS.

SEVERAL weeks ago I had something to say on the subject of street car courtesy, and called attention to the fact that southern men were much more careful to give up their seats to women than northerners. In response came a letter from "A Southerner," who, although he agreed with me as to the fact, said that the reason for this was that southern women are more courteous when favors are shown them.

He wrote: "In the south the women are considerate enough to thank a man when he has done them a courtesy, such as surrendering a seat in a crowded car. In my many visits to northern cities, time and again have I hung onto a strap so that a woman could be seated, and only once have I been thanked."

If men in general feel this way, it is indeed a deplorable thing.

Virtue is doubtless its own reward in many cases, but we are all human enough to like to have our kindness appreciated, and to be discouraged from further out of the way favors if our little sacrifices go unnoticed. Let the men continue to give up their seats, but let no woman allow a man to do so and to accept his place without a pleasant smile and word of thinks, lest her whole sex be condemned as ungrateful and discourteous.

T. K. V.: Long white kid gloves are being worn a great deal just now, although for some time they were discarded. If you will write me again, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, I shall be happy to send you a list of books on etiquette.

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake care the Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

When Women Woo.

"Dear Miss Blake: Why is leap year? And why is it that women have the privilege of proposing during leap year? CURIOUS."

Leap year, more properly known as bissextile, is the name given to the year containing 366 days. The astronomers of Julius Caesar, 46 B. C., settled the solar year at 365 days six hours. These hours were set aside and at the end of four years made a day which was added to the fourth year. The English name for the bissextile year is an allusion to the result of the interposition of the extra day; for after the 29th of February a date "leaps over," the day of the week on which it would fall in ordinary years. Thus a birthday on the 10th of June, a Monday, will in the next year, if a leap year, be on the 10th of June, a Wednesday.

Of the origin of the custom for women to woo, not be wooed, during leap year, no satisfactory explanation has ever been offered. In 1288 a law was enacted in Scotland that "it is statut and ordaint that during the reign of hir maist blissit megeste, for ilk yeare knowne as lepe yeare, ilk mayden ladye of bothe highe and lowe estait shall hae libertee to bespeke ye man she likes, albeit he refuses to talk hir to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulcted in ye sum ane pundis or less, as his estait may be; except and awis gif he can make it appeare that he is betrothit ene ither woman he then shall be free." A few years later a like law was passed in France, and in the fifteenth century the custom was legalized in Genoa and Florence.

He Turns Away.

"Dear Miss Blake: If you could help me out in a little problem of mine I would be more than thankful to you. I am 15 years old and I am very fond of a 16 year old boy. We have known each other since our first year at high school and have been the best of friends till lately. He always used to speak to me when we met, but now when we meet he turns away and pretends not to see me. I don't know what on earth has happened to make him act this way. Could you possibly tell me how we may become friends again? JEANETTE."

Maybe the young man is going through that stage of evolution when girls as a matter of male consideration are discarded quite! In that event you must wait until he assumes a more normal attitude. Or maybe you unconsciously hurt his feelings at the most tender age. Why not stop him some day and ask him what is the matter? School girl and boy friendships are such precious memories in later life that it is too bad to let a trifling misunderstanding grow into an impregnable barrier.

MAKING HOUSEWORK EASIER.

HOUSEWORK is in the throes of some highly fundamental readjustments, with much wastefulness and consequent confusion. Great numbers of pretty schemes are being recommended as cure-alls or ways of escape from a duty that is as necessary to decency, comfort, happiness, social stability, increase of ability, good taste, and so forth, ad infinitum, as washing the face duly often.

If housework seems like a hateful business, look for the inconveniences and confusions under which it is conducted. Perhaps you have got so used to them that your mind is blunted to their influence. Perhaps you are enduring some such wearing and wasteful inconvenience as the paring of vegetables with a cheap knife or cutting bread with a dull knife and in an awkward fashion. This work is as simple as dressing yourself; why allow it to be hateful, since it must be endured? Perhaps you are enduring the centuries long inconvenience of working over a sink many inches too low for your height. Do something about it.

In general, working with imperfect tools, or under exhausting conditions, having to do something you have not learned to do in the best and easiest way, is highly representative of the inconveniences of housework, which is so greatly responsible for the low place it holds among the great duties of the world.

Worth All It Costs.

The people who have developed the finer arts of thinking and doing look upon the house and all the work it involves as highly worth all it costs of effort. A look into Philip Gilbert Hammerton's book, "Round My House," would convince you of that.

It has been the narrow minded, the clannish, the uncomfortable living peoples of the world, who have endured frightful inconveniences century after century. The Scotch Highlanders are among the people Hammerton shows to have endured the most senseless inconveniences, some as easily corrected as driving a nail. They for centuries thought carrying a gun noble, but would not so willingly carry a hammer. Further, Hammerton says:

"So about food and its preparation. The Highlander lives on the barest necessities, and will not stir to procure an addition to them. Dr. Macculoch found a profusion of lobsters and crabs close to a laird's house where such delicacies were unknown. He gave the laird a crab pot to catch them, came back a year after, and found that it was in the possession of the hens and had never been used. Another Highlander friend made no use of the salmon which yachtsmen from the south were catching close to his residence. He had possessed a net 'twenty years ago, but it was full of holes.'"

Know the Art of Living.

In contrast to this we are given a picture of French ways with foods, although Hammerton says in one place: "The patience with which the French submit to unendurable inconveniences about their dwellings is another thing which surprises me."

But the French have the practical mind, and Hammerton speaks of their habitual occupation with all minor cares, "which applies itself with incessant activity and ingenuity to the solution of the problem, how to make the most of the world as man finds it; how to get the most and best food, drink, clothing, out of it, and every sort of practical convenience. Many generations of clever and ingenious people have left behind them an accumulating tradition of practical skill in the art of living. The Highlander lives on the simplest food, and does not know how to make the most of the resources of his own bad climate. He grows nothing in his garden but cabbages, though he might grow other vegetables and some fruits as easily. The Frenchman grows everything he can, and values eatable animals which the Highlander would not taste."

Following this paragraph are two pages about some of the foods the French almost alone of all the peoples of the world eat, and then the statement: "They take trouble cheerfully about household affairs and willingly, in rather poor families, divide much household work among themselves."

It seems to me that there are two texts in the above quotations which if lived up to would revolutionize home and society. One is the making the most of the world as man finds it and the other is in the statement, "They take trouble cheerfully about household affairs."

Master Practical Details.

The more trouble (but please call it something else) we are willing to take about the minor cares of life, the more we can make over to our heart's desire the world as we find it. The people who will, and willingly, master the practical details of living are the people who can soonest forget them, sometimes because of the wealth that comes as a result, sometimes because of the health, and again because these things become as natural and easy to do as breathing. Often those who will not are hag ridden by them all their lives, having no ease and comfort in age, nor ever any real peace of mind.

There are too many homes where every meal is considered an inconvenience, even though there are three of them a day. In some homes, too many, the fantastic notion prevails that all work which promotes physical comfort is menial. Of course there is no comprehension of the fact that high physical comfort is a means to some of the highest ends and aims of life.

And after the inconvenience of getting the meal there is the inconvenience of washing the dishes. With every inconvenience for the cooking of a meal and with every inconvenience for serving it, lack of knowledge of how being the greatest of all, the house won the name of "woman killer."

Perhaps dishwashing will be considered an inconvenience till the end of time, but there are many ways of making it light, and I would not include the use of paper plates and paper napkins, except for picnics. But there are a great number of attractive utensils now that may go straight from the stove to the table, and the nicer the atmosphere of our table the more of such we may use. For instance, the old fashioned, big handled, common French casserole may give a real distinction to the right kind of a table and contain almost the whole meal.

Housework Not Menial.

But as to dishwashing, it is wrong sorts of cooking, with too hot a fire, that makes some dishes hard to clean. For instance, little individual creamed dishes, sometimes called ramekins, are easy to make and the dishes easy to wash if they are not subjected to too much fire. Cold fish, cold meat, or cold vegetables are cut up, heated up in a cream sauce, put into the dishes with some bread crumbs or cheese over, and put under the broiler for ten minutes. They may then be as easy to wash as a saucer, whereas finished in too hot an oven they might require soaking.

The supreme inconvenience to and in housework rests in the idea that it is menial. Get rid of that idea as your greatest stumbling block. It originated in primitive, blunted, narrow minds.

A recent book on Mexico says that a ten dollar a month clerk would not be seen carrying anything if he could find a porter. But millionaires and the privileged people all over the world carry their bags and other trappings. The Arab of the desert scorned everything industrial and remained an Arab almost starving for months at a time. If you are starving for good food to eat and the dear comforts of home look to it. You may have an Arab mind.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

By Elizabeth O. Hiller.

Split Pea Puree.

Pick over two cups of dried split peas; soak over night in two quarts of cold water. Drain. Add two and one-half quarts of cold water, three tablespoons of chopped onion, and four tablespoons of finely chopped salt pork. Cook slowly until peas are soft (from three to four hours); rub through a sieve. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, add two tablespoons of flour, stir until well blended, then add gradually two cups of scalded milk, one and one-half teaspoons of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of white pepper, and two or three drops of tabasco sauce. Combine mixtures, bring to the boiling point. Serve with croutons.

Sour Cream Cake.

Beat one egg until thick and lemon tinted; add gradually, while stirring constantly, one cup of sugar. Sift together one and seven-eighths cups of flour, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of cinnamon, and one-half teaspoon of grated nutmeg; add alternately to the first mixture three-fourths teaspoon of soda, dissolved in two-thirds cup of thick sour cream mixed with one-third cup of sour milk. Beat thoroughly and turn into a buttered tube cake pan and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven. Spread with maple or chocolate frosting. If the sour cream is not thick and rich, use one cup of sour cream, omitting the milk.

Shad Roe, with Tomato Sauce.

Cook a pair of shad roes in boiling, salted, acidulated water twelve minutes. Drain, cover with cold water, let stand five minutes, drain again, and dry between the folds of a clean tea towel. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, roll in flour, then in slightly beaten egg and fine cracker crumbs. Saute in butter or bacon fat, turning often that they may brown evenly. Dispose on hot serving platter and pour around tomato sauce.

Baked Potatoes.

Select smooth, uniform sized potatoes. Wash and scrub with a small brush; there should be six. Bake and when done, remove a lengthwise slice from each; carefully scoop out the pulp with a spoon. Mash; add one tablespoon of butter, season with salt and white pepper, moisten with one half cup of hot milk or cream, add the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff. Refill the skins with the mixture, using a pastry bag and rose tube for this purpose. Bake in the oven until potatoes are "fluffy" and delicately browned.

Baked Finnan Haddie.

Wipe a thick finnan haddie with a piece of cheese cloth wrung from cold water. Arrange fish in a dripping pan, pour over equal parts of milk and water. Place in a moderate oven where it will heat slowly. Let remain there twenty-five minutes. Dispose on a hot serving platter, garnish with slices of lemon, and surround with baked potatoes.

Celery au Jus.

Remove the tops from three heads of celery, leaving about six inches long. Wash, trim, and scrape the roots to a point. Cook in boiling, salted, acidulated water five minutes. Drain and reserve water. Melt three tablespoons of butter in a saucepan; add three tablespoons of flour, stir until well blended, then add gradually while stirring constantly one cup of the water in which the celery was parboiled and one-half cup of hot milk or cream. Season with salt, pepper, and a few drops of Worcestershire sauce; pour over cooked celery and simmer until celery is tender [about thirty minutes]. Dispose celery in hot serving dish, strain sauce over it, and garnish with pimientos cut in tiny bits. Serve with roast wild ducks.

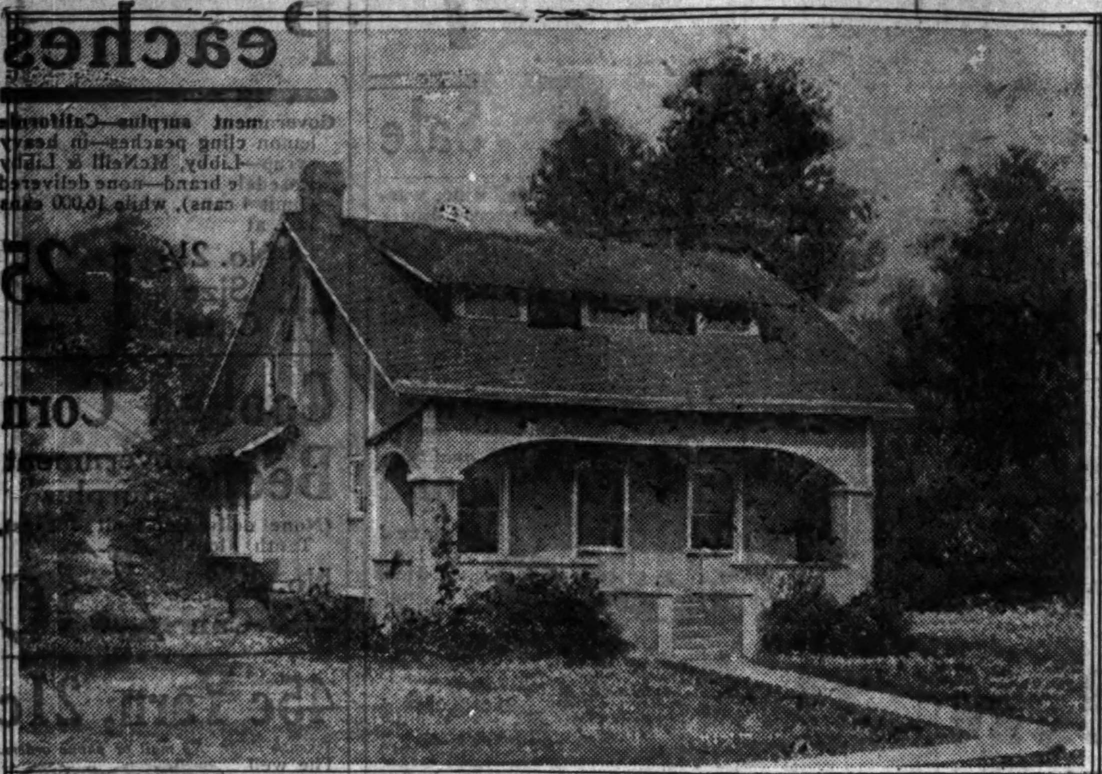
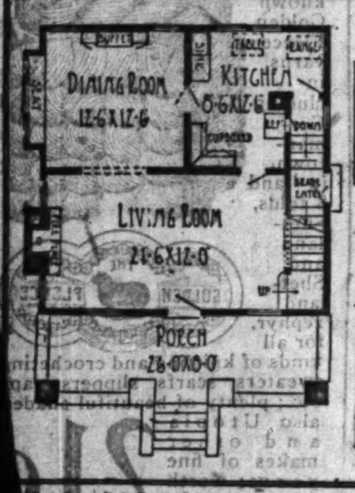
The HOME HARMONIOUS

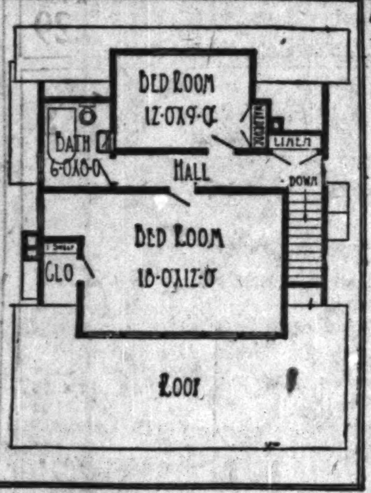
by Anita de Campi



A LITTLE SQUARE STUCCO HOUSE
COURTESY AMERICAN BUILDER



...RST FLOOR PLAN



SECOND FLOOR PLAN

...ta de Campi will be glad to assist ...ome maker in any problems per... to home building and home fur... Address your letter to Anita de ... Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Inclose ...mped, addressed envelope for a per... reply

...UCCO GROWS IN FAVOR.

...OMPARATIVELY, it has been only a few years since the exteriors of homes have been plastered or "stuccoed," but this ...al has grown steadily in favor, ...ow many thousands of stucco ...s are being erected. The reason ...e popularity of stucco homes is ...hey are good to look at, not cost... build, and provide exterior walls ...re resistant to fire.

...attractive little home of stucco is shown in the illustration. This is a small house, containing only five rooms, and is comparatively inexpensive to build. But all its rooms are of good size and are arranged for comfort and convenience. It is the exterior, however, that will have a strong appeal to those who want to build an artistic, attractive home but have not a great amount of money to invest.

While it does not look so, this house is exactly square, being twenty-six feet each way. With this fact in mind it will be seen that clever architectural designing, especially in the roof and the porch, has made this as pretty a home as could be wanted. The gable roof has long sweeps to the front and rear, that at the front extending out so as to make the porch roof. Into the roof are set long dormers at both front and rear, providing space for good sized bedrooms that are well lighted and ventilated. The overhang of the porch roof is supported on square, stuccoed columns, and between is a graceful arch. The dining room bay breaks the straight wall on one side, and a small covered grade entrance that on the other.

The only unusual feature about a stucco house is the fact that it is covered with plaster, which may be smooth, rough, or "dashed" with small fragments of marble, or granite, or with pebbles. Thus one material gives the home builder a wide choice of exterior appearances. The stucco is put on over any of the standard building materials—brick, hollow tile, concrete blocks, or frame. Over the concrete block or hollow tile it is applied directly to the rough surfaces of these materials; over brick or frame it is put onto wood or metal lath or expanded metal.

On the first floor of this house are living and dining rooms and kitchen; on the second floor are two bedrooms and the bathroom. The living room is of the size that is popular now, extending across the front of the house. Its dimensions are 21½ feet by 12 feet, with an open stairway at one end and a fireplace at the other. The dining room is square, 12x12 feet, and has a bay window with a seat under the triple windows and a built-in buffet. The kitchen, 8½ feet by 12½ feet, is equipped so that the work can be done easily and is provided with a wall case for dishes convenient to the dining room.

The front bedroom on the second floor is larger than the average, 18x12 feet, and the back bedroom is 12x9 feet. The two are divided by a hall, at the end of which is the bathroom.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

TWO FRIENDS.

IN 1907 I was a sophomore at the university and at one of the interliterary parties I met a senior engineer whom I got to know pretty well the next four months. He was rich, interesting, and capable, yet I never could really give him a decided "yes," though I did promise him that if in five years I found no one else whom I liked better I would marry him.

Thereafter he wrote me annually on the anniversary of the day we met. Two years afterward I met a senior and we were married in October after I graduated. When I married, the anniversary letters stopped and I completely forgot the existence of Melton.

In 1918 my husband and I and our two babies were living in one of the suburbs of a city in Georgia in a bungalow. Next door was a large house and the owner had decided to take in roomers during the war period, as rent was high and houses scarce. I noticed a pretty soldier's wife who came to room. She had a handsome little boy of 4 who liked to play with my little boy, and I encouraged their friendship, as my boy had no acquaintances.

Every one was entertaining the soldiers and I found that the little boy's father was a corporal and I also found that whenever I gave him anything to eat he ate ravenously, particularly bread and butter. It occurred to me that the unmarried soldiers were the guests of the town, but that no one was being nice to the wives of the soldiers and that they deserved some attention, so I went to call on the corporal's wife and found her an attractive, refined woman.

But it took only a short time to discover that she was making an heroic attempt to make the $66 of a corporal's salary cover the rent of $5 a week, pay for his $10,000 insurance, a $50 Liberty bond, and their groceries. I had made over too many things myself not to recognize that her clothes and the boy's had been turned and turned. I was as hospitable as I could be to her without offending, and gradually learned the story. Of how, when they married they had been wealthy, of the loss of money, of the determination to serve the country, but of her self-denials I heard nothing.

Finally I offered to care for the little boy during the daytime and, through my husband, got her a position in the city at $15 a week. Gradually she got the boy new clothes, herself warm clothes, and the little boy was not quite so hungry. Then she offered to stay with my babies while my husband and I went out in the evening.

One night we were going to the theater and she was to stay; then she said that her husband would be in that night from camp and she would bring him over to stay with her. When he came I found it was Melton of my sophomore year, but his wife never knew and never discovered that we had ever been anything more than the most casual acquaintances. I remained her friend and she mine, and I am thoroughly convinced that Melton was much more devoted to her than he would ever have been to me.

She wrote me yesterday, for he was demobilized last November and has a good position, that their baby girl had just been born and that Melton had wanted to name it for her but that she had insisted on naming it for me, as I had been her best friend, and today I am sending my little namesake a heart of gold.

Born in 1839 Dr. Caldwell
Still in His Office Daily

Wonderful vigor of the founder of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
Millions now use his famous prescription

Physicians know that good health depends largely upon proper digestion and elimination and that much sickness results from constipation. No one knows this better than the "family" doctor, the general practioner.

DR. W. B. Caldwell of Monticello, Illinois, was and is a family doctor. The whole human body, not any small part of it, was his practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

Dr. Caldwell in the course of 40 years' practice, for he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875, had found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year the preparation was first placed on the market. The picture of Dr. Caldwell that appears on the package was taken in that year.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in the doctor's private practice. Today the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it, for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is selling at the rate of over 6 million bottles a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Syrup Pepsin, and the formulator of that prescription is fortunately living to see its wonderful success.

Women, children and elderly people are especially benefitted by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. While it is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases, it is mild and gentle in its action and does not cause griping and strain. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby and children like it and take it willingly.

Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home. Where many live someone is sure to need it quickly.

FOLKLORE ON COLORS

by DORIS BLAKE

"Red and yellow, catch a fellow.
Pink and blue, he'll catch you.
Pink and blue, he'll be true.
Black and white, hold him tight."

"Green is forsaken, yellow forsworn,
But blue is the luckiest color that's worn."

GREEN is an ominous color to be married in. The old doggerel runs: "Those dressed in blue have lovers true; in green and blue, forsaken quite."

There is a belief that green or yellow looking eyes belong to a jealous superstition, from which has arisen the "green eyed jealousy" expression. The combination of green and red is unlucky.

Red was a lucky color among the Indians and the chiefs painted their faces that color after winning a battle.

Brown in olden times signified death because it is the color of the earth to which all return.

Blue is heavenly, truth, love, constancy, fidelity.

In the United States flag blue is love, truth, and steadfastness.

Yellow is the symbol of the sun.

Purple is the color of royalty, loyalty, and things true to celestial origin.

Violet is love and truth, but also passion and suffering.

Gray is the shade of penance and of sin.

White is the token of life, light, innocence, purity, faith, and joy.

When a Sioux Indian courts a girl he paints his eyes blue and yellow and she paints hers red, as these are the lucky colors for love.

There are colors for the months: January, crimson; February, heliotrope; March, dark blue; April, gray; May, pink; June, white; July, light blue; August, yellow; September, lavender; October, golden brown; November, dark brown; December, green.

Symbolism of colors, whether displayed in dresses, the background of pictures, or otherwise, is as follows:

Black typifies grief, death.

Blue, hope, love of divine works; in dress, divine contemplation, piety, sincerity.

Pale blue, peace, prudence, love of good works, a serene conscience

Gold, glory and power.

Green, faith, gladness, immortality, the resurrection of the just, in dress, the gladness of the faithful.

Pale green, baptism.

Purple, justice royalty.

Red, martyrdom for faith, charity; in dress, divine love.

Rose, martyrdom.

Scarlet, the fervor and glory of witnesses to the church.

Silver, chastity and purity.

Violet, penitence.

White, purity, temperance, innocence, chastity, faith; in dress, innocence and purity.

Married in white, you have chosen all right
Married in green ashamed to be seen.
Married in gray, you will go far away.
Married in red, you will wish yourself dead.
Married in blue, love ever true.
Married in yellow, you're ashamed of your fellow.
Married in black, you will wish yourself back
Married in pink, of you he'll e'er think.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

AN UNOFFICIAL HEAD.

A YOUNG woman with whom I have had a business association recently has found herself occupying a position of responsibility minus the title of authority and the good salary that rightly belonged to the holder of the job. She lacked just the degree of self-assertiveness that would have made her the recognized head of an important department in a large retail house.

Miss R. had been second in authority in the management of the department for four years and was looked upon as a valuable and efficient assistant manager. At the height of the business season the manager left the firm to go into business for himself. For a week or two afterward nothing was known definitely as to whom his successor would be, but there were many rumors afloat, some to the effect that a new man was to be taken in from another firm, while others named men from the different departments in the house.

In the meantime, under Miss R.'s unofficial direction, the work of the department ran on smoothly and profitably through the busiest season of the year.

After a few weeks one of the officials of the firm announced that a new department head would not be appointed for a while. It was arranged that Miss R. would continue with her work as heretofore under his personal supervision.

For six months now she has been actually running the department. She has had no more supervision from the firm's officials than her predecessor had received. The department is one of the model ones in the house and has grown in success under this woman's management. Although she has been working under a pleasant excitement in being allowed a free hand in the management of the department, she has nevertheless been conscious of a feeling of resentment against her employers for failing to give her the full measure of consideration that any man in her situation would have received in the matter of acknowledged authority and increased salary.

Before the change in the department actually occurred, when it was a mere possibility, Miss R. was heard to declare that if she were offered the work and responsibility of the manage. job without being duly recognized as manager, under no circumstances would she accept the position. The fact is, she wasn't given a chance to make a decision, but drifted along in the job, feeling that at any moment a new manager would step into the place.

The woman who is continually standing up for her "rights" is not the most popular figure in business and is not always successful, but a bit of aggressiveness from a clever business woman is often needed to convince her employers that she is entitled to the consideration that a man would receive under similar circumstances.

It isn't fair, of course, that an employer should make a distinction in the matter of salary, position, etc., between a man and a woman whose work and ability are equal, but it is true that some do. Fortunately, the ranks of unfair employers are growing smaller all the time, and it is probable that before long the woman who is placed in a big job will not have to ask for proper and substantial recognition of the fact.

Vamp Stories

One of the Old Birds.

One of the "old birds" who spends most of his time among the girls of the younger set was invited to a masque ball. The first time I saw him on the floor, I guided my partner in his direction.

To our delight we came up just in time to hear him implore the little shepherdess to come sit in the corner, unmask, and talk with him. She skillfully led him on, then suddenly ran laughing away. My partner was giggling so extravagantly that I pressed her for the reason.

"First time I ever heard of a girl vamping her own dad!" was the answer. J. H. V.

Lively Chatter Wasted.

A vampish looking young woman entered the hotel dining room and cast a casual glance around the room and finally made her way towards a table at which sat a middle aged man. She sat down at the table as though she were acquainted with him and started a lively chatter. The man neither raised his eyes nor answered, but finished his dinner, laid down a bill, and left the table. The idle waiters had been working hard to keep straight faces during the proceeding and one approached her and said, "That gink's as blind as a bat and deaf as a door nail." H. H.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Chance to Meet Singers Offered Friends of Opera

By Mme. X.

CHICAGO society is at its fleetest and gayest moment, just as autumn leaves seem brightest the instant before they scatter and vanish. The world of fashion—or an important element in it—will soon scatter and vanish, but at the moment it is racing madly from luncheons to teas; from dinners to dances or opera.

The latter is "trés à la mode" this year, more so than ever before, and this is largely the achievement of the Friends of Opera, that busy, buzzing, bustling body of boosters. (I can get no more b's.) They are now planning a grand get together party for Tuesday evening, Jan. 20, in the gold room of the Congress hotel, where members of the Friends of Opera and shining lights of the Chicago Grand Opera company may foregather and find out what good fellows they all are.

The affair will be an after the opera occasion, and will include a supper and dance. Only friends of the opera and friends of friends of opera will be invited to meet the songbirds of all nationalities who enable us, naturally modest Chicagoans to announce to our envious and incredulous contemporaries that we have the best grand opera in the world today.

It should be a delightful and memorable gathering, if the thrushes and nightingales will only come out of their thickets and consort for a few hours with the voiceless birds of bright plumage.

First Come, First Served.

Some years ago Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick, the patron saints of our opera, undertook to give such a party, and invited all the season seat and box subscribers to meet the opera folk. The former numbered thousands. The McCormicks were royal hosts and had a beautiful setting and splendid supper for their guests. The walls of the gold ballroom were hung thick with American beauty roses imbedded in smilax. Great platters piled high with purple and white grapes and other fruit adorned the buffets. Champagne by the dozen dozen cases awaited the multitude—it was long before July 1, 1919.

Mr. and Mrs. McCormick's guests were perhaps a little belated in presenting themselves, detained by the evening's operatic performance or some such thing, so Mr. McCormick, seeing a lot of people in the corridors outside the ballroom, and thinking they might be shy guests, asked a man you and I know well to go out and round them up. He did, and so gave the members of some fraternal organization (who happened to be in session in a nearby room) the time of their lives.

In they trooped; they tore the roses off the walls; they filled their pockets full of grapes; they tucked bottles of "extra dry" under their arms and, like a locust swarm in South Africa, they stripped the place where they passed of everything edible, drinkable and smellable, and then vanished, as the locusts vanish, into the dark, impenetrable void that surrounds the pleasant gardens in which society plays.

Strengthens Friendly Feeling.

Several years of acquaintance across the footlights with the members of our company have already given most of us spectators and habitués a feeling of friendly intimacy with different personalities which such a party might deepen and strengthen.

I myself should like to meet Dufranne, that genial baritone whose rich voice and trained understanding have made so many rôles throb with life. I should like to tell Maguenat, face to face, what a thoroughly satisfactory artist he is, what a dashing, wicked brother he makes for Manon, what a subtle, fascinating Guido (is it Guido?) he contributes to "Monna Vanna." Chicago critics never have done him full justice. I should like to express to Warnery the exquisite pleasure his perfectly enunciated French always gives me.

The more conspicuous artists—Galli-Curci, Mary Garden, Rosa Raisa, Baklanoff, Titto Ruffo—drink their fill of praise every week. We have, however, so many first raters in our opera company who are rather overshadowed by the towering personalities above mentioned, who, could they know they had a strong, but unexpressed, personal following, might be encouraged thereby. Such an organization as the Friends of Opera and such a party as this they propose to give affords just such an opportunity.

Luncheon at Arts Club.

An echo of opera was the luncheon given John A. Carpenter last Thursday by the Arts club, especially to celebrate the success of his beautiful ballet, "The Birthday of the Infanta."

The Arts club is becoming more and more a part of the daily life of its devotees. It fills a place which we didn't know was void, but which now would be a horrid, yawning chasm should the Arts club perish.

It's a favorite rendezvous for luncheon, where any day you may see some or all of the following members: The John A. Carpenters, the George Higginson Jrs., Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, the David Adlers, Mrs. John M. Clark, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, Mrs. and Miss Gerstenberg, Robert Allerton, Arthur Heun, and Eames MacVeaugh.

By the way E. G., a reader of this pillar of polite information, suggests that we promote a movement to abandon such inelegant and ungrammatical expressions as forenoon and afternoon in favor of the Biblical diurnal divisions which divide the day into morning and evening, morning from sunrise to noon and evening from noon to sunset. South of Mason and Dixon's line this form obtains.

Personally, we're rather fond of the terms forenoon and afternoon, and don't feel inspired to battle for the others until several grosser errors are righted, such as "he don't," "that far," "she is home," " they left today," etc. We like better E. G.'s other suggestion that we go in for tabooing the use of the verb lunch for the noun luncheon. She says: "you may dine at dinner, lunch at luncheon, but could not evry well lunch at lunch, or dine at dine," Can you breakfast at breakfast, E. G.?

However, your point is perfectly well taken and if our readers will only read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest this they'll be a step further toward speaking an English pure and undefiled. Our language is so rich and splendid a heritage that we should cherish it more carefully than we do.

Second Assembly This Week.

Next Friday the second of the season's two assembly balls takes place at the Blackstone hotel, when the gay and fashionable will turn out in full strength for a final whirl before the general scattering scheduled by the end of January.

Politics is a favorite topic at social functions, and there were many well known men and women present at last qMonday's Republican banquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Horace Gray, Major and Mrs. Hooker, Mr. and Mrs. Slason Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. John Bass, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Arrick, Mrs. David Cook, Miss Helen Gilbert, Miss Grace Dixon, Robert H. McCormick, Henry J. Patten, and George Porter were a few who came within our line of vision, besides such well known leaders at the speakers 'table as Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and Mrs. Medill McCormick.

Great doings are planned for the great days coming in June when the Republicans gather here from June 8 to 15. Arthur Meeker is proposing to bring his yacht, the Victoria, and anchor it out in the lake as a refuge for himself and his friends from the various kinds of frenzy and heat that often surcharge a political convention. Many other Chicagans will keep open house It will be a real old-time powwow.

Passing of Historic Home.

Every one familiar with the North Shore will regret the destruction of the C. B. Farwell house at Lake Forest, one of the oldest and best known residences of that famous district. Since 1873 the large, hospitable looking white frame dwelling had stood in the midst of its sweeping, tree shaded lawns. To the east, across a stretch of the park the late Charles B. Farwell gave to the village, the lake glittered and glimmered through the foliage. To the west a pretty, rush bordered pond, the pride of the community, reflected sky and trees. Large gardens, grape arbors, stables, and the gardener's cottage occupied the rest of the square, which comprised "Fairlawn."

Last autumn Mrs. Robert G. McGann, Mr. Farwell's second daughter, bought Fairlawn, which since the death of her father had been the home of his youngest daughter, the late Mrs. H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, and her family. Mrs. McGann had undertaken extensive alterations in the house and had moved in all the furnishings of her other Lake Forest home when the fire came. So fierce was the blaze, which began in the east side of the structure and was fanned into fury by the strong east wind, that Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, living a mile or more away, was awakened by the red glare reflected on her bedroom walls.

When asked if the insurance would cover her loss, Mrs. McGann replied sadly that it would hardly cover the loss of one roomful of paintings.

The house at one time or another has probably sheltered almost every visitor of note who has come to this part of the world in the summers since 1873.

Benefit for Boys' Club.

The Chicago Woman's club is financing that excellent enterprise, the Boys' Brotherhood republic, which has three clubs in Chicago. They are, the Main City at 839 South Ashland boulevard, the Northwest City at 1208 North Hoyne avenue, and a new club at 1346 Miller street. They all are self-governing and have a regular city government with a mayor, city council, and chief of police. They have a general supervisor, Jack Robbins, who organized the first club, and there is an assistant supervisor at each club. E. D. Hulbert has been paying Jack Robbins' salary for five years.

The Chicago Woman's club will give a benefit for the republic on Tuesday night, Jan. 20, at the Illinois theater. William Gillette will be there in "Dear Brutus." The Boys' Brotherhood republic committee of the philanthropy department of the club has bought the entire main floor of the theater for that night, all the boxes, and three rows in the balcony.

Mrs. Jule F. Brower is chairman of this committee and the other members are Mesdames Horace C. Gardner, Frank L. Gordon, Milton Jay, William B. Jansen, Edwin McNeal, Edward P. Welles, William F. Burrows, Edwin M. Ashcraft, Charles F. Pietsch, Frederick Lee Coningh, Walter E. Miller, Ruth J. Oble, Thomas A. Moran, M. B. Pittman, William H. Titus, and Edwin L. Lobdell; and the Misses Katherine A. Jones, Clara Laughlin, and Jessie Colvin.

Mrs. Edwin D. Hulbert and Miss Jessie Colvin are co-chairmen of boxes, assisted by Mrs. M. B. Pittman and Mrs. Willis Wood; Mrs. William Bross Jansen and Miss Clara Laughlin are chairmen of hostesses; Mrs. Edwin McNeal, Mrs. William H. Titus, and Mrs. Thomas A. Moran, chairmen in charge of seats; Mrs. Charles Pietsch, programs; Mrs. Frank L. Gordon, treasurer.

The patronesses are Mrs. George M. Pullman, Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, Mrs. James A. Patten, Mrs. Arthur Aldis, Mrs. W. H. Winslow, Mrs. George Dixon, Mrs. Levy Mayer, and Mrs. Charles Chapin.

Between acts, on the night of the benefit, the boys from the different clubs will make short speeches telling of the work of the republic.

Aim for More Simple Living.

From the London Weekly Times comes the cheering information that "a committee has been formed in the foremost social circles of Paris to encourage simplicity of living, simple food, simple clothes and not too many of them," and so forth, and so on.

Those interested in fighting the extravagance and luxury of the day here can take heart because of the knowledge that they are part of a worldwide movement. Perhaps in the furthermost of the South Sea isles they are turning their palm leaf aprons and freshing up their faded tattoos. Who knows?

At a Sunday luncheon in a charming dining room that overlooks, from a high vantage point, the wide and windy spaces of the lake and sky, a few weeks ago, the writer made the acquaintance of a new fruit, the feijoia, pronounced "feehoya." Do you know it? It smells like honey laden flowers, it looks like a mésalliance of the quince and the fig, and it tastes like a disillusioned pineapple blended with a sad strawberry. This last is probably the result of being picked green in the tropics and sent northward to ripen in an alien, unsympathetic clime.

It is a curious, sophisticated fruit worth tracking to its lair. Perhaps that's the reason so many thousand Americans are swarming to Cuba and the rest of the West Indies.

Miss Rebecca McDoel Hickman, daughter of Mrs. William K. Kenly of 1511 Astor street, has been extensively entertained this season, for this is the first winter she has spent in Chicago since she was formally introduced in society two years ago. She made her debut when she was home for the Christmas holidays during her junior year at Bryn Mawr, where she was graduated last June. Miss Hickman, who is of a studious turn of mind, is the possessor of a remarkable library and spends quite as much time studying and browsing about in interesting bookshops and libraries as she does in dancing and doing the various things that a "deb" is supposed to do from morning until night.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Lucretia Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Smith Jr. of 831 Ainslie avenue, to Howard A. Lincoln, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Lincoln of Springfield, Mass. Miss Crawford spent nine months overseas in Red Cross service, and her fiancé served as a lieutenant in the field artillery for a number of months.

Mrs. Howard Linn of 55 Cedar street, who as Lucy Blair was one of the founders of the Chicago Junior league, is in charge of the league's annual benefit entertainment this year, a ball to be given on Friday, Jan. 30, in the new Second Field Artillery armory at Chicago avenue and the lake. The feature of the affair will be a pageant, of which Miss Edith Cummings is in charge.

League to Help the Deaf Plans a Benefit Lecture

THE deaf are about the last among the handicapped to receive consideration of an effective kind. It is to open to them the door of a new life that the Chicago League for the Hard of Hearing was established four years ago, and is now conducting a campaign with three main purposes in view. These aims are to assist the hard of hearing in the matter of procuring and retaining employment, to encourage and to alleviate their social isolation and to assist them in every possible way.

Members of the league are making a canvass of employers in the city to bring about greater consideration of the deaf who are seeking employment, and opportunities of work are being found by the league for those looking for work. There are many vocations in which the handicap of deafness does not hinder efficiency in any way, and for preparation for work in these branches the league is seeking to provide scholarships to those who cannot afford the proper training.

The most effective and the quickest way for a deaf person to find his way out of the isolation and consequent depression that so frequently accompanies deafness is to learn to "hear" by watching the lips of the speaker and thus seeing what is being said. This is lip reading, and is taught in evening classes of the public schools, as well as in many private classes. For those who cannot afford private instruction or who do not live in those parts of the city where the public evening classes are held the league is planning free classes in lip reading and scholarships for those needing private instruction.

The recreational activities of the league, as keenly needed as any of the other work, include the holding of an informal tea and social hour in the league headquarters, 90 Auditorium building, every Saturday afternoon; a bridge club, a men's club, a public night school lip reading students' club, programs of pantomime, interpretive and solo dancing, illustrated lectures, and outings throughout the year. It is estimated there are about 15,000 deaf in Chicago, many of them needing help to equip them for earning a living.

For purposes of increasing the funds of the organization, which is largely supported by private contributions, a benefit lecture will be given on Tuesday evening, Jan. 20, at Recital hall, Fine Arts building, by John Cowper Powys on "Landmarks of Modern Literature." Tickets may be obtained at McClurg's book store, 218 South Wabash avenue, or at room 90 Auditorium building.

Members of the advisory board of the league are Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton, Miss Harriet Vittum, Mrs. Frederick Latimer Wells, Mrs. Ernest A. Hamill, Theodore Dickinson, Norman D. Fraser, and Peter A. Mortenson. Miss Rose L. Dickinson is president of the league and Miss Valeria D. McDermott field secretary.

Yellow Mustard for Cold in Chest

When that tightness appears in your chest and the sharp pains signify an inflammation, you need yellow mustard.

Mustard plasters are all right — in fact they're fine — but

Begy's Mustarine, made of yellow mustard and other pain destroyers, is cleaner, quicker and much more effective.

The minute you rub it on its strength will surprise you. Heat eases pain, remember, and there is more concentrated non-blistering heat in a box of Mustarine than in anything else you can buy.

Use it for sore throat, tonsilitis, pleurisy, neuralgia and headache or when distressed with lumbago, rheumatism, gout, sciatica or neuritis. Of course it cannot blister because heat eases pain—30 and 60 cents.

THE TRIBUNE PROGRAM FOR MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT

I. Open the Great Lakes to the Atlantic.
II. Finish the Lakes to the Gulf Waterway Without Delay.
III. Develop a Practical Highway System.
IV. Regrow Our Vanished Forests.

A HIGHWAY TO THE GULF.

We need a broad, hard surfaced highway from Chicago to New Orleans. It is a need of the whole middle west from north to south. It is needed by every state tributary to the north and south line. It is needed by every city on the route.

Motor transportation between the lakes and the gulf ought to be a prime consideration. There ought to be free and easy movement between the sections. Motorists should come up from the south to spend their summers and get acquainted. Motorists from the north should be able to pass freely into the south for the winters.

The motor car eliminates distance. But it can eliminate distance with ease only in proportion to the good roads mileage. The heaviest motor traffic in this section is carried on within 100 miles of Chicago. Illinois is an unknown region to the average motorist. It ought to be as familiar as the geography of the Green Bay road or Sheridan road.

A trip to St. Louis is hedged about with many hazards. The roads are rivulets of mud. We hope the next five years will see them retrieved. If Illinois can build several thousands of miles of good roads in the next few years the states between here and Louisiana ought to do likewise. In such a program of building there ought to be a continuous broad highway binding the north to the south.

Heretofore we have expended most of our energy in building transcontinental highways. We have given little thought to north and south roads. In this we have been wasting opportunities. The east and west traffic has developed enormously. That of the north and south depends upon casual motoring.

Each division in a great gulf highway should produce a unit of traffic, both freight and passenger. It should be a benefit locally to farmers and merchants and it should be a great boon nationally in bringing the ends of the country together. The gulf route ought to be the beginning of a series of such north and south highways from east to west.

Industrial relations east and west always have kept close. Railroads and motor ways have kept pace with the need. Railroads have done their part in binding the north and south, but there is something more intimate in the motor highway. There is a needed association among those who travel the high roads.

The interests of the Mississippi valley require the best communications. The motor highway has come to be the swiftest agent of individual contact. Something about a railroad trip suggests distance, travel, and a considerable event. The motor car is quick, informal, and spurns distance. The Mississippi valley ought to become a main traveled road of neighbors with closely knitted interests.

We urge thought upon this subject. We believe the states between the Canadian line and the gulf will instinctively favor it.

GREAT ARMIES.

One report of a recent talk by Gen. Pershing credited him with asserting that "The American army was the best that ever marched on a field of battle."

A more credible report substituted the word German for American.

This latter statement will offend many, partly because they are violently partisan, partly because they fail to grasp the meaning of the statement.

They will approve Gen. Pershing's statement that "in 1918 the allies learned Americans were the best soldiers in Europe." But they will think this inconsistent with the previous assertion.

America would sacrifice fewer men in war and be better prepared for her own defense if our people thought more clearly in these matters. It is one of the duties of men like Gen. Pershing to educate the layman to straight thinking in military matters. It is also the duty of the press correctly to present what is said.

The American army was not the greatest army that ever marched. It only does harm to America to make such assertions, which keep alive the foolish and dangerous notion expressed by Mr. Bryan when in one of his anti-preparedness speeches he said we did not need a larger army and better organization because at the president's call a million men would spring to arms between sunrise and sunset.

An army is not a million men springing to arms. It is, as we ought to know now at least, a tremendous organization led by trained men, experts in every line, working in the most complicated cooperation, the product of years of forethought and persistent effort.

American genius, estimated at the highest rate the wildest jingo claims for it, could not make the greatest army that ever marched in the time given and under the conditions controlling the raising and organization of the A. E. F.

What America did have in 1918 was a virtually inexhaustible supply of men, and these men were, as individuals and at that stage of the war, the hardest fighting men in the war. In this respect—that is, in fighting morale, reckless courage, and physical power—they probably never have been surpassed in history.

America has reason to be intensely proud of the character of these fighting men. But she ought also to be intelligent enough to be ashamed that they were sacrificed as they were and to understand why they were sacrificed. We shall not understand until we know the difference between men and soldiers and between soldiers and an army. We shall not understand until we realize that the conduct of war and of armies is a science requiring constant and profound study, as finance or medicine does; that modern warfare is a vast organization of all the energies of a nation; that modern armies require an organization of the highest type, which can no more be improvised than a railroad system can be, but must be the product of many years of accumulated knowledge, experience, and training.

None of the men of the A. E. F. had a fair trial. This is true from Gen. Pershing down to the doughboy who was thrust into the line before he knew how to put on a gas mask. We would not give our professional soldiers opportunities for preparation to fulfill their difficult duties and we would not prepare our citizens in time of peace to do what we required of them when war came.

That they succeeded in accomplishing so much we owe to their splendid natural qualities. The more clearly we realize this the prouder we shall be of them—but the more anxious to see that the heavy handicaps they suffered from are abolished.

FOR A NEST EGG LEAGUE.

There are approximately 300,000 holders of life insurance policies in Chicago. Chicago is typical. The proportion of policy holders to population will be found in all American cities. Chicago's proportion testifies to the solidity of its rank and file.

The mass of population should be awake to its vast property interest. It should begin by dismissing classifications. There should be no property classifications in a mood of common interest. The mood should be the American imponderable.

Many of us have come to think of property only as real estate. Some may conceive of a property mood as a league of land owners. The safety of the land should be the last thing to worry about. A Red guard might take some cities. There are not enough Red guards on earth to hold the American farms.

In the experience of advancing rents some may think of a mood for property as contingent to a mood to fortify rent collectors. Again, dismiss the thought. Or, better still, consider it a moment first.

In Chicago there are 200,000 holders of stocks and bonds in building enterprises, such as business blocks, apartment buildings, hotels, and apartment hotels. These holdings vary in amount from $50 to thousands. There are 300,000 individual property owners in Chicago. Does it appear that the interests of these two divisons are so far apart? The $50 holder and the individual owner are investors in the same security—the good faith of the commonwealth.

Let us look a little farther. Chicago savings banks hold the savings deposits of 400,000 persons. Is this a league for the communization of property? Do these depositors pin their faith on the overturn of established institutions or on the continued soundness of them?

Life insurance is founded on national prosperity. Policy holders indirectly are investors in railroads, banks, reclamation projects—in the soundest enterprises of the nation. If national energy fails, these projects fail. If they fail, so fails the real energy of insurance, of building securities and banking. National prosperity depends upon individual energy. This energy must be accompanied by a mutual bond of interest in the preservation of property rights.

A few dozen radicals are arrested in Chicago. Is it to be supposed that they contributed to the prosperity that flows out of well directed energy and the mood which creates the nest egg? Far from it. And it is unconscionable that a few radicals should be permitted to gnaw at the roots of a tree so flourishing as that which has grown in the soil of our common interest.

The Reds have nothing to protect. The American property holder has. It may be an insurance policy, a Liberty bond, a share in a building project, a savings bank account, or the household he laboriously has put together. These things bind him to his fellows.

The 400,000 savings bank depositors in Chicago have a distinct and substantial reason for belonging to the nest egg league. That reason is based on their labor. What they own, from a cook stove to a farm, has been produced by their industry. It is not to be abolished by those who propose to reorganize that in which they have no interest.

Those who have produced something, be it no more than a dollar credited in a bank book, have in their possession the common weapon against unrest. They have property. The mood for substance, the mood for the nest egg, is the impregnable fortification against the radical. The Red without a dime will have a grievous experience trying to convert the man with a life insurance policy, a share in an American business, or a savings bank account.

These things are substantial. Radicalism is lurid, impalpable. The nest egger can lay hold of his bank account. He can never close his grip on promises and intangible speculation.

Let us concentrate on substance. Let those who have it not get it. A dollar can be the cornerstone of the future. Let Chicago's 400,000 depositors be the inspiration for a league of nest eggers who shall make a mood of national solidity.

OPERA FOR AMERICANS.

It is being suggested that an American be chosen to succeed Campanini. We do not know that this is practicable or under existing conditions desirable. We do think that American influence ought to be greater than it has appeared to be in the direction of our operatic affairs.

If grand opera is to be more than a social affair, a luxury of the wealthy, it will have to conform to the laws which control success in the theater. The American public will not support in an opera house what it incontinently damns in the theater.

Opera is more than music. It is drama and spectacle. In plays we want to understand what is going on and, more than this, we want to sympathize with it.

The trouble with our operatic fare is that it is selected for us by aliens according to the standards of aliens, to please alien tastes. We have our own standards and our own tastes. If they are ignored we turn our backs on the spread.

An American directorship, or at least an American veto, must be established if we propose to reach the general American entertainment seeking public without which opera cannot become even approximately self-supporting.

If this were established, it would weed out what cannot appeal to the average intelligent American, and include only foreign work which has a story intelligible to us and of a character capable of pleasing us. It would also insist upon a hearing of worthy American work and adopt a policy of encouragement of native composers and authors.

We hope this step will be taken in time for our next season.

Sir: A visitor to our city was spending the evening at the home of a friend in one of the exclusive residence districts. They had just settled down for an after-dinner cigar when a most extraordinary succession of sounds was heard. The visitor started from his chair, and as he reached the window a remarkable spectacle came into view in the dimly lighted street. A formidable-looking turreted contrivance, not dissimilar to a tank in appearance, and bristling with machine guns, was rumbling slowly past. "What's the idea?" inquired the guest of his host. "Going to have a parade tonight?" "Oh, no," was the reply, "that's just one of the neighbors going up to the corner to mail a letter." E. C. W.

VII.

He who hath Kingsley's "Heroes" on his shelf,
With Hawthorne's Tales of Tanglewood near by,
Will find the Golden Fleece his modern pelf,
And grapes of Greece still fresh, not seeds plucked dry.

And love that kindly quadrupedagogue:
As teachers, Centaurs would be hard to beat—
These days, few tutors even be "gay dog."
(Though dog-eared dog-mas they do bark from books,
And hound youths through dog-ged cur-riculum;
Yet few have waggish tales: their pup-il looks
In vain for biscuit in their pabulum!)
Well, even Jason's studies taught not life,
For look what he got later for a wife!

KING ALCOHOL'S FAMILY SKELETONS.

THE old tombstones in New England not only extol the virtues (and occasionally condemn the vices) of the dear departed, but they record the names of all the near relatives and the line of descent. Genealogists get much valuable information by mooning around graveyards.

I propose this morning to give some information about the family connections of our recently deceased brother, King Alcohol. He was known in his college days as ethyl alcohol, by his business associates as grain alcohol, and to the hoi polloi as booze.

The stock is a very old one. They are mentioned in the earliest Bible records in a way which indicates that they were known of one way or another in the very earliest days of society. In this immediate family there are many sons, grandsons, and other descendants. The simplest of the alcohols is commonly known as wood alcohol. Another name for it is methyl alcohol. It is produced when wood is distilled at a high temperature. It also may be obtained by the dry distillation of molasses.

Absolutely pure wood alcohol is said to be odorless. But the wood alcohol on the market is far from being an odorless substance. In fact, one reason for the considerable use of wood alcohol to "denature" grain alcohol was the offensive odor and taste of the commercial product thus obtained. The term "denatured" was used as meaning that the mixture had been made repulsive in taste and odor. The offensive odors and taste of wood alcohol result from impurities.

Like ethyl alcohol it is a fine solvent and is used for that purpose in varnishes, paints, and the fine chemical industries. Its ability to dissolve oils causes it to be used occasionally in bay rums, face lotions, and liniments.

Occasionally we read of neuralgias, neuritis, or rheumatism resulting from the use of some preparation on the skin and the absorption from it of wood alcohol.

I do not know to what the poisonous effects of wood alcohol taken internally are due, but it is certain that it is poisonous. The first case of which I knew was a man who started drinking whisky early one week. About Wednesday his whisky was gone, but his desire was still present. He was a rancher living many miles away from a source of supply and he fell back on a substitute.

The substitute was wood alcohol. By Thursday he was vomiting and that symptom was much worse than it had ever been after a whisky debauch. He continued to vomit through Friday. On Saturday he noticed that his sight was failing. He had strength and vision enough to catch a horse and ride to his nearest neighbor, three miles away.

By night he was blind. He traveled a thousand miles to consult an eye specialist, Dr. Casey Wood, but nothing could be done. Afterward Dr. Wood wrote a small book on wood alcohol poisoning in which he related a great many experiences with men poisoned by wood alcohol.

My next observation was of a group of men working in an inclosed space using a varnish in the dissolution of which wood alcohol was an ingredient. When the day was over they quit and went home. Three died that night and three others were sick a long time, but eventually recovered.

Within the last several months there has been a wave of wood alcohol poisoning.

I am informed by the representative of the health department that men take a drink or two of whisky. They want more, but they cannot afford it at the prevailing price. They purchase a bottle of wood alcohol. Even though this is labeled poison in a way to conform to the law, they put some of it in near beer and drink it. When no harm results from the first try they lose the fear inspired by the label and take more.

Probably they would not have dared disregard the warning of the label in the first place, had their reason not been upset by a drink or two of booze, but having tempted fate and found no evil consequences result, they threw caution aside. In some cases persons have bought booze thinking they were getting the real article and have had no thought that they were drinking a mixture containing wood alcohol until the harmful results were in evidence.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Dec. 28 tabulated ninety-one deaths from wood alcohol poisoning occurring since Christmas in thirteen cities and towns, and twenty-four persons becoming blind in two other cities. Dr. W. C. Woodward, health commissioner of Boston, says:

"The physiological action of wood alcohol differs from that of grain alcohol in that the coma persists for longer periods.

"While in the body wood alcohol is oxidized to form formic acid. This is eliminated as sodium formate, a slower poison than the alcohol, and secreted so slowly that small repeated doses overlap each other with a cumulative effect. Its exhilarating effect is quickly followed by vertigo, vomiting, headache, dilated pupils, delirium, coma, and death, or if recovery takes place there is danger of more or less blindness. Blindness has followed the taking of five teaspoonfuls of wood alcohol. Less than half a pint has proved fatal."

This theory as to the method by which this alcohol poisons is plausible. However, it does not cover all the case, since the stuff as it is sold contains more than one chemical. Low grade whisky is supposed to be much more poisonous than the better article. Wiley says whisky as it comes from the still contains about forty chemicals besides alcohol and water. The flavor of whisky of whatever age is due to these associated chemicals. As wood alcohol comes to be marketed in finer form it will be less distinctive in odor and taste and, therefore, easier to sell as booze or regular beer or what not, while it may be less or more poisonous than the article now sold.

Dr. John Dill Robertson of Chicago, no doubt having in mind mixtures of grain whisky containing wood alcohol, says:

"Don't drink whisky these days unless you want to die. The stuff is as dangerous as dynamite. There is only one safe way, and that is to let it entirely alone."

The basic formula of wood alcohol is carbon, one part; hydrogen, four parts. When in this formula one part of hydrogen and one of oxygen are substituted for one of the hydrogen we get a carbon one, hydrogen three, or oxygen one and hydrogen one, or wood alcohol, the simplest of all the alcohols. To step up from wood alcohol to grain alcohol add one part carbon and two of hydrogen.

Ethyl alcohol, the ordinary kind, is made by the action of yeast on starches and sugar. Since the great source of ethyl alcohol is corn, rye and other grains, a common name for it is grain alcohol. The formula for this variety of alcohol is two parts of carbon, five parts of hydrogen plus one part of hydrogen and one of oxygen. It will be noted that this step from wood alcohol consists in the addition of one part carbon and two of hydrogen, and in time we will find that the next higher alcohol is produced by adding another carbon and two more hydrogens to ethyl alcohol.

Grain alcohol is the basis of most alcoholic beverages. It is used as a drug and, it being a fine solvent, is of great service in the arts and industries. Governments early began to raise a part of their revenues by taxing the beverages in which alcohol was the principal ingredient, and this necessitated a tax on alcohol itself.

Since they were attempting to control and repress the intoxicating use of the drug, these taxes were made so high that they acted as a burden on industry and art. They sought to get around this by providing that alcohol which had been made undrinkable by the addition of other chemicals, was called "denatured" and should be excused from paying the tax. Sixty-five years ago this practice was begun. One of the first provisions was that grain alcohol need not pay the tax provided 10 parts of wood alcohol was added to it. In part, as the result of these laws wood alcohol poisoning began to attain some prominence more than half a century ago. At that, grain alcohol poisoning in comparison is hoary with age, being alluded to in the very early Bible records.

The largest amount of alcohol which the body can burn in twenty-four hours is one and a half ounces—the equivalent of about three ounces of whisky. If a man drinks more than that the excess is thrown off as alcohol by the lungs, skin, kidneys, and bowels, with more or less embarrassment and damage to those organs.

The Encyclopedia Brittanica says of grain alcohol: "The poison primarily affects the cerebral lobes (the brain).

"The effects are felt principally by the nervous system. The effect on the heart is secondary to the effect on the nervous system. Though increasing the feeling of heat it reduces the temperature of the body. This is because it sends an extra amount of blood to the skin and this causes the nerves of the skin to register warmth, but at the same time it increases the loss of heat by the skin and thus reduces temperature."

On account of its close relationship to chloroform and ether, we expect alcohol to produce coma. This expectation is not disappointed. The man who is dead drunk is in a condition of coma not very different from the coma produced by chloroform or ether. Death from acute alcoholism generally follows deep coma. Nor is the death rate from acute alcoholic poisoning low. In 1899 in England and Wales the rate was 11.2 among men and 7 among women. This is higher than the typhoid rate in this country now. Several of the very much dreaded diseases have a lower death rate than acute alcoholism had three years ago.

When another part of carbon and two of hydrogen are added to the formula for ethyl or grain alcohol we get propyl alcohol. In addition to what is called normal propyl alcohol there is a secondary propyl alcohol called isopropyl alcohol. Here, then, are four alcohols and we have not got far from the starting point. Add another carbon and two more hydrogens and we get the base which, when hydrated, makes butyl alcohol. This form of alcohol serves as a foundation not only for a secondary, but also for a tertiary butyl alcohol.

Step up one higher and we get amyl alcohol. Here, too, there are both secondary and tertiary alcohols. Thus far we have uncovered ten alcohols and we are far from covering the field. The primary alcohols are oxydized to aldehydes and then to acids. A good illustration is the easy formation of formaldehyde, the gas used for fumigating purposes, by the oxidation of wood alcohol. Most of the aromas of whisky are due to the aldehydes it contains.

A good illustration of the second is the conversion of wines and cider into vinegar.

Another is the formation of carbonic acid by the destruction in the body of alcohol. Secondary alcohols oxidize to form ketones, and tertiary alcohols to form a combination of acids. I have lightly touched on or wholly omitted reference to such other relatives as chloroform, iodoform, ether, glycol, glycerin, and glycerol. The dear departed was of a large family. His career early gave promise of great usefulness. But he fell among evil companions. His vices came to overshadow his virtues. While his friends wept for their lost opportunities he was laid to rest on a bleak day in January, 1920.

TREATMENT PROBABLY CORRECT.

Mrs. W. O. N. writes: "My daughter, 12 years old, has had several attacks of severe tonsillitis. Tonsils were removed three years ago. One month ago she developed sore throat. She had fever for four days and she then developed old fashioned acute articular rheumatism. She still has rheumatism, and she says a lump in her throat troubles her. What can be done? Is there danger that this lump is tubercular?"

REPLY.

You give a very clear cut history of a case of acute rheumatism and what used to be called rheumatic sore throat. I dare say your physician is giving her all the salicylates she needs and caring for the throat as it needs. The heart should be watched closely. As she convalesces she will need an iron tonic and out of doors air. The lump in her neck probably is not tubercular. After she has recovered have her nose, throat, and teeth examined.

THE THYROID GLANDS.

H. W. H. writes: "1. What is the thyroid and where located?

"2. What ill results may follow from an enlarged thyroid? Does it cause goiter or lead to insanity?"

REPLY.

1. In the neck between the Adam's apple and the upper end of the breast bone.

2. There may be enlargement of the thyroid without any ill effect. The thyroid is frequently enlarged in goiter. Goiter is not an important cause of insanity.

TEAMS HAVE VACATION.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Perry avenue, between Sixty-fifth and Sixty-sixth street, looks like a neglected alley. There being no alley, we must place garbage in front. I am positively ashamed to have my friends visit me. I burn everything I can and put out only ashes and cans. Why can we not have the refuse removed at least once a week? Some put out refuse in dishpans, boxes, etc. You may imagine how this looks after the cats and dogs get through with it. NEIGHBOR.

The refuse complained of has all been taken away. Owing to a layoff of teams it was not removed on schedule time, but regular service will be given in future. Notice has been served to provide garbage receptacles where necessary. THOS. H. BYRNE, Superintendent of Streets.

WHAT TO DO—WHAT TO DO!!!

Chicago, Jan. 9.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A few weeks ago I bought some furniture from a private party in response to an ad. in one of our daily papers. Said party has since left for Canada. And now a furniture company is trying to claim the furniture—on the ground that the man still owes them on it. Will you inform me what to do and can they take these goods that I have paid my hard earned cash for? H. THOMAS.

MILLENNIUM!

Santa Angora Goat Ranch, Devils River, Tex., Dec. 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—When demagogues forsake their nonsense, and hypocrites their false pretense. When the blatherskite declaimer, the ignoramus, and defamer, wax wiser and much tamer. When the fol-de-rol professor, of quaint and curious lore possessor, shall find a chair on Mars, and lecture to the stars. When the patrioteering politician—that fact and figure juggling old magician—that truth and sense defying old logician—shall have a change of liver, and take a boat for points remote, way up along the Salty river. When the crazy propaganders, in their "psychological" meanders, shall find the bug-asylum, and soak their heads, or bile 'em. It matters not, we'll mourn them not, but gladly lose their everlasting rot. When plutocracy's proud organ shall lose the love of Morgan, and with the jingoistic journal depart for realms infernal. Chicago, Jan. 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The word "tembior" in fifth column of today's paper cannot be found in the new Webster of 1911.

QUEER.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Under the caption, "No Canadians to Be Knighted by England," the daily press of Dec. 29 carried this:

"Ottawa, Dec. 29.—No Canadian names will appear upon King George's 1920 list of New Year's honors, it was predicted today. His majesty is expected to follow to the letter the request of the Dominion parliament that he refrain from conferring knighthoods or other titles upon subjects of Canadian citizenship."

On Dec. 30 the daily press, under the caption, "McIntyre Is Made Knight of Bath by Great Britain," the following appears:

"Washington, Dec. 30.—Maj. Gen. Frank McIntyre, assistant chief of staff, has been vested with the order of Knight of the Bath by Great Britain, the war department announces. The award was ordered by the Prince of Wales."

Queer that a government under the British Jack should reject "his majesty's" decorations and that one supposed to claim allegiance to the Stars and Stripes should accept such. What is the answer? PATRICK HENRY DILLON.

CAST THE CAST.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The A. E. F. believes in universal service with reservations, the principal one being that the caste system, as employed in France, must never again stifle American soldiers. When soldiers, many of them men of education and refinement, saw rough neck officers, "gentlemen by act of congress," entitled to privileges which they could never obtain in civil life, it created a feeling of antagonism in the army that will not die with the years. There were hundreds of officers who could never get an invitation to their men's homes in civil life because the men had them estimated correctly.

Universal service is the only democratic insurance against war. It is a money saver, even though congress is too thick skulled to realize it. But the caste system must go the way of all autocracy. Americans do not need Prussianizing. STANLEY L. BAINE.

A CRY FROM MACEDON.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I live in Ravenswood, and expect to move out of the neighborhood as soon as my lease expires for the reason that the car service on Western avenue north of Roscoe street is extremely poor. At night one out of about five cars only goes further than Roscoe street, resulting in such crowded conditions that even this fifth car passes passengers by for the reason that the car will hold no more. If some traction official would only stand in his limousine alongside of the curb at Western, and Lincoln and Lawrence avenues, and actually see conditions, maybe his heart would be softened towards some of the Ravenswood straphangers. WHAT AMERICA HAS DONE FOR ME

The Tribune will pay $5 for each letter printed on the subject: "What America has done for me." The contest is limited to American citizens of foreign birth. The letters should be helpful; they should relate personal experiences; they should speak of direct and material benefits found in the United States. They should be concise, 300 words at the most. The contestant should give, not for publication, his age, address, occupation, name of the country from which he came, and the length of time he has been a citizen. Address letters to the Loyalty Editor, Chicago Tribune.

By John Kjellander.

[Clerk of the Cook County Superior court, native of Sweden.]

THE initial fact in my case is that I, a native of Sweden, am proud of my American citizenship. There my glory begins and ends I entered the United States at Castle Garden, through which gateway many multitudes of hundreds of thousands of overseas foreigners have found freedom and opportunity.

And this reference to opportunity reminds me that all men, born free and equal, have their success or failure in their own hands. The same advantages are present today as they were when I and others crossed to these hospitable, free shores.

Love of law and order with me then was reinforced. I had the same respect for law and order abroad but I found rare advantages which were denied me by a certain system over there. When I arrived at Castle Garden I had $3. I came to Chicago, the metropolis of the golden west, and I partook again of an effervescent cup of optimism. Quoting Theodore Roosevelt, "the name of American is to bear the most honorable of titles and whoever does not so believe has no business to hear the name at all." Send all such back.

These United States have given me opportunity. I have been honored by the electorate. Class distinction would have barred me abroad. This country has afforded me the privilege of knowing, personally, men and women of all classes, from the lowly to the chief magistrate of the nation.

Respecting my fatherland, I have gained adoration for the land of my adoption. I wish the same were true of other foreigners who have come to our shores. To all such as have been classified as "Reds" I would say "get out." To deport them is a pussyfoot method. Their place is before a firing squad. In my job as clerk of the Superior court of Cook county I have made many addresses in my office to applicants for citizenship and I have preached the doctrine of the red, white, and blue—forever. In this simple attempt at a ritual I hope I will not be charged with "spread-eagleism." 'Tis only a statement of fact.

That is what the United States, as a country of opportunity, has done for one of its humble and proud citizens of foreign birth.

[Editor of the Greek Star, native of Greece.]

THOUGH I met with so many hardships at the beginning of my career in this country twenty-five years ago, and notwithstanding the fact that I have been penniless and friendless, in a strange land among strangers, I had a faith in the land of promise and opportunities—my dreams came true. I have no other words to express than glory to Columbia. I feel grateful to Uncle Sam, and in that I cannot do enough to serve this great country of ours as a loyal American citizen.

The loyalty of the foreign born American citizen can not only be demonstrated by a citizenship, but by performing the duties of a real American citizen who respects the constitution, obeys the laws, stands by our government, is devoted to his adopted country, and remains loyal to the glorious American flag that symbolizes the principles of Washington and Lincoln that have been carried as far as the new battlefield of honor in France and Belgium in order to preserve the principles of American democracy.

An American born in this country has a duty to perform as a matter of duty, but an American of foreign birth in extraction has a duty to perform as a matter of gratitude to his adopted country for his welcome here and for the privileges of the same opportunities and same equality in the land in which millions of men, women, and orphans have found home, work, and protection.

It is true that the war is over and the American army is demobilized, but Americanism and patriotism will never be demobilized. Now in the midst of unrest we are called upon to clasp in a resolute and inflexible determination to carry on and to stand by Old Glory as against anarchy in order that we may continue in peace and happiness, bearing in mind that no infamy whatsoever will be permitted to undermine the foundation of the republic and no "Reds" will be permitted to interfere with the principles of the American democracy.

AMERICA—what do I not owe thee! The very cradle of liberty, for here may every man pursue the even tenor of his way and possess and enjoy and progress in every fair extension of the spirit and actuality of freedom. It is not what we, who chose to make this our country, individually enjoy so much as that while in the enjoyment of all reasonable liberty for ourselves we thereby and in fact contribute to the reasonable enjoyment of all others seasonably inclined.

By others we do not mean any particular or privileged class, but all men, from all climes and kinds, all races and creeds, all men and women, not only those born free and equal here, but all those who, seeking this country and its protection, desire to possess freedom and equality.

These United States first of all, ere I saw its fertile shores, gave me the spirit to be free, for long before I sought its folds I dreamed of its spirit, believed in its principles, and determined to be of it. I found more even than I planned, for it has brought to me all that any man might care for—a means of livelihood, the possession of enough and more to carry on, the association of men who are and of right should be freemen, the fortitude of friends who, irrespective of creed or clan, extend a firm grasp, a kindly hand, a cheery word and, much more, indeed, for I have found unusual friendship in every sense.

But, in the dispensation of Providence, even more has come to me, for here have I found the greatest pearl of my life—a wife who has blessed our home as a mother, a more than fitting companion in courage and loyalty, one in the true sense to the manner born, whose affection dominates and whose spirit electrifies and thrills the family circle, in a word, the fitting queen of the household. And my daughters complete the crown of happiness I have found, whose hearts are truly typical of the freedom they enjoy and which may they in turn hand down.

And so truly may it be said that when an Irishman looks for comfort and hope his eyes are turned toward the setting sun. So, as has been the story all the way from Yorktown to Chapultepec, and from Gettysburg to the Wilderness, and from El Caney to Chateau-Thierry and the Argonne, may it be that the blood of the Celt shall sustain and propagate the glorious stripes and scintillating stars of Old Glory till time shall be no more!

[Native of Sweden.]

IF I attempted to enumerate the reasons why I think and know that America is the ace country of all the nations of the world a dozen or more chapters would be required. I am here and more than satisfied to remain here, because America holds everything that a foreigner can admire in a nation. Its traditions are inspiring; its ideals admirable, and individual models to unhindered progress in a free land.

I came to America when I was 13 years old and became a citizen as soon as I was allowed. Now I am 46 years old and I hold no regrets. From the time I stepped on America's shores I have had a strong liking for my fellow citizens of native American or foreign birth, admiration for American institutions and a belief that, while not perfect, it has the best system of government now in existence. I always have held faith in the great future of the republic. This is in no sense a criticism of the condition or systems of government elsewhere.

There is an ample opportunity in America for initiative and energy to obtain proper rewards. Nature has so greatly favored the country that it is in a class by itself.

In a country where practically everything is produced, and whose population of approximately 100,000,000 people is unexcelled for energy, ability, and mechanical ingenuity, it cannot help but have a wonderful present and a brilliant future.

When you add to this the many sterling qualities of the American people; their democracy, their innate kindness, their honesty and chivalry toward women and children, it becomes apparent why the nation fascinates and holds those who come in contact with it.

IF I ever take a notion to go abroad, the day when I sail again for America will be my happiest. That sums up what I think of this country. France was the land of my birth, but America is the land of my choice. And it is the place where I will be buried—if I have anything to say.

I never have been disappointed in this country. I hope I never will be. I do not expect to. Every promise, born of the accomplishments of great Americans since early history, has been fulfilled here.

Individuals who come to this country from a foreign land have no right conscientiously to criticize this government. If they do not like what America has to offer they should be sent back on the first ship. Our radicals who now are "biting the hand that feeds them" should have been sent out of America long ago.

I was born in Commones, France. In 1888 I came to the United States with Louis and Peter, brothers. A short time later I sent for my mother and two sisters. Then my brother, Henry, followed us. I never regret having brought them here. They do not regret, I know, the fact that they came.

Adjectives cannot set forth what a man thinks of a country. What I cannot say in favor of America I feel in my heart.

"America first, last and always"—that's my motto.

This country is good enough for any one, and too good for some. There is no other that can approach it on the face of the earth.

SLAMS OF LIFE

By J. P. McEvoy

THE DRUNKARD'S CURSE.

[Hunch from E. C.]

I've followed the hearse of all my hopes,
  I've buried them, one by one;
Gaze upon me and you will see
  What the curse of drink has done.

I, too, had a wife and a child and a home,
  But now I am all alone.
O Gawd, I should never have taken that first
  Insidious ice cream cone.

But I was so young and my friends they were false,
  "Just one cannot hurt you," they said.
I started that night, and look at me now.
  O Gawd, what a life I've led!

My mother said, "Willy, lay off the vanilly,
  Them phosphates will lead you astray.
The devil himself is in sarsaparilly,
  And his den is them fountains so gay."

But, fool that I was, I but laughed her to scorn.
  "I can take it or leave it alone."
And I drank that same day a chocolate frappe.
  O Gawd, if I had but known!

That was the start of my downfall, my friends;
  From that it was easy to flit
Down the pathway of vice to the pineapple ice
  And the hellish banana split.

But one day an angel came into my life.
  "I believe in you, Clarence, she said,
And I loved her so dearly that for one long year nearly
  A temperate life I led.

And a baby came, as babies will,
  And grew to a babbling child.
But I craved all the time just the juice of one lime,
  And the thought of it drove me wild.

One day I fell—in an ice cream den
  I slinked with a sinful slink,
And I staggered home when the night came on,
  The victim again of drink.

That night of shame is a dreadful dream,
  That will haunt till the day of my death;
When I kissed her my child cried, in accents so wild,
  "You have raspberry crush on your breath."

That was the end of my happy home,
  And now I am all alone.
O Gawd, I should never have taken that first
  Insidious ice cream cone.

I've followed the hearse of all my hopes,
  I've buried them, one by one.
Gaze upon me and you will see
  What the curse of drink has done.

What will become of this wreck of a man,
  This quivering, broken reed?
Another parfait with a straw, I say!
  Gawd, what a life to lead!

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"The Great Impersonation" [Little Brown], by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

"Jeremy" [Doran], by Hugh Walpole.

"A Man for the Ages" [Bobbs Merrill], by Irving Bacheller.

"Linda Condon" [Knopf], by Joseph Hergesheimer.

"Michael Forth" [Harpers], by Mary Johnston.

"Jurgen" [McBride], by James Branch Cabell.

NONFICTION.

"A Labrador Doctor" [Houghton Mifflin], by Wilfred Grenfell.

"Broome Street Straws" [Doran], by Robert Cortes Holliday.

"The Life of John Marshall" [Houghton Mifflin], by Albert J. Beveridge.

"SCEPTICISM" [Knopf] is the title which Conrad Aiken has so aptly chosen for his volume of criticisms of contemporary poetry. Conrad Aiken is one of the keenest critics in America and the casual reading of a review here and a few notes there about contemporary poetry gives one a feeling that here is a fearless poet who yearns for an advance of the art of poetry and is willing to sacrifice one ideal for a what seems to him a greater one.

But the collection of his reviews so that one can read one after another without the comic relief of the Bottom-like critics gives one a distinct shock. "Scepticisms" is the most damning book of criticisms that I have ever read. No one writing poetry today seems to be doing a completely satisfactory job except Amy Lowell occasionally—unless, of course, one takes for granted that Mr. Aiken is satisfied with his own efforts. If it were not for the "Apologia" in which Mr. Aiken frankly declares that all poet-critics are fighting for their own kind of poetry and with a swashbuckling sweep in the grand manner decapitating every other kind of poetical flower, the book would be too arrogantly snippy for words.

But with his honest and somewhat smiling assurance that he is—like every one else—tootling away on the little theme of his own theories—the book becomes a healthy bomb.

The revolutionists in poetry can't miss it—they'll pass by some high explosive ammunition which they can deftly hurl into the camps of the conservatives if they do. And the conservatives can't miss it because in it there is material to their hands for the making of devastating return grenades.

Those who seek at the Public library shall find—even unto $900. Yep. The other day a man went into the library and asked for the popular Chamberlain book on "Principles of Bond Investment." It wasn't in, but they gave him, instead, Roger Ward Babson's "Commercial Paper." He took it back a couple of days later and said: "That was a pretty good book you gave me. It made $900 for me."

Albert Frederick Wilson teaches one thing and practices another. He has been for eight years at the School of Journalism of New York University, where he taught the young idea to shoot short stories. In his own shooting hours he writes poetry. "The Township Line" [Harpers] is a free verse glorification of the rocks and rills and the wooded minds of Connecticut country.

It has been years since I have seen such a compilation of vital statistics about a book or an author as Robert M. McBride & Co. sent out about James Branch Cabell. I share it in toto: "During the last two years reviewers have written over 300,000 words concerning James Branch Cabell. Of these, 2⅝ per cent are monosyllables, 14 per cent disyllables, 18¼ per cent trisyllables, while the remaining 65 per cent range in length from four to eleven syllables. Set in 10 point type and placed end to end, the entire critical output regarding this one writer would reach from New York to Chicago and thence to Richmond, Va." I have a distinct suspicion that Mr. McBride and his statistician are spoofing us.

One of the most piquant of all those alluring fables of Robert Louis Stevenson is the one about the tadpole and the frog. "Be ashamed of yourself," said the frog. "When I was a tadpole I had no tail." "Just what I thought!" said the tadpole. "You never were a tadpole." I never come across a certain kind of free verse—the terribly free kind—that I don't think of the frog and the tadpole. That kind of free verse never was verse, though it now puffs itself out and declaims against tails and rhythms and thoughts and everything that drags it down. "Moods" [Moffatt-Yard] flicked on the light over the frog and tadpole pigeonhole in my mind. It is a collection of prose poems by Mercedes de Acosta, evidently intended for just one step beyond the hampering free verse. Give me free prose, or give me death! Give me a sheet of white paper, and I will provide the motion and set it down in imperishable words! The tragedy of such a course is that Miss de Acosta has a decidedly poetic list to her mind, that sometimes her emotions are worth sharing, and that she evidently can write beautifully, but—with the aid of doting admirers, like Mr. Charles Hanson Towne, who writes the introduction, and Mr. Howard Willard Cook, who saw her book gleaming like a jewel in the heap of unsolicited manuscripts which poured in upon him after his "Poets of Today" was published—she is set upon doing something "different" and "free."

"Songs of the Cattle Trail and Cow Camp" [Macmillan] is a new kind of source book. It is a collection of cowboy songs, which, in themselves are as native to the United States as the Indian chants or the Negro spirituals. John A. Lomax, equipped with a traveling fellowship from Harvard, went about the business of making an anthology of wild western songs. The result is at the same time a volume of real importance in the field of the modern folk tale and a collection of verse full of the dash and the vim and the romance of those days which are embalmed in the movies and in the hearts of a few old bowlegged men whose youth was lived in the saddle.

"The Professor's Love Life" [Macmillan] is a collection of real love letters which remind me vividly of the thousands of love letters that used to pour in when THE TRIBUNE had a $3 love letter contest. They are full of tenderness, have a certain grace of phrase, and are made more appealing by the slow invalidism of the writer, but, except for the very sentimental person who likes to read any love letters that are real, they seem to me to be hardly worth the candle of printing and binding. I can't imagine a reader getting a vicarious throb of the heart from them—and that's the real reason for reading somebody else's love letters, isn't it?

For women only! Mary Elizabeth—whose candies are a memorable part of a visit to Boston and New York—has shared some of her best recipes in "My Candy Secrets" [Stokes].

For the person whose taste in literature is in direct proportion to the literary reputation of the person who plants the seeds of knowledge in his mind there is the new collection of "Great American Short Stories" [Boni & Liveright], which is being made by William Dean Howells. There is an introduction in Mr. Howells' most genial mood.

Much excitement seems to be caused in publishing circles by the announcement that the Putnams have secured a new foreign author, the great Pole, Wladyslaw Stanislaw Reymont, who is expected to steal all of the literary thunder of the spring by his novel, "The Vampire." Albert Nowench of Columbia university is to translate it. The arrival of Reymont on the literary horizon should not be a surprise to Tabloid readers. Last spring I shared with you a conversation which I had with Franck Schoell, then just returned to his duties in the romance language department of the University of Chicago after four years of service in the French army and a long imprisonment as a war captive. During his captivity, you may remember, he learned Polish, and since then he has been translating Reymont's four volume novel, "The Peasants," into French for a great French publisher. M. Schoell says that it is one of the greatest novels ever written From his almost reverent enthusiasm for Reymont I shouldn't be surprised if the Putnams had tapped a gold mine—the vogue for foreign authors is at perihelion now.

The New York printers' strike has held up three important books on John Lane's list, "The Unsolved Riddle of Social Justice," by Stephen Leacock; "Irish Impressions," by Gilbert K. Chesterton—which I am praying may come soon—and "The Silence of Colonel Bramble," a translation of Andre Maurois' book which all Frenchmen declare is one of the best of the war books to come out of young France. William J. Locke's new novel, "The House of Balthazar," will be ready as planned, the last of January.

Amalia Josephine Burr sailed from New York for an extended visit to Europe just before the publication of her latest volume of poetry, "Hearts Awake" [Doran], confides a "literary" note. It was a wise sailing. She thus escaped—for a time, at least—some of the justified, though unkind, truths about the book. It is another of those year books of a poet's output, and since this was an especially typical and seasonable year for Miss Burr the book isn't one which classes with bread as a staff of life.

Josephine Preston Peabody is, as she says, "writing a play with each hand," but she is not going to publish them under her own name. She is going to have the fun of sitting in the grand stand and watching herself march by, and of listening to what the world really thinks of her work.

If you aren't too sceptical about Conrad Aiken's "Scepticisms," perhaps you would like to paste his autograph on the fly leaf. He's very shy in person, though one wouldn't suspect it from his books, and he never gives those literary autographing afternoons, so it is something of a scoop having his name signed to a book.

THE ISSUES IN ZONING

by George O. Fairweather

(Mr. Fairweather is the chairman of the committee on zoning of the Chicago Building Managers' association.)

THERE are three chief considerations that concern Chicago now in its zoning efforts. Foremost, the whole program must commend itself to the whole people or it will surely fail. In this respect legislation in this field is quite unique from that in most others. The other two considerations, if wisely met, will insure the first. These two items are, first: the zoning must proceed upon a comprehensive plan; second: the commission which recommends the districting of the city must command the highest confidence of the whole citizenship.

The uniqueness of zoning lies in this fact. Each of us agrees to surrender, without compensation, to the city a portion of his rights in order that the city, acting for all, may conserve these rights for the benefit of all.

It is, therefore, fundamental to the thinking and the planning of the zoning of Chicago, as of every other city for that matter, that every step in the journey be given the most careful study; that the widest education be given the citizens and the officials as well, to the end that all of the citizens will be willing to surrender some of their rights for the common good, in full assurance that the law which imposes these new but beneficial restrictions will stand the test of time as to its justice and of fairness as to its execution.

But, of course, this general philosophy of good zoning progress must rest upon sound legal and policy grounds. If it isn't good law we had better stay unzoned; and if the policy or administrative features of the law are not calculated to win the enthusiastic support and coöperation of all parts of the community, the effort will die aborning.

SO much has been said about the fundamental requirements, both in good sense and in good law, of a comprehensive plan that it need be discussed here only briefly. It is utter folly to attempt any classification of any section of the city unless the inter-relations of that section with the balance of the city are thoroughly studied and understood; and with these conclusions, as findings of fact, thus determined for the whole city, the districting of the whole city in accordance therewith should take place at the same time.

Very fortunately, however, it is quite generally agreed among citizens and the council members who have been studying this matter that the proposed ordinance will stipulate as far as it possibly can, under the enabling statute, for a comprehensive treatment. The general features of the substitute ordinance admirably provide for such treatment. This ordinance has been framed under the guidance of the best advice obtainable, notably Mr. Edward M. Bassett, chairman of the New York commission, who is probably the country's most eminent authority on the application of the police power to this field of legislation.

But just as it is quite possible for well intentioned but unskilled artisans to make a poor job of a splendid plan for a building, so it is perhaps most important to Chicago, now that there is general agreement as to a comprehensive plan, that the development of the zoning plan here should be intrusted to a most carefully selected group of commissioners who are eminently fitted for this particular work.

The specifications for a zoning commission are fairly definite. Men are generally selected for a job after the job itself has been carefully analyzed. What, then, will the commissioners be called upon to do? They will have, in the main, five chief functions.

First, they will be called upon to select an expert or experts and staff to undertake the surveys and map making. The choice of experts is, of course, of primary importance, so far as the quality of the work done is concerned. Much material of a public nature, i. e. as affecting public property and interests generally, is available in the files of city departments and of various commissions, such as the railway terminals commissions, but particularly in the case of the Chicago plan commission. It will probably commend itself to the zoning commissioners to sustain the closest contact with the materials and data of the Chicago plan office and staff. In addition, however, it would seem quite desirable that the actual detailed experience in zoning, so far as methods are concerned, which has been gained at much effort and expense in other cities, should be capitalized by associating in its staff, if not by heading it, any one or more of the very excellent expert zoning engineers who participated in the recent conference in this city.

THE need for this supplementary service becomes apparent when it is realized the work of the Chicago plan has been, in the main, concerned with the broad and rather spectacular aspects of city structure—a public aspect, if you please—whereas zoning, although a proper accompaniment of sound city planning, has to do, in the main, with the control of private property. Consequently, a different attitude of mind must be called into play, different data must be collected and weighed, a different kind of promotion must be maintained, and reference must be had constantly to a different kind of legal authority.

The commissioners should be men who are intense students of the cause of zoning, who believe in it wholeheartedly as a practical measure for relief from many of our present ills of city life and as a logical plan for the economic and graceful development of the city toward its highest usefulness for all the people; and who can justify such belief before any group of citizens who may hold a contrary view. They should know of the zoning progress in other centers, of the relations between the municipal and the metropolitan zoning viewpoints, and of the contributing and related efforts of the other branches of government. With such a background and with such an enthusiasm the commissioners would be enabled to intelligently and sympathetically study the data and findings of their staff, and to so impress their fuller knowledge of the city upon the work of the staff that Chicago may get the best expression of the zoning ideals as are related to Chicago's needs.

Without that background and enthusiasm Chicago is quite likely to get a much different and undoubtedly poorer quality of result, namely: the kind of zoning which the professional, technical, and perhaps idealist, expert would like to apply to the city. It, therefore, cannot be too vividly impressed upon the appointing power that the kind of mind which undertakes to assume responsibility for the texture of our city's growth must be of the finest mental and spiritual capacity, coupled with sound economic judgment. Otherwise, the completed job will lack sorely in being worthy of its possibilities for future generations as well as in serving the present needs of the people.

BUT not only as students of zoning are these capacities required but as teachers and doers as well. Our experience here in some respects will duplicate that which all other cities have had in connection with their zoning efforts. Increasing demands will come from all sections of the city for exposition of the zoning idea, and, in the language of Mr. Bassett, a commission properly devoted to the job will have many occasions for its entire membership to take the stump before eager and critical audiences. Then, too, there will be many opportunities which the commission will want to seek out to combat the attacks, legal and otherwise, which selfish and narrow individuals and interests will make upon the proposition.

It will be recalled that Mr. Bassett pointed out in his city hall address during the zoning conference that the greatest danger before Chicago in its efforts along this line would come from its complacency, in taking too much for granted, in routine administration, in handling the work of this commission as the work of other commissions are handled, rather than in prosecuting the intrenchment of the zoning idea with vigorous, missionary zeal.

Next, the commission will need to keep alive at all times to the importance of watching the legal relations, both locally and in the state, under which it operates. It is worth again calling the attention of the appointing power to the fact that the extraordinary success of the New York commission in its pioneer, ground breaking work in zoning is generally regarded as being due in large part to the exceptional equipment of its chairman, who as a legal specialist in the applications of the police power to zoning was able to give that precise, careful scrutiny to every step taken and to its legal fortification before taking another step.

AND finally in the list of the prominent qualifications for these commissioners should be set down one which is personal to every one of them. No citizen could be called to a service of greater public trust or confidence than this—making recommendations for the taking of substantial private rights and the reissuance of them into the common fund for the good of all. For the proper discharge of this duty it requires an individual whose every relation in his private affairs speaks clearly for unbiased, nonpartisan and absolutely fair and courageous service. Whatever commissioners are appointed it will be quite unfair to them, as a commission, as it will be to the cause of zoning, if any unnecessary hardship is placed upon their freest service, by any the slightest feeling that in any of its personnel the commission may not be able to stand squarely and openly and enduringly upon its findings of fact.

Should any suspicions be entertained by even a small body of the people that the commission may be embarrassed or controlled, even unconsciously so, by social, commercial, political or other considerations, it will lack that primary requirement of public respect and approval that has been demonstrated is so essential to its success. It is interesting to note in this connection that it is relatively immaterial whether suspicions which may be laid against a commission are true or not; so long as they are logically possible the damage to the commission's usefulness is just as great as if they were definitely proven.

To illustrate: The commissions in New York and in St. Louis are predominantly of citizens other than officeholders and the taint of political influence has never been attached as controlling the output of the commissions in those cities. However, in Philadelphia and Newark, where the politicians or office holding commissioners are in the majority, the work of both commissions has been battered and upset from many angles. Charges have been made by the press, by civic associations, and by citizens. In consequence, whether the charges are true or not, the zoning effort in both of these cities has suffered.

A zoning engineer of national reputation testifies that he has seen service under both kinds of commissions. In those composed of officeholders in the majority, he has been compelled to labor with political members to offset the special appeals which inevitably come to men in public life from their constituents or political sponsors. Public confidence in the output of any commission so constituted cannot fail to be much less than where nonpartisan, private citizens are in the majority. If the appointing power, namely, the mayor and the council, are truly friends of zoning they will see to it that this disturbing quality of a political complexion, verified by the experience of other cities and the testimony of competent authority, is not cast—as a destroying burden—upon the Chicago zoning commission.

All the more so should they regard this special charge upon them when they realize that a commission composed largely of men in public life is not only not necessary, but is entirely unrelated to the special service called for. First, a commission containing from six to eight aldermen would bring in proposed ordinances which the same men sitting as aldermen would vote upon. Such procedure is hardly in harmony with the best traditions of American political theory. Secondly, the service of the commission is purely investigative, not legislative, and the council itself must pass the ordinance which the commission recommends.

Consequently, there is no usurpation by the commission of the proper functions of the councilmen. Third, in the very nature of a councilman's special knowledge of his own ward, its needs and its people, he is comparatively disqualified for an absolutely unbiased, comprehensive viewpoint of the city's needs as a whole which will be entirely fair to all other localities within the city limits. While the two services are not utterly inconsistent in theory, nevertheless, a good alderman will always serve his own people.

ON the other hand, there is good ground for both aldermen and administration representatives being upon the commission, so long as that representation does not destroy the "private citizen" character of the commission. The ordinances, as prepared by the commission, will need interpretation upon the floor of the council when they come before it for passage, and the administrative official, who will be charged with the enforcement of the ordinance, will be the better administrator thereof for having studied through the development of the ordinance itself. But aside from these logical relations of two or three councilmen and of two or three administration representatives, there not only is no sound reason for additional official representation, but very good reasons, as given above, for decidedly limiting such representation.

What has been said above, by way of illustration, of an undue preponderance of political representation, is, of course, equally true of similar overweight of any group in the community, such as too many warehousemen, or factory owners, or apartment house owners, or of any other group that might be mentioned. But, of course, the danger of overloading in these particulars is comparatively quite remote.

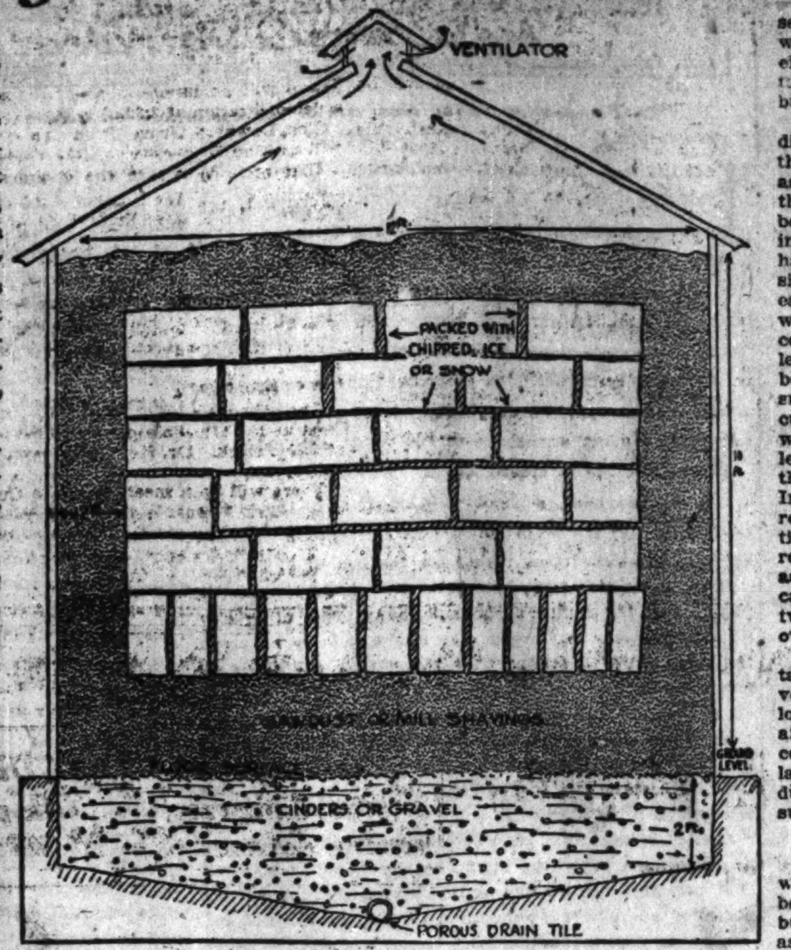
In a very real sense this commission will act like a board of arbitration serving the many conflicting interests and conditions in the community, carefully and scientifically studying all the facts and reporting a finding which should receive a harmonious reception from all these interests. Any ordinance which intrusts this delicate mission to a group which is decidedly overloaded in its representation will fail of such a reception. In particular, a proposed ordinance which places eight councilmen and four of the administration—a total of twelve officials upon a board of nineteen—is inviting unnecessary hardships both to the commission and to a better Chicago.

With these three named considerations woven into the zoning policy of Chicago, if the lessons of experience and the guide of authority is still to be relied upon, the "Chicago zoned"—and zoned in the highest and best sense—will be on its way.

Harvesting Ice on the Farm

HOW TO CUT AND STORE THE YEAR'S SUPPLY

By Frank Ridgway



WHEN the mercury dropped to zero farmers accepted it as a signal to get ready for the ice harvest. Some began patching up the old icehouse and vacant sheds, while others built new houses, for many of them realize they can harvest their ice cheaper than they can buy it. While in many sections artificial ice plants can furnish ice at a comparatively low cost, dairy farmers and a good percentage of the general farmers will find it economical to store their own supply.

Even the country merchants and people in small towns find that the advantages and conveniences of having a good supply of ice stored in individual houses are far beyond the small cost of harvesting it. The harvesting of ice comes at a time when there is little work to do on the farm, and neighbors often coöperate, consequently the cost is small.

An elaborate icehouse is not necessary. Few of them are built of new lumber, and frequently the icehouse is an old woodshed, a corncrib, one corner of the barn, silo, vegetable storehouse or an old dry cistern. In some of the southern states they dig a hole in the ground above the water level and line it with clay. So there are many types of icehouses that may be used, and in extreme cases ice is kept by stacking it out of doors and covering it with some form of insulation, but the shrinkage is heavy. The successful keeping of ice does not depend on an expensive house. Of course the better it is stored the smaller the loss, and where labor is high a good house is necessary. Some have found they were justified in building cheap houses where they can store ice at a low cost.

On dairy farms where heavy losses occur every year from improper cooling of milk and cream it is advisable to build permanent ice houses out of good material. Milk and cream should be kept at a temperature of about 50 degrees Fahrenheit for best results, and dairy experts have found that it requires about one-half ton of ice for each cow to keep the cream cool while it is being held where deliveries are made about three times a week. Where the milk is to be cooled it will take from one to one and a half tons more for each cow.

In general, most of the ice houses on small farms are about 12x14 feet with eaves about ten feet from the ground. A house this size will hold about twenty-five tons of ice, which is sufficient for the average farm where only a few cows are kept.

When the harvesting begins everything should be ready so there will be no delay when the ice is brought in from the field. The house should be clean and insulation material available for immediate use. Sawdust or mill shavings can usually be obtained and are the most commonly used for packing ice. These materials are cheap and if kept dry make good insulators. Mill shavings are considered better than sawdust, because the latter is usually damp. Dampness destroys the insulation value and for that reason sawdust must be thoroughly dried before using.

Good insulation is the secret of keeping ice. In order to insure insulation, good packing, drainage, and ventilation must be carefully looked after. Cheap ice houses are often built in the ground, sometimes in the side of a hill, and the problem of insulation is greatly lessened.

In packing, ice should never be placed directly on the ground. The earth is a fairly good conductor of heat. This is especially true where the soil is wet, which is always the case with the floor of an ice house. The floor should be covered with about a twelve inch layer of sawdust before any ice is put in. The first layer of ice is usually placed on edge rather than laid flatwise. Regardless of the method employed in laying the cakes, at least every third layer should be placed so as to break the joints; otherwise there will be extra pressure on the side walls, which will cause them to bulge.

The aim in packing should be to make a huge solid cake of ice out of the whole mass. A space of ten or twelve inches should be left between the mass of ice and the walls for sawdust, especially where the building is made of brick, concrete, or stone. Where double side walls are used the space may be reduced to about six or seven inches. This space is to be filled with sawdust or mill shavings. In either case the material should be tamped in lightly, especially sawdust, but hard tamping should be avoided.

Irregular shaped cakes of ice are difficult to handle and it is important that every block of ice be cut as true as possible. The cases should all be the same size and broken cakes should be placed to one side to be used in filling the space between the cakes. Ice harvested when the temprature is considerably below freezing is much more easily handled, the cakes are dry and will not stick together so readily. The common method of packing ice is to leave about an inch and a half space between each cake, and fill it with snow or chipped ice to prevent the circulation of air. The loss from melting would be greater if these spaces were left open, and another advantage is that the cakes are easier to remove. In the summer when the ice is being removed warm air is admitted every time the door is opened, and for this reason the door should be kept open as little as possible. The ice should be carefully covered each time. At least twelve inches of sawdust should be over the mass of ice at all times.

Another precaution that should be taken in removing the ice is that the ventilator should be opened. This allows the warm air to escape. Warm air causes vapor to form and moisture collects in the building. The top layer must be kept dry. Softwood sawdust has been found a much better insulator than hardwood sawdust.

The ice will melt more or less when warm weather comes, and there must be sufficient means of ventilating the building to keep the walls and sawdust as dry as possible. Besides increasing the melting of the ice, moisture is also absorbed by wood and decay follows. Water also collects on the floor where good drainage is not provided, and ice melts rapidly when in water. It therefore becomes important to provide thorough drainage to carry off the water that settles down through the ice. Where the ground is used for a floor and the soil is sandy it is usually porous enough to provide sufficient drainage.

If it is a clay soil the water will all be carried off by excavating about two feet and filling in with gravel or cinders. Lay a three inch porous tile under the floor and trap it properly so warm air cannot enter the building through the floor.

Ice to be stored must be clean and clear. It is best to have an ice field that has been freed of all branches and logs, and all possible sources of pollution must be removed before freezing. Thick ice is always desirable, and the thickness may be greatly increased by keeping the field clean. Snow should be removed immediately after it falls unless the weather is warm.

Hand tools will be sufficient for harvesting ice on the average farm. Where the work is being done on a small scale two ice saws will be needed. Wood saws may be used where the ice saw is not available. Two pairs of ice tongs, two hooks, one hand marker, a pointed bar, and a straight edge will be needed. A rope and pulley will also be found necessary in unloading at the icehouse. Of course, where large houses are to be filled with natural ice horse drawn tools should be employed.

A FAIR WEATHER FRIEND

By Guy F. Lee.

When the day is dark and dreary
And the chilly heavens frown;
When the wind, ice tipped and eerie,
From the north pole hurtles down:
Then I shiver while undressing
And creep quickly into bed,
For the furnace is digressing
And the radiator's dead.

But when sunshine spreads its glory
Of effulgence o'er the earth,
Chasing Jack Frost's minions hoary
And diffusing joy and mirth,
Then the steam heat sings and splutters
With so radiant a chime
That you'd never guess it stutters
When it's needed, every time!

Curl Hair This Way and Keep It Healthy

It has been found that the occasional use of a harmless and inexpensive fluid which druggists know as "Silmerine" will keep the straightest hair in curl perpetually, giving the appearance of true naturalness, besides keeping the hair softer and glossier than possible with the heated iron. The liquid may be applied with a clean tooth brush, this being drawn through the hair from crown to tip and allowed to dry over night.

In the morning the hair will be beautifully wavy and curling, and will lie easily and loosely on the head, as it should, considering its welfare from a hygienic standpoint. A few ounces of liquid Silmerine will last for months, and as it is really beneficial to the hair, which cannot be said of the heated iron, it should be generally adopted by the fair sex. It will not spot or discolor scalp or hair, nor leave any sediment, grease or stickiness.

News of the Religious World

Reconstruction and Reunion Big Church Problems of the Moment

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot.

THE keynote of all the churches during 1919 has been "Reconstruction." The major communions have all initiated campaigns for large visioned advance work and the strengthening of that already established.

Actual union or reunion has been accomplished by several of the smaller and more similar denominations. Several groups among the Methodists and the Presbyterians have amalgamated. Rapprochements have been made between others which promise results.

But more important than all are the several plans for general approach toward union among the churches throughout the world.

One of the movements which originated in 1919 is the interchurch world movement. Its purpose is to coördinate the work of the Protestant churches and to avoid as far as possible any overlapping in missionary and other enterprises. A world survey of the needs of the domestic and foreign missionary field is being made, and a budget will be prepared on the basis of its findings. A drive for funds will be made in April. About twenty denominations are coöperating. It is not a movement for church unity, in any organic sense, but simply an attempt to increase the efficiency of present organizations and to form a headquarters for the work they have in common.

More ambitious is the world conference on faith and orders which is to have a preliminary meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, next August. Last summer the Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago, chairman of the commission on faith and orders of the Episcopal church, headed a committee which made a tour of the Christian churches of the world, inviting them to participate in a conference, to be held probably in 1921, at which the question of organic unity will be discussed. The orthodox churches of the east and others, as well as most of the Christian bodies in Europe and America, have officially accepted the invitation. The Roman Catholic church alone refused to attend the conference.

The churches have been stirred by the war in other ways. The problems of reconstruction fall largely upon them, and they are fitting themselves to meet them. All communions have made a survey of their strength, and the opportunities which confront them, and have raised or are raising vast sums of money with which to perform their tasks. Some have practically reorganized in order to be more equal to the work.

The centenary movement of the Methodist church netted over $120,000,000—20 per cent above the quota. The new era movement of the Presbyterian church is raising $13,000,000. The Congregational church has just started a drive for $50,000,000 for educational and missionary work, in addition to the recent Pilgrim memorial fund of $5,000,000 for clergy pensions. The new world movement of the Baptist Church North is for $100,000,000, while the southern branch is raising $75,000,000. The Episcopal church has started the nation wide campaign with a financial goal of $42,000,000. The Roman Catholic church will soon announce a campaign for about $100,000,000 for purposes similar to those of the other communions. The Lutheran churches have practically doubled their missionary budget through a recent every member canvass, and the United Presbyterian church is conducting an advance campaign for a large fund. Besides these major funds, numerous smaller communions have carried on campaigns with great success.

Notable reorganizations have been the move for greater unification on the part of the Congregational church, the formation of the Catholic welfare council of the Roman church, with departments of missions, education, etc., with headquarters in Washington, D. C., and the creation of the executive council of the Episcopal church with similar departments, with headquarters in New York. The new era movement of the Presbyterian church is a similar move.

The great political movement today is toward unity. International union seems far away, but nations are themselves becoming united for the first time. So the national fusion is bringing the churches closer together with the result that great strides are being taken in the direction of church unity and none greater than during the last twelvemonth.

THE REV. J. E. HUMMON-D.D.

The Rev. John E. Hummon, D. D., comes from Denver, Colo., to the Luther Memorial Lutheran church, Wilson and Campbell avenues. For the last six years he has been pastor of a church in Denver which he founded and built up. A church building and other equipment has been erected, and the congregation is in flourishing state. Previous to his pastorate in Denver he was pastor of the largest English Lutheran church in the world, the Kountze Memorial, at Omaha, Neb., which has 3,000 communicants. While there he erected a $300,000 church building. He comes to a promising field in Ravenswood, where building plans are being made for the future. At present the congregation is meeting in the new chapel which was built during the last year. Dr. J. F. Seibert, district superintendent of missions, and Dr. S. S. Waltz, executive secretary of the Lutheran brotherhood, recently installed Dr. Hummon.

St. Hyacinth Roman Catholic church, Lawndale avenue and Wolfram street, celebrates its twenty-fifth anniversary today. A sacred concert will be given at 8 p. m. by the choir, assisted by the choirs of St. Stanislaus Kostka, St. John Cantius, St. Hedwig, and St. Venceslaus churches. The Rev. John Zdechlik is pastor of the church.

The services of Trinity Episcopal church, which was destroyed by fire last Wednesday night, will be held in the parish house. The full choir will be in attendance. The Rev. Prof. Leicester C. Lewis will preach at 11 a. m. The Rev. N. B. Clinch is priest in charge of the parish.

The northwestern conference pastoral of the English district of the Missouri Lutheran synod will meet in annual session at the Windsor Park Lutheran church, Seventy-sixth and Sangamon streets, the Rev. Arthur Kamb, pastor, from Tuesday to Thursday of this week. A special feature of the conference will be a discussion of spiritism, led by the Rev. Charles Schuth of Freeport, Ill.

This training has brought success to artists who have failed to make good after studying elsewhere.

The Meyer Both College teaches you the fundamentals of art, and more—it teaches their practical application to commercial purposes. Commercial Art is Dollar Art—practical art for practical purposes. When you take up your studies in the Meyer Both College, you get the benefits of active contact with the dominant organization in the very field you are seeking success. Who else could teach you so well and so resultfully?

The demand for commercial artists is greater every year—the shortage today is acute. It's a highly paid, intensely interesting profession. The opportunity is equally open to men and women.

Meyer Both Company conducts its school in its own name—positive evidence of thoroughness and sincerity. You can reap the benefit of its practical teaching and individual instructions without disturbing your present occupation by the HOME STUDY METHOD.

Best for Court Reporting

Signs represent SYLLABLES. 112 syllables make all words. In THIRTY SCHOOL DAYS you graduate in shorthand. Write "chin" and "thin." Note how often "th" occurs in reading. Typewriting is extra.

From the Annual Report of the New York State Shorthand Reporters' Association, New York City, N. Y., 1919, 43rd year, pages 38, 95 and 100:

"A syllable is a fonic unit. Rates of speed can therefore be more accurately expressed in syllables per minute than in words per minute. Legibility is most promoted by full expression. The single letter foundation is deficient, and is hopelessly overburdened."

Boyd Shorthand is the only "syllabic" system. A syllable is a complete sound, and Boyd Shorthand is the only "phonetic" system. Other systems are based on single letters which are only articulations and not complete sounds. The name "phonetic" is sometimes erroneously applied to the old method.

Our textbooks are standard and complete. The BOYD SHORTHAND INSTRUCTOR is for study, the BOYD LETTER WRITER is for speed practice, and the BOYD SHORTHAND DICTIONARY is for reference. They are sent prepaid to any address for $1.50 each. Day and Evening Classes. Call, write or telephone Central 4337 for catalog and all information.

ASTRONOMY

PERPETUAL MOTION.

SINCE time began, perhaps, perpetual motion has stood out as a goal just beyond the grasp, a goal just about to be achieved. It is a subject which has a fascinating hold on some minds, a hold which sometimes dethrones the reason. It used to be that every alchemist dreamed of the day when he, of all men, should contrive the machine which would run forever without power and which would make him the greatest man in the world.

Many thousands of devices have been made and recorded, and perhaps a myriad more have cost their inventors the bitter pangs of baffled disillusionment, and so were never heard of. Two hundred years ago the French academy refused to listen to any more schemes for perpetual motion. Our own United States patent office, a little more liberal, perhaps, demands a "working model" of any device intended to run forever.

Perpetual motion is possible, and it isn't. The seeming paradox can be explained. In space the planets pursue their orbits about the sun, many with a retinue of satellites about them in turn, and the whole system is so beautifully balanced that as far as we know it will endure forever. Set any number of bodies out in space in any formation whatever and forthwith they begin to move of their own accord and go on running without an end.

If such a thing could be reproduced on earth we should have the true perpetual motion. But it cannot be done. We live on a great sphere, whose gravity constantly pulls everything toward it. Nothing escapes the pull of the earth's force. A ball, rolling on a level floor, which theoretically ought to roll on forever, comes to a stop because it must expend all its energy in lifting its weight over obstacles, be they ever so slight.

Another name for the effect of gravity on all terrestrial objects is friction. In space there is no friction, and hence perpetual motion is the order there. Here everything which moves encounters resistance. The day when gravity is successfully neutralized will be the day when perpetual motion is accomplished on earth.

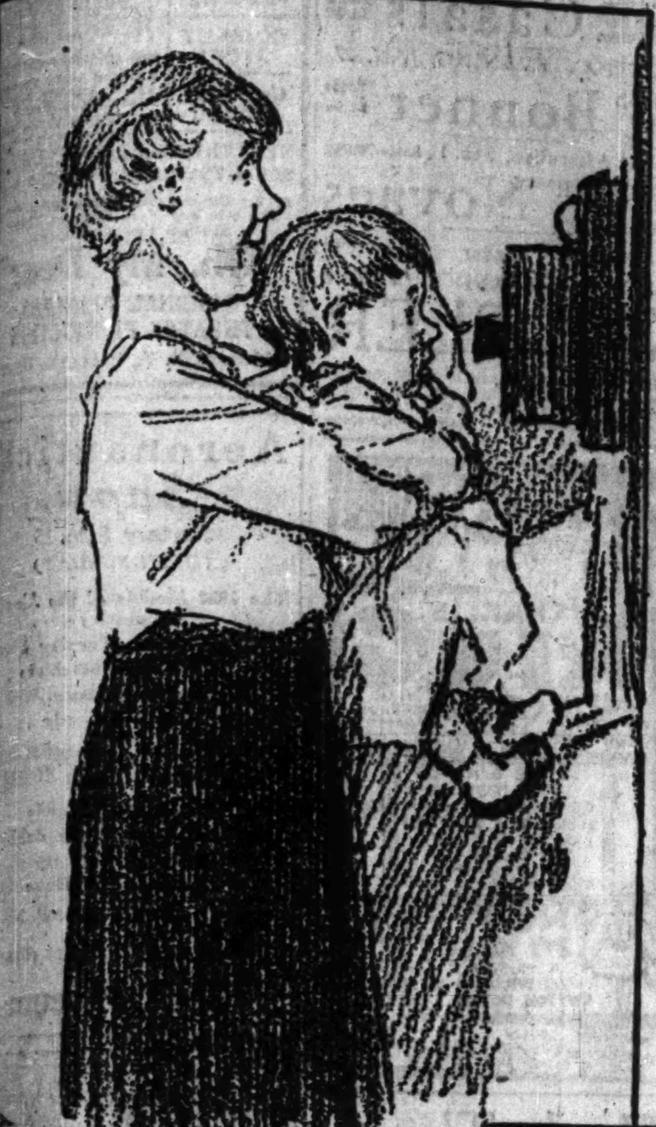
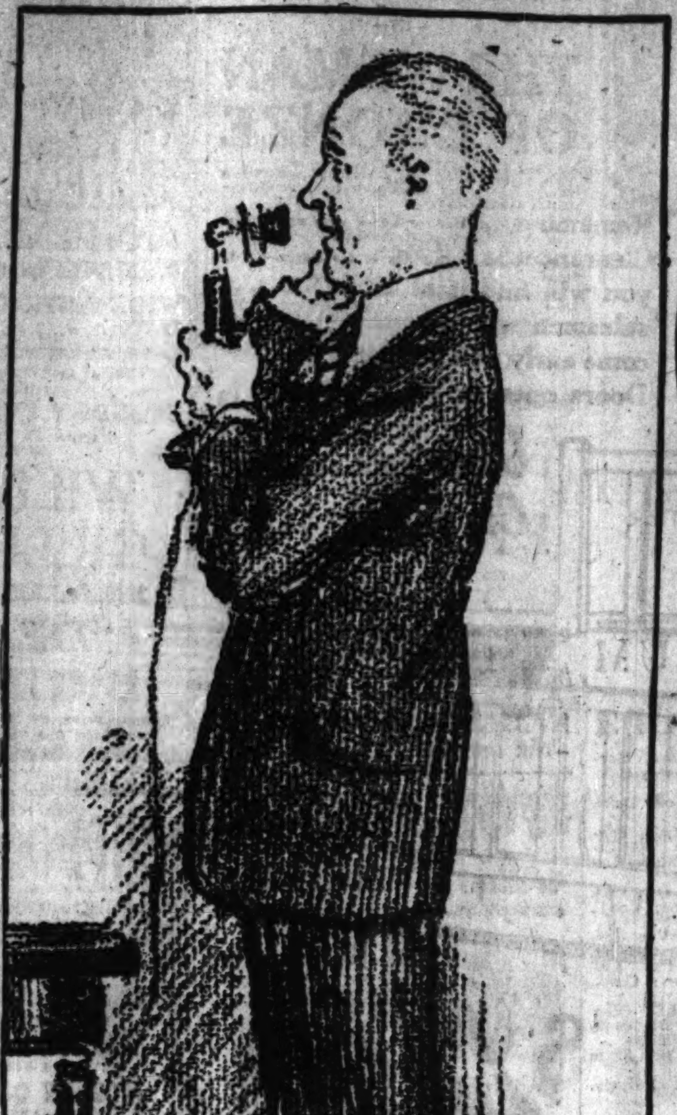
Among Us Mortals
OVER THE 'PHONE

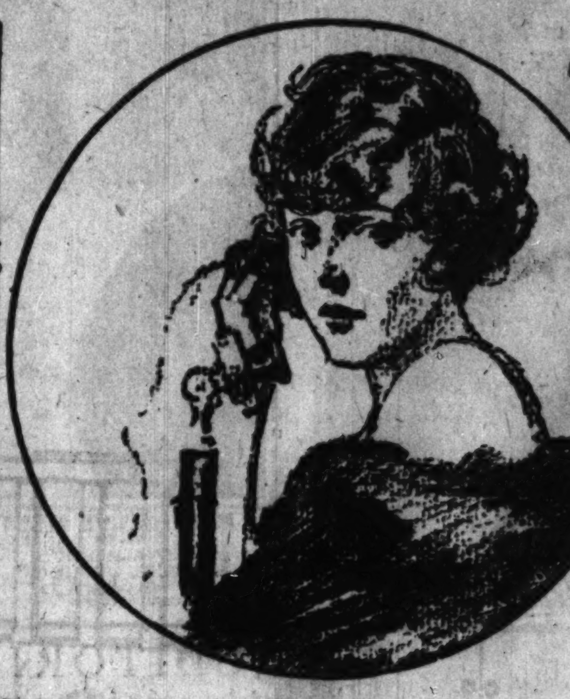
By W. E. HILL

Copyright, 1920, N. Y. Tribune Inc.

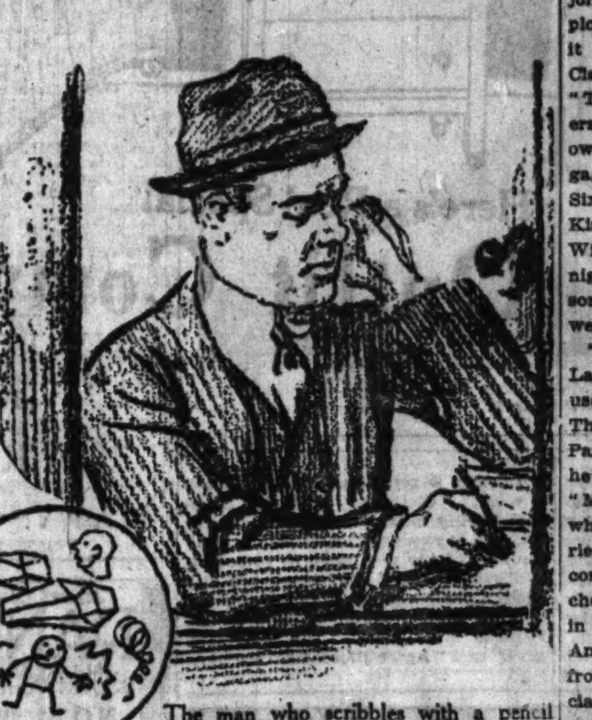


Baby has been lifted to the phone to thank Cousin Will for the box of toy animals, and neither party seems to be clever enough to end the conversation, which has tailed off on Cousin Will's end to a series of "Yes, he was a nice boy this morning. Yes? Well! Well! Ah! ha, ha, ha! Yes, nice boy. Ahem. Well, well!" Aunt Flo is prompting baby to tell Cousin Will what baby had for breakfast, and baby is calling "Oat-ie meal" just as plainly in the direction of the phone.

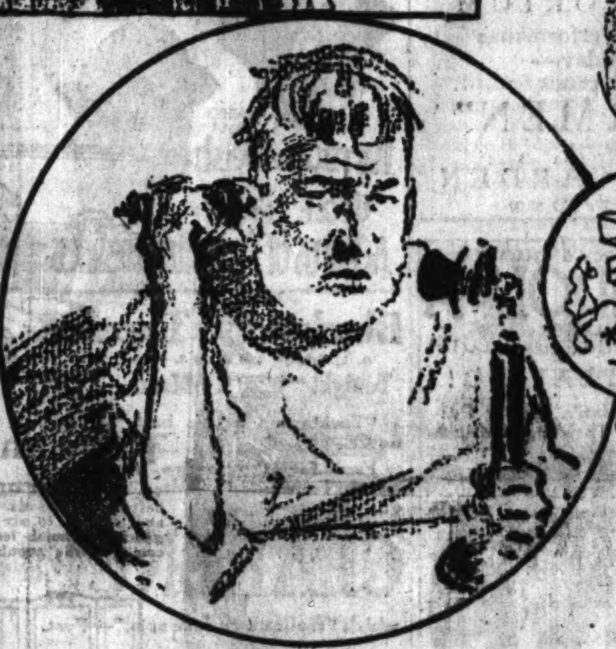




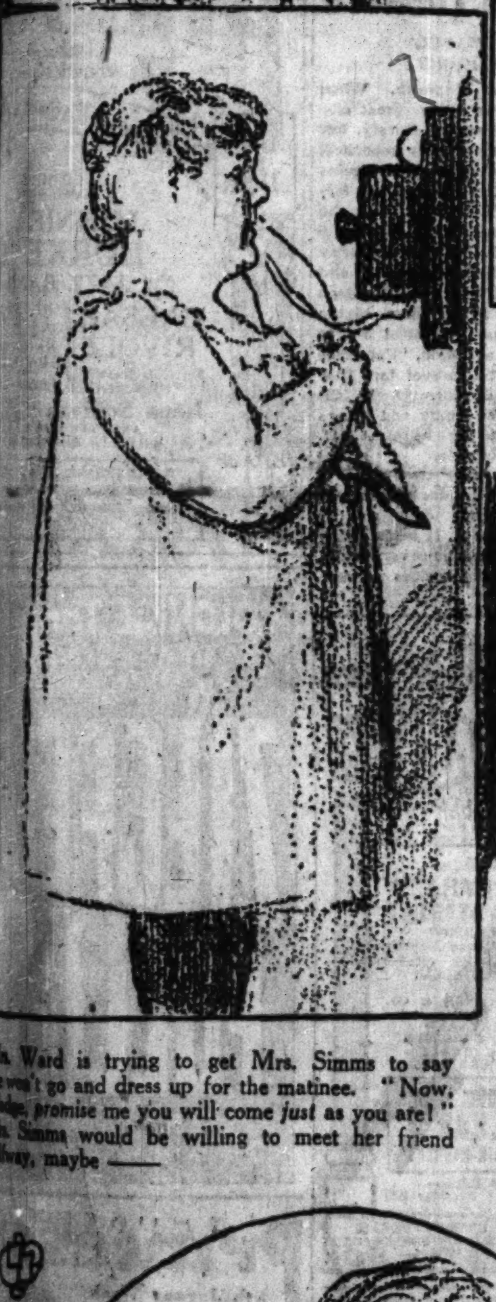
"Arthur made Bessie guess who it was, and Bessie guessed "Frank!" quick as a wink. Bessie is pretending she knew who it was all the time, without much success.



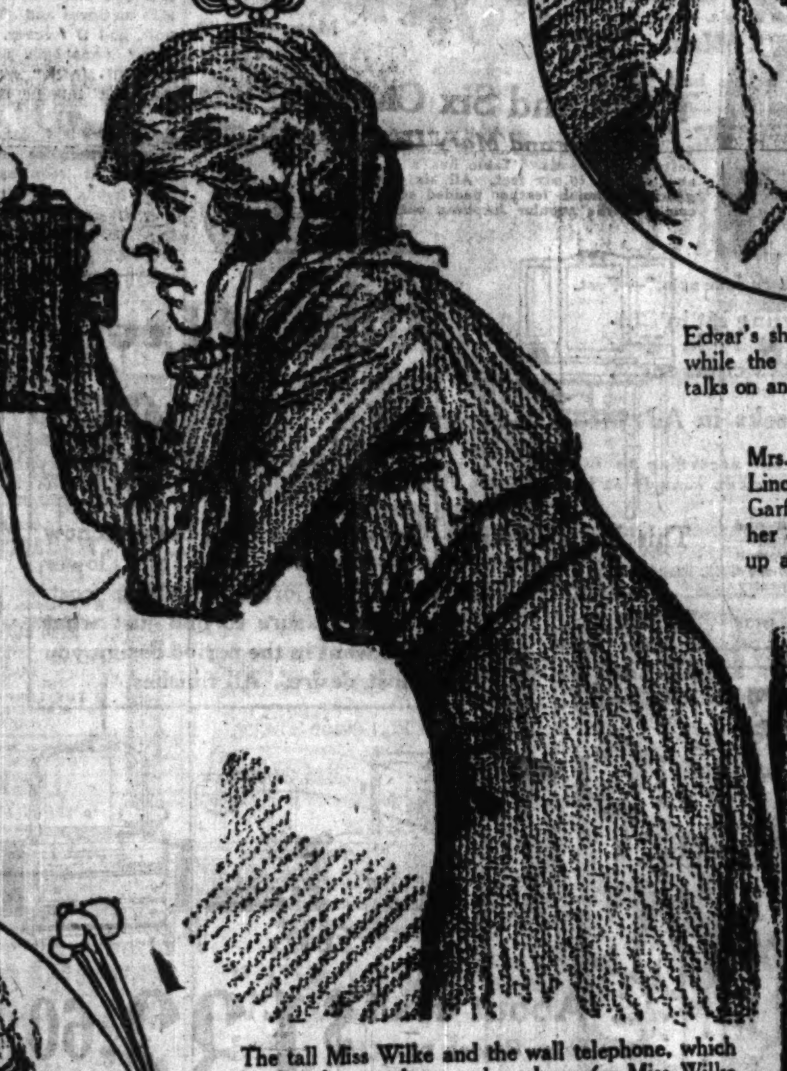
The man who scribbles with a pencil while he transacts a little business matter over the telephone. Take away his pencil and he couldn't put anything over (the figures in the circle are the specimens of his handiwork).



Edgar's shaving soap is drying on his face, while the girl at the other end of the line talks on and on.



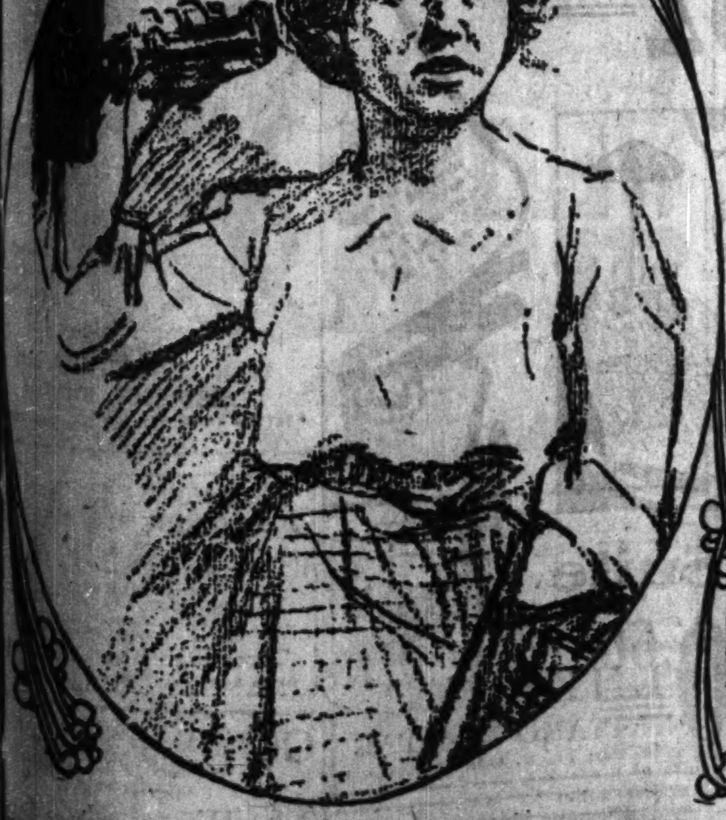
s. Ward is trying to get Mrs. Simms to say e won't go and dress up for the matinee. "Now, dge, promise me you will come just as you are!" s. Simms would be willing to meet her friend lfway, maybe ——



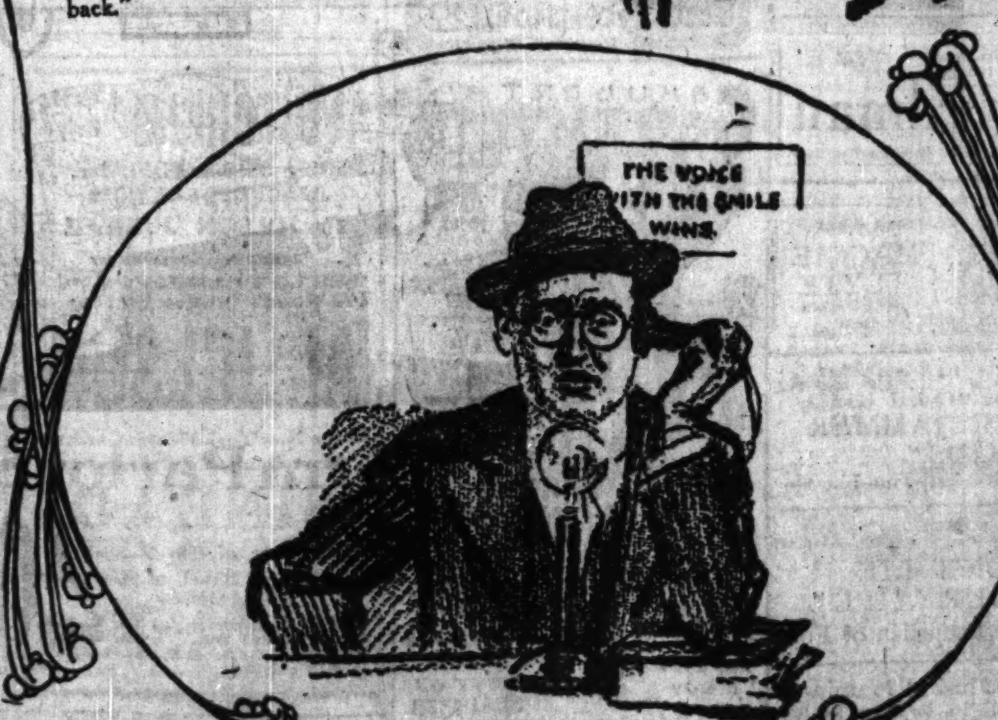
The tall Miss Wilke and the wall telephone, which is placed somewhat too low down for Miss Wilke to thoroughly enjoy Auntie Mae's five minute description of her "system" and how some mornings it seems as though the "old trouble had come back."

Mrs. Brisket (below) has asked Central for Lincoln 1264 and five minutes later is given Garfield 6600. Now Mrs. B. has forgotten her original number and will have to look it up again.

"My dear, I had a terrible time—four hours on the operating table and my chart said incessant pain! I'm so glad I went to a hospital. You feel sure everything will be done for you," etc., etc. The lady who gives the intimate details over the phone. And if you are switched on a busy line you're sure to get in on a conversation like this.

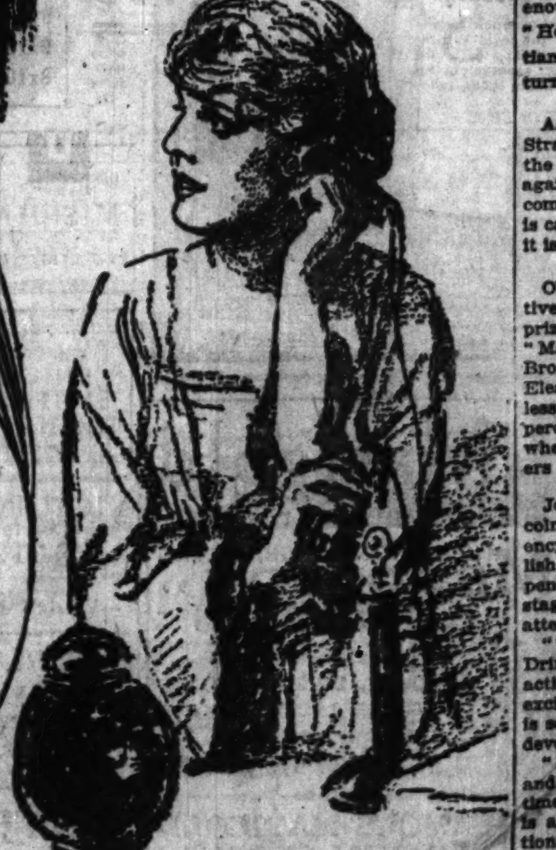


the Lithuanian, who is a little bit afraid of the telephone, does best at taking down an important business message for Mr. Browne.



THE VOICE WITH THE SMILE WINS.

"Aw, get off the wire—this line's busy!" The man who gets a busy line by mistake, and takes it out on a perfectly inoffensive woman talking with her butcher.



"He knows I'm in this evening, mamma; can't you think of something to keep him away?" Edna, who loves the truth and all that, can tell 'em by the yard, if it's over the phone.

News of the Theaters

By Percy Hammond

HERALDS of a merry world, the press agents burst in this morning with "spattered boots, strapped waists and frozen locks," great news from the drama, lumbering at their backs. The name of Otis Skinner's new play has been changed; it is now "Pietro," instead of "The Rise of Peter Barban." Mrs. Skinner wrote it and Mr. Skinner is going to play it in New York. Frances Starr, star of "Tiger, Tiger," announces that the emotions of her art are woven out of the fabric of her soul; and Curtis Cooksey has been hired to play with Holbrook Blinn and Mary Nash in "Man and Woman."

Leo Ditrichstein aspires to Iago, if he can find an Othello who is not too good, and Theda Bara proposes to entwine herself about a masterpiece entitled "The Lost Soul," by George V. Hobart. Marilynn Miller has been ill, bereaving the Follies of her fair person, and A. H. Woods is suing Marjorie Rambeau to keep her in his employ. Paris yearns for "Scandal," and it will be sent there in translation. Claire Stratton has joined the cast of "The Little Whopper." Rachel Crothers of Bloomington will act in her own play, "He and She," and has engaged Cyril Keightley to help her. Sixty Shriners of the Arab Patrol, Kismet temple, Brooklyn, attended the Winter Garden, New York, Saturday night in full uniform. Forbes-Robertson, arriving at Plymouth, said farewell forever to the stage.

"Oh, My Dear," is coming to the La Salle with Douglas Stevenson, who used to sing "Good-by, Girls, I'm Through." Gregory Kelly, the Peter Pan of American comedy, wishes, when he is through with "Clarence," to do "Macbeth," or something else worth while, and Louis Anspacher, who married an Evanston girl, has had his comedy, "The Unchastened Woman," chosen by the Theatré La Monniere in Brussels for production as the great American drama, in a series of plays from the allied nations and their associate. Pinero, Masterlinck, and others are to be represented.

Among the bright pledges in Mr. Belasco's rainbow is Sacha Guitry's "Deburau," which was brought to America by Charles B. Cochran, the London pugilistic pilot, and Granville Barker, the poet, critic, and dramatist who has put it into English blank verse. Victor Hugo is one of the characters, and Camille at the age of 18 is also among its persons. In Mr. Cochran's London production Deburau—who was the greatest Pierrot of his time—will be played by Seymour Hicks.

While endeavoring to snare the wary Dempsey into fisticuffs with M. Carpentier, Mr. Cochran is giving the drama the benefit of his kindly consideration. With A. H. Woods he will produce Guitry's "The Illusionist," adapted by Avery Hopwood, the terrible infant of the American theater, and renamed "The Great Illusion." Georges Flateau will play the leading rôle. Mr. Cochran is also interested in the Sam Bernard-Irene Bordoni show, "As You Were"; in Michael Morton's melodrama, "In the Night Watch"; and he will bring the exotic Alice Delysia to America to play "Afgar," a Moorish extravaganza with music by Charles Cuvillier.

George Jean Nathan and H. L. Mencken, the most brilliant, astute, discerning, shrewd, and high-headed of the critical merry-andrews, have ceased jesting at the pish-tosh and rumble-bumble of shows and novels long enough to write a play. It is called "Heliogabalus"; it is a satire on Christianity, and already one producer has turned it down.

* * *

Aarpn Hoffman, author of "Welcome Stranger," is so much encouraged by the success of that gentle protest against racial prejudice, that he has composed another, similar comedy. It is called "The Irish and the Jews." So it is said by the New York newspapers.

* * *

Oliver Morosco found two prospective money-makers in his Harvard prize contest. Rachel Barton Butler's "Mamma's Affairs" is assigned to Broadway, and "The Clam Digger," by Eleanor Holmes Hinckley, will have less impressive but possibly more prosperous production in Los Angeles, where plays flourish even as the flowers do.

John Drinkwater of "Abraham Lincoln" writes deploringly of the tendency which exists among modern English and American playwrights to depend upon time worn tricks of the stage and sensationalism to hold the attention of audiences.

"There are two kinds of plays," Mr. Drinkwater believes, "one in which action is used for its own unrelated excitement, and the other where action is seen as arising from or showing the development of human character.

"In the present days of jaded nerves and minds tired by the rush of the times in which we live, the tendency is almost entirely toward the productions of the first named class, and away from the dramas which are more true to life and more artistic. It is the artist's business to draw from the great chaotic mass of his own and others' experience, and, by showing the relation in which the various elements stand to each other, to make life more clear to the rest of us. Every play which is or ever has been successful owes that success to just one thing—that its author was gifted with the dramatic sense."

[BY CABLE FROM THE PARIS TRIBUNE.]

Eugene Brieux's comedy, "The Americans in Our Homes," was presented tonight for the first time at the Odeon after it had been held up by the reading committee of the Comedy Française. Brieux, who is a great friend of America, said tonight: "It is my desire to dissipate any feeling which exists in a wrong sense between Americans and the French people, so I attempted to get it into the Comedy Française. But the play was held so long that I told them my age was such I could not wait." The play shows two Americans in a provincial French home, and exploits the difference in sentiments and dramatic conflicts between the two peoples. It may be recalled in this connection that the Comedy Française has lost three leading plays this year. In addition to this one of Brieux's, they failed to appreciate "The Man Hunt," by Maurice Donnay, and "Soul in Ecstasy," by François de Curel.

Mme. Aguglia, the feverish Sicilian, who, after learning English, played the leading rôle of "The Whirlwind," has withdrawn from that drama and will enter the moving pictures. Her successor, Miss Laura Walker, played with Louis Mann in "The Bubble" and in "The Man Who Came Back."

Miss Elsie Ferguson, who is about to raise her voice again in the wordy drama, will have the support of Vincent Serrano and Jose Ruben in Arnold Bennett's "Sacred and Profane Love."

* * *

A. H. Woods, a master of play nomenclature, has rechristened "Ready to Occupy" so that it's title is now "No More Blondes."

In Atlantic City next week John Drew will launch his new play, "The Cat Bird," by Rupert Hughes. Miss Janet Beecher, William Raymond, and others are in Mr. Drew's company.

Miss Nance O'Neill is about to resume operations after many months in the shadows, with Beneventor's "La Malpuerida," a Castillian peasant drama, of which it is said that it has "great power."

* * *

Mrs. Henry B. Harris has obtained "The Proper Spirit," another play designed to set the world right, by Willard Robertson and Kilbourn Gordon, authors of "When a Man's a Man," which is marking time in the suburbs until it can rush into the breach of a metropolitan theater.

The Chicago engagement of William Gillette in J. M. Barrie's comedy, "Dear Brutus," will begin at the Illinois theater on Monday evening, Jan. 19. The Barrie play, in which Mr. Gillette appeared the larger part of last season at the Empire theater, New York, pictures in a whimsical and Barlesque fashion the possibilities if all of us should have the opportunity to live our lives over again. Mr. Gillette is seen as an artist, Dearth, discontented and a failure, who takes a journey into a "magic wood," to find there the might-have-been daughter for whom he has always longed and the vision of whom in the wood spurs him on to reformation and more worthy efforts. Hilda Moore, an English actress making her first appearance in this country, portrays Mrs. Dearth, the rôle which she created, with Gerald Du Maurier, in the original London production of "Dear Brutus." Other important rôles are in the hands of Violet Kemble Cooper, Marie Wainright, Madge Bellamy, Frances Anderson, Anne Morrison, Grant Stewart, William Podmore, Fred Russell, and Thomas A. Braiden.

"A Voice in the Dark," which reaches the Woods next week is by Ralph Dyar, a dramatist of Spokane. Its chief characters are a deaf woman and a blind man, who are the leading witnesses of a mysterious murder. Among the actors in it are Olive Wyndham, Florine Arnold, Anne Sutherland, and Frank Monroe.

A final evidence that Klaw and Erlanger have reached the parting of the ways occurred last week when Mr. Klaw removed his belongings from the K. & E. headquarters in the New Amsterdam in New York to the Empire theater. Mr. Erlanger's staff remains. George Cohan also departed last week from the whereabouts of Sam H. Harris.

John D. Williams has exchanged contracts with Vicente Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," for a dramatization of that author's novel, "Blood and Sand." This romance is now being dramatized by an American dramatist, who is Mr. Ibanes's choice. It will eventually go into the repertory of plays being chosen by Mr. Williams for Lionel Barrymore.

Why a pageant about Christ should be presented without the appearance of the chief figure is puzzling Maurice Maeterlinck, who asks if America is afraid of Jesus. The Belgian poet has put this question to the Interchurch World Movement, which is attempting to tell of the after-the-war spirit in America through "The Wayfarer," a pageant being presented at Madison Square Garden, New York.

"So many of my old and new friends in this country have spoken of this pageant as a marvelous thing that I want to see it," said Mr. Masterlinck. "I am told that it has a truly great lesson on the spirit of the present in America. I understand that although Christ is the lesson of the pageant the Christ does not actually appear as a character on the stage. Why is this? Is America afraid of Christ? As a playwright I am interested in knowing how this is done. I am interested in the question of why Americans do not like to see Christ represented on the stage."

Spirits (Astral, Not Wet) in Play with Jane Cowl

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Jane Cowl's new play, "Smilin' Through," opens with a prologue in which two characters, the mother of the boy and the mother of the girl principally concerned in the story, are "smilin' through" the lattice work of a gate letting into an old English garden. They are spirit mothers and have been dead many years. The garden is the scene of the tragedy in which one lost her life, and they are trying to get a message through to the old gentleman who lives there that he is doing wrong in opposing the love affair of the boy and the girl. But his heart is filled with hatred and revenge and they cannot reach him.

In the first act the present-day section of the story is taken up. Kathleen, the niece of John Cartaret, is in love with Jeremiah Wayne, and he with her, but Cartaret has forbidden the young man the garden, having taken oath never to have anything to do with any member of the Wayne family. Fifty years before the boy's father had invaded that garden and, in a jealous rage, shot and killed Kathleen's aunt the night she was to marry Cartaret. He had escaped to America, married, and now his son was again in England and in love with Kathleen.

The young people demand to know the reason of Cartaret's enmity, which has been kept secret from them. Cartaret begins the story, the curtain is lowered, and when it is raised for the second act the characters are back in the period in which the crime was committed. They reënact the story of the wedding night and the tragedy which was its conclusion. The final act is given to the conclusion of the story. The spirit of the murdered woman appears to the old man and convinces him finally of the injustice of his revenge. His forgiveness clears the way to the young people's happiness, and, dying, he rejoins his lost love in spiritland.

The players, most of whom play two parts each, do not find it easy to negotiate the lapse of fifty years between scenes and the interest is not particularly well sustained. But there are sentimental values in the play that are reaching, particularly to that public that just now is frankly interested in spirit messages. Miss Cowl appears both as Kathleen and as the spirit sweetheart. The one part gives her an opportunity for the lightsome comedy which, because she has gained fame as a tearful emotionalist, she takes most pleasure in playing, and the other affords an opportunity for the sympathetic reading of many pretty passages. She is assisted by Orme Caldara, Henry Stephenson, Ethelbert Hayes, and Charlotte Granville.

The last part Pauline Hall played was one of the best she had had in years. She died last week, but she was ill a comparatively short time and her understudy had given but a few performances of her rôle in "The Gold Diggers." In this play Mr. Belasco had selected the veteran comic opera divinity for the part of a former stage favorite who, in her later years, was reduced to peddling soap to the stage folk of the newer generation. Once she had been the toast of the town; now she was forgotten even by the oldsters who had applauded her.

It was a significant rôle for Miss Hall to play, though it did not duplicate closely her own experiences. She had been able to support herself during the last twenty years by playing small parts and to maintain her home in Yonkers. But so far as the public was concerned she was practically forgotten.

There were enough of those who remembered her the opening night, however, enough who recalled "Erminie" and the days of her starring tours (1892-'96), to give her as fine a reception as any of the younger principals received. There may have been a few ancients present who could hark back as far as the days of the Alice Oates opera company, with which she scored her first success. At any rate, the greeting was hearty and sincere, and it is satisfying to know that at least one old favorite went out with a memory of applause ringing in her ears.

The holiday season was enlivened by few new plays. George Lederer brought the musical comedy which was successful in Chicago last summer, called "Angel Face," to the Knickerbocker theater, and it was well received. It is conventional musical comedy, with a somewhat hackneyed and reminiscent book by Harry B. Smith, but some melodious songs by Victor Herbert. The songs and the eccentric dancing of Jack Donohue did much to save it on Broadway, where it faced competition with twenty other musical plays.

Financially the theaters had their biggest season. Prices were elevated to $3 and $3.50 a seat for the outstanding successes, and rose as high as $10 and $15 on New Year's eve. Two or three extra matinees were played in many theaters, and even these did not take care of all those who were eager to go.

The list of attractions just now is particularly strong. There are more genuine hits playing Broadway theaters than I have ever seen before. Ethel Barrymore has not fallen below receipts of $18,000 weekly since she began at the Empire with "Declasse." "Aphrodite," thanks largely to the advertising it received with the help of the police, is romping along to $30,000 a week. "Clarence," with five matinées during New Year's week, is still crowded at every performance. "Irene," the best of the new musical comedies, is "packin' 'em," and there are still enough playgoers left to crowd the theaters in which "Wedding Bells," "The Famous Mrs. Fair," "The Gold Diggers," and "Apple Blossoms" are playing.

GOOD-BYE MABEL SATURDAY NIGHT
FAME IS THE thirst of youth. When MABEL made her entree to our great city of Chicago, she was a wee bit thirsty, but now that her thirst is thoroughly quenched, the clever girl will leave us as a famous joy bringer. So it is farewell, but not forever, to funny MABEL HAZEL and the other comical occupants "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM" at the WOODS. On next Saturday night MABEL will pack her belongings and take herself and associates to the Davidson Theater, Milwaukee. Seven more nights and two more of those delightful 50c to $1.50 matinees and she will hum, "Fare thee well, and if forever, still forever fare thee well." (Apologies to Byron). "A VOICE IN THE DARK" speaks loudly and brings the glad tidings that the usual A. H. WOODS' splendid collection of actors come Tuesday, Jan. 20th. Impossible to open earlier, as the production is so colossal it requires three days and 29 stage hands to get it ready. It is the Ringling Bros. of melodrama. The never-changing WOODS non-gyping prices always prevail.

BONERS OF PRODUCERS.

By Mae Tineé.

THERE strolled in the other day a gentleman from the adjoining office. It was plain to see that he had something on his mind.

"Well," sezzi, "what's the good word?"

"I've just been over to see Mary Pickford in 'Heart o' the Hills,'" sezze.

"Well," I welled, "it's a good picture. Why so glum?" and then he spilled his grievance:

Had I ever heard of Ku Klux Klans in those mountain regions? Had I ever seen mountain people ride anything with the exception of mules? Did I happen to know that one of those swell, high pommeled riding saddles cost at least $200, which was more than the average mountaineer ever saved in a lifetime?

"And yet," said the gentleman from next door, his brown eyes flashing over his champagne shirt, which harmonized so beautifully with his brown suit and what he wore on his feet, "there are all those mountaineers sitting expensive saddles and riding spirited, high blooded steeds. These are the things," said the gentleman from next door, throwing back his shoulders, "that drive one mad! In some ways the producers have gotten the production of pictures down to the nth of perfection. Their interiors register excellence of detail down to the placing of a match tray. Why can't they use their heads regarding other things as well?"

WHO EVER HEARD OF KU KLUX KLANS IN THE MOUNTAINS!

After figuratively patting him on the back and telling him he was a nice, observing little boy, I did some thinking on my own hook. It is true, isn't it, that we often run up against boners of this kind?

For instance, in "The Thirteenth Commandment," with Ethel Clayton, two women absolutely inexperienced regarding business, with no one to guide them, no one to back them, no capital save a little money realized on the selling of some jewels, start a fashionable trousseau shop in New York and make a go of it. That just couldn't be done, you know—if the producers would only stop and use their heads a little, as suggested by the gentleman in brown.

What do you say we emulate the redoubtable B. L. T. and run a paragraph now and then called "Little Boners of Producers"? What special little boner has come to your attention?

The story is going the rounds that when in New York recently, Harold Lloyd stepped into one of the New York shops and asked to be shown a certain kind of overcoat.

"How much?" asked the movie man.

"Two hundred and fifty dollars," was the reply.

"Nothing doing! Take it away," said Mr. Lloyd firmly.

"Why, you can afford that," the salesman said, unwilling to lose the sale.

"Sure I can!" replied Mr. Lloyd, "but I'm darned if I'm that cold."

What do you know about this—Ben Turpin has written a sketch. And he had the nerve to call it "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes."

"Where are you going?" demanded Mr. Kerrigan of his director, Ernest C. Warde.

"Going out. I'm through with this picture; it's ridiculous and inconsistent!"

"Why, what's so wrong about the picture?" asked the handsome Mr. Kerrigan, getting just as ner-r-r-vous!

"Well," replied Mr. Warde, "a year is supposed to elapse between the first and second release, isn't it?"

"Yes," agreed Mr. Kerrigan.

"Well," said Director Warde, glumly, "the second reel of this story shows the family with the same servant it had in the first."

You know that pretty little Marguerite De La Motte? She was recently quite seriously injured in an automobile accident when a suburban electric train near Hollywood collided with the car in which she was riding with her father and her mother. It is thought that her mother will die. Her father, though badly injured, is expected to recover.

For a time Fatty Arbuckle will be missing from slapstick comedy ranks. He's been engaged to play the heavyweight sheriff in a Paramount production of "The Roundup." Macklyn Arbuckle starred in this when it was on the stage.

McVICKER'S.

Taylor and Francis:

"I'm greatly surprised to hear that you're married."

"Why should you be?"

"Because you and I were together all last summer at Atlantic City, and you never once spoke of your wife."

"No man ever mentions his wife when he's on a vacation."

"What kind of a looking woman is your wife?"

"Tall and skinny. I picked her out because she eats less."

"Why should a tall, skinny wife eat less?"

"Because a little goes a long way. It is my second matrimonial venture. The first time I married for love, and this time for money."

"Well, what advice are you prepared to give to your friends?"

"Don't marry—for love or money."

Ask Me! Ask Me!

F. S. R.: Your card from "somewhere in Chicago" made me vurr' happy. How could my New Year be otherwise than a good one when somebody, somewhere is wishing me so well? And I hope happiness and prosperity may come your way.

HELEN L. G.: You're wrong—not a single bit of artificial stimulus produced that line. We'll see what we can do to make the movie house managers see things as you do.

MARIE C.: Happy New Year to you. Thanks for your good wishes. You might write to the studio manager of one of the companies and see if they are needing some one in their scenario department. I'll be glad to send you a list of the various firms if you will mail me a stamped, addressed envelope. That was certainly an encouraging letter from Cohan & Harris.

M. R. H.: Glad to help you. I know of no one I could advise you to see, but if you care to send me a stamped, addressed envelope I'll tell you what to do with your story so that it will be in proper shape to send away.

MRS. J. J.: "Is Dorothy Dalton a native daughter of Illinois?" She was born in Chicago. Her picture has appeared several times quite recently.

B. C. D.: I think you must be wrong. You evidently do not see THE TRIBUNE every Sunday. You say you didn't see my answer to you and you also ask, "Why don't you ever have either of the Talmadge sisters' or Nazimova's or Douglas Fairbanks' picture in the Sunday rotogravure section?" Every single one of these pictures has appeared and a couple of them twice, I believe. Address Anita Stewart in care of First National, Tally Theater building, Los Angeles, Cal. Of course, I don't mind your writing to me. I'd mind if you didn't.

EUGENE O'BRIEN: The address of Miss Mae Tineé is care of THE TRIBUNE, Chicago. Does you want to write to the lady, Eugene? (Sure, I know from your handwriting that you're not the picture actor.)

MRS. B.: You're thinking of "Male and Female."

ALICEBRADYFAN: Miss Brady has been rather among those absent lately, hasn't she? Well, you'll probably see those dimples for which "ah, you sigheth," before you "dieth." Some poet, aren't you? I'll say you are!

MR. AND MRS. C. M. P.: With all my heart, thank you! The same to you.

JOHN P. L.: Thanks. It was nice of you to take the trouble to give me Mr. Frank Spearman's address. Here it is for those who wish to know it: Franklin and Fuller avenues, Hollywood, Cal. And I also want to thank Mrs. G. G. L. for giving me the same help.

MARGARET G.: Miss Pickford is not divorced yet—but it is said she has hopes.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

Opera in English Brings Out Queer Traits in Audience

By W. L. Hubbard

ONE of the interesting and illuminative sidelights on the initial presentations here of the Mackaye-De Koven folk opera "Rip Van Winkle," has been found in the attitude of a certain class of regular opera patrons. Their un-Americanism was never more clearly disclosed. With glee written all over their faces, and with the note of gladness ringing in their voices they gathered in groups in the foyers throughout the entr'actes and gloated over the unintelligibility of the Mackaye text as sung by certain members of the cast, and triumphed over what they deemed a proof conclusive that opera in English and opera by Americans are failures.

One man who occupies a position prominent in the musical activities of the city, was heard to declare with a positiveness that left no room for question or dissent apparently, that "Rip Van Winkle" was "an insult to American musical intelligence." And his little coterie wagged their heads approvingly and went off joyously disseminating the happy pronouncement.

They acted as though the management of the Chicago Opera company had outraged public decency and affronted every standard of art and of morals by even daring to offer an opera by Americans. And that it was not the masterpiece of the world seemed to warm the cockles of their art-loving hearts to the point of inflammation. Never had they had such a joy-laden evening!

And yet these same people are the ones who prate loudest of their Americanism, and who flock most ostentatiously to any and every call that is made for the protecting and furthering of the cause of American music and the American musician!

The attitude is interesting, for it shows how much has yet to be done not only with the managers of our operatic bodies in this country but with the public itself before the United States can find itself and come into its own operatically. Our managers will quickly give us opera in English and opera by Americans when once the public shows desire. For the managers are here to meet demand. But so long as hypocrisy, snobbery, and new-rich pretense continue to obtain, the fight will have to be waged.

How eager the great mass of the American public is for opera that can be understood and how widespread is the desire is shown by the letters received by this department of THE TRIBUNE. Letters from as far north as Minnesota and Dakota, as far west as the Pacific coast, as far east as New York and Boston, as far south as New Orleans come not only singly but in many, all voicing approval of the stand of THE TRIBUNE is taking concerning having our songs and our operas given to us in our own language.

The great music loving public of America—and it is a great public and it is a music loving one!—is awakening and awakening rapidly. It soon is going to demand its own. And the tiny circle whose sole claim to understanding of art and appreciation of music is based on hypocrisy and snobbishness will soon find itself swept aside or engulfed. And when that day comes how valiantly they will wave the flag of nationalism and cry aloud to the world: "Look at us! We done it!"

"Rip Van Winkle" is not the "great American grand opera" for which the world is supposed to be waiting, but for which in reality the world does not care a hang. It is not the "great American grand opera" for the reason that there is no such thing and never will be, any more than there is any "Great" French, Italian, German, or Russian grand opera. Such a work does not exist and never will. Nations develop their own schools of opera. In each school there are certain works which are finer and "greater" than others, but the great grand opera never has appeared. All is a question of comparison, and the standards keep ever shifting and ever moving onward.

"Rip Van Winkle" is an earnest, sincere attempt to give to the American stage a folk opera that is American in subject and in musical manner. Mr. Mackaye has fashioned a libretto built on legend which is admirable in its fantasy, its human appeal and its blend of romance, imagination and childlikeness. His text as medium for singing is not always ideal, but the writing of English that is fitted for musical setting, and is at the same time beautiful, expressive, and powerful is an art undeveloped in this country. It is an art yet to be mastered but one which will be mastered as soon as there is chance for the practicing of it.

Mr. Mackaye has made a good beginning, and Mr. De Koven has provided a score which is frankly melodious as such a score should be and has given us music that is heard with pleasure and which points the way which he and others are to take if folk opera is to be developed.

As for the unintelligibility of the text as sung by the members of the cast, let it be admitted at once that a great deal of it could not be understood. But this fact in nowise proves that English cannot be sung so that it can be understood. Countless singers on the concert stage, on the light opera stage, and in church sing our idiom and make it not alone beautiful but so that every syllable is intelligible.

The entire question is merely that of knowing how. Our grand opera singers have devoted months and years to perfecting their diction in French, in Italian, and in German, but have never devoted a day to the mastering of English in song. Suddenly ten of them, to say nothing of the men and women in the chorus, are asked to sing in a language which they never have studied. Six of the ten are French or Russian, with scarcely even a speaking knowledge of English. The other four are youngsters in operatic work, and with no one ready to help them, or when help was offered, as it was by one of the older singers, not ready to accept help since it was a "lowering" of their artistic "greatness" to admit that they could learn anything from any one else.

The French singers were compelled to study in order to memorize even the words. The result was that they, of course, were the ones whose English could best be understood. The four Americans sang "as they talked," and the result was indefiniteness and uncertainty of diction as well as tonal weakness and vocal inefficiency. But all that is needed for English to be as clear and as intelligible on the operatic stage as is French or Italian is to have the singer study it and properly prepare it.

Jean De Reszke studied Tristan for years in German before he would sing it in public. Lillian Nordica, although she had sung Elsa repeatedly in German, devoted an entire summer of daylong, intense study before she sang the rôle at Bayreuth. Lilli Lehmann worked word by word and phrase by phrase on the text of each rôle before she deemed it ready for public presentation. Marcella Sembrich was tireless in her studying of diction alone, in preparing her song recital programs, and this after she left the operatic stage acclaimed one of the supreme mistresses of her art.

Work is what is needed in order to make English intelligible on the operatic stage, and as soon as the demand is there for perfect English by our opera singers it will be met. We pay our imported artists many times more in salary than they command anywhere else in the world. Yet they give us nothing in our own language. Insist upon their singing us English as faultlessly as they do their foreign tongues and they will do it.

Mr. Baklanoff sang the best English heard in "Rip" the opening night—he and Mr. Dufranne. If these two artists accustomed to foreign idiom in speech and in song can give us an English that is comprehensible, even though it be still marred by accent, only further need and further opportunity are required to have them and all their associates sing English faultlessly for us. They work and are ready to work to accomplish this.

Our American singers must not lag behind. And greater care and more intense study is required for the American to master English for song than is required for the foreigner. The slipshodness of his speech habits has to be overcome and corrected.

Another factor that enters into our hearing of English is also the fact that the average opera patron is not schooled in listening to words. Accustomed as he has been for years to hearing a language which meant nothing or little to him, he has trained himself to shut his ears to all save tone when watching an operatic performance. The words can mean nothing to him, therefore pay no attention to them! Years of this kind of listening have resulted in a kind of atrophy of his ear drum where opera is concerned, and he cannot understand words.

Suddenly English is offered him. He tries to hear the words, but has lost his skill in so doing. Or if he does hear them the sensation is so novel that it disturbs and he feels that something is wrong with his opera enjoyment. We as listeners as well as the singers as performers need education—we as comprehenders of the words when they are sung to us, they as accurate singers of the words.

As to the English text that shall be used, that is a subject in itself. There is not space here, but the discussing of it another time will not be neglected.

Last Monday afternoon, in the Blackstone theater, there was heard, for the first time in Chicago, a string quartet which bids fair to make honored and enviable place for itself. It is called the Great Lakes string quartet, and is composed of young men who organized when in the navy and since leaving the service are devoting themselves to public playing. Be it confessed that their concert on Monday was approached with a feeling akin to reluctance, for mediocre string quartet playing is about as irritating form of entertainment as can be imagined—irritating for all save the four people taking part in it. But Messrs. Herman Felber, Carl Fasshauer, Robert Dolejsi, and Walter Brauer require no apologies. They play with unmistakable pleasure to themselves, and they give unmistakable pleasure to those who hear them.

I expected to listen to one movement of the Mozart C major quartet, with which the program commenced. I remained for the entire program. The tonal quality of their playing is beautiful, being uncommonly soft and pure, yet not lacking in power, incisiveness, and brilliancy when these are desirable. The average tonal quality is, however, exceptionally ingratiating, and in itself makes listening a pleasure.

The Mozart was played with lovely tone and delightful sincerity and simplicity, the Tschaikowsky andante cantabile, the Boccherini minuet, and a Svendsen allegro were beautifully given, and the Debussy G minor showed that the modern French is wholly within the grasp, technically and musically, of the four players. All in all, a quartet which is now exceptional and which should give us much of true value in the days to be.

Josef Lhevinne, the Russian pianist, in his recital to be given in Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30, will present a program including the Bach-d'Albert Prelude and Fugue in D Major; Beethoven's Sonata, Opus 109; the Saint-Saens arrangement of Beethoven's Chorus of Dervishes; Schumann's Etudes Symphoniques; Chopin's Barcarolle, the same composer's Polonaise in F Sharp Minor; the Glinka-Balakireff "L'Alouette"; Dohnanyi's Etude-Caprice (which will come to its first American performance), and Balakireff's "Islamey" (Fantasie Orientale).

The next of the Kinsolving Musical Mornings in the Blackstone hotel is listed for next Tuesday at 11. The program will enlist the services of John Powell, our American pianist, and Riccardo Stracciari, the Italian baritone. Mr. Powell will play the Chopin C sharp minor Scherzo, his own "Poeme Erotique" and "Banjo Picker," and a Liszt Tarantella. Mr. Stracciari's selections include the "Oh casto fior" aria from Massenet's "King of La

ART

Nature Studies Shown by Wild Flower Society

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE second annual loan exhibit of nature studies collected by members and friends of the Wild Flower Preservation Society of America opened last Tuesday afternoon in the east galleries of the Art Institute. To all those who are concerned with the beauty and welfare of the forest preserve, there will be found here much of serious interest. Though one admits without hesitation that flowers and plants bring more pleasure when possessed of life, color, and fragrance, yet these dried specimens preserve sufficient beauty to charm the casual visitor.

One is introduced to the exhibit by the collection of sedges, a most unromantic name for a really rather poetic grass, made by Abigail Butler and Harriet W. Cory, and installed on the first wall of the gallery. Across the way are hung ferns, beautifully arranged, collected by Abigail Butler. Beyond are bird and plant studies made by W. D. Richardson; of these the pictures that deal with the great horned owl family are of peculiar interest. Especially is the photograph of two young owls peering from their nest in the heart of a tree trunk realistic and quaintly fascinating.

Perhaps the one single feature that demands the cordial attention of every one is found in the group of "Nature's Necklaces" made and shown by Bertha E. Jaques. These are lovely. The chains are made from the seeds of various plants strung as beads are strung. There are necklaces of sunflower seeds, of viburnum, Job's tears (an African plant) of four o'clocks, wild cranberry, China berry seeds, Jerusalem cherries—a wonderful red—olive seeds from Chile, black adder, and even our homely acorn.

From this same artist is the exhibit of sport prints of mushrooms, delicate, dainty traceries, and the blue prints of plant life which hang beside the water color sketches of flowers made by Mrs. Vernon Watson. The oak leaves of the Chicago region, given by Mrs. Bertram Rosenstone, are striking. The flower and dune studies contributed by W. A. Ball and the plant studies by Mrs. George B. Ward are of value. The photographs by Mr. Ball work their greatest service undoubtedly in the emphasis they lay on the natural beauties of the sand country and the need of their preservation. They prove the justness of the prohibition against picking wild flowers in the forest.

A free illustrated talk for school children will be given in Fullerton hall each Saturday afternoon of the exhibit. A moving picture of plant life will be shown. Next Saturday Mrs. W. A. Moffatt will speak on "Spiders" for the entertainment of the children.

In an adjoining gallery to that which is given up to the Wild Flower Preservation society's exhibit, there are hung drawings by Normal-Bel Geddes for the stage settings of the opera "La Nave" and for the "Ballet Boudour." The figures are fantastic, a bit crude, but effective. As much cannot be said for the few settings shown. In fact, there are almost too few in number to demand serious consideration. They need, too, an explanation, or explanations—footnotes hinting their why and wherefor. Even as decorative fancies to be created at a later period, they do not satisfy.

There opened last week in the galleries of the Arts club an exhibit of Cuban, Mexican, and Indian paintings and drawings by Randall Davey, and tempora paintings, Mexican in character by Adolfo Best-Maugard. The most pretentious of the two groups is that shown by Mr. Davey.

Unforunately I met the artist. Unfortunately, because I have found that meeting the men whose pictures I am to criticize robs me of nearly all the pleasure I usually get out of exhibitions. I like to roll the pictures, figuratively, under my own tongue. I like to know what I myself think about them. And for some obscure reason difficult to define, the paintings lose their sense of identity with me when the artist's personality intrudes. This is not always, but practically always, the case. It is the case with these pictures by Randall Davey.

There remains to me from my view of the work an impression of color, of rough drawing, of possibly a trifle wooden figures, and the word of the painter who "paints as he pleases, and cares not whether or no it pleases you." In some instances the painting does not please me, in others it does. The two pictures which stand out from the rest are "Storm, Havana," and "Street in Havana." In the first one feels the might and dread force of the tempest. There are black, thunderous clouds and storm tossed trees, and through the threatening atmosphere overcharged with Thor's anger even the bright colored houses glower. In the second is warmth, sunshine, the languid soul of the tropics and peace.

Of the figure pieces possibly the most striking, at all events the most effective, is the "Buffalo Dancer." On the wall opposite, the "Spanish Dancer" makes a delightful contrast. "Annie," a portrait of a little girl, is charming.

An exhibition ot prints by Ernest Williams of Los Angeles is on view at the Chicago Camera club. The exhibit is valuable inasmuch as it shows the ability of a man to swing from th lowest tone to the highest in photography. And it is also valuable because it exemplifies the danger that threatens any photographer who becomes possessed of the spirit of retouching. In nearly every print the brush and retouching tools have been made too much use of. The pictures have been despoiled of character.

The "Allegro," a study of a young girl delightfully posed, is without doubt the most artistic print shown. The "Spirit of Light" is rather nice. "Desert Sentinels" "The Mission," "Lonely as Ruin," "Saplings," "Haunt of the Goblins," and the "Stately Eucalypti" are among the best in the exhibit, and the best almost in the order given.

The falsity of overreaching for effect is clearly evinced in "Sunlit Steps," so white is the light, so misty, silvery the haze that sunshine is the farthest thing from the mind of the one who looks upon it. There are no shadows, no strong lights, no blacks, no definite points of concentration. It is a picture of a square fogged with mist. And it is called "Sunlit Steps." Possibly it is Los Angeles sunlight.

But while I am on this subject, I should like to say that the members of the Chicago Camera club have given many more successful exhibits, which included only their own work. This is not said to belittle outside artists, but is said with a hope that the men who contribute from outside will contribute their best efforts so that the scale of pictures shown may not be lowered.

At the Hamilton club is now an exhibition of paintings of scenes in the forest preserve with many of which we are already familiar. Among the landscapes are those by Oliver Dennett Grover, William Clusmanh, Frank C. Peyraud, Carl Krafft, Alfred Juergens, Alfred Jansson, Frank V. Dudley, Enoch Vognild, Paul Bartlett, George A. Aldrich, Edgar Cameron, Wilson Irvine, Karl Buehr, and Charles Dahlgreen. There are other glimpses of the beauties to be found in the preserve and adjacent country by Charles Francis Browne, George D. Otis, Frederick M. Grant, Anna L. Stacey, John F. Stacey, and James Topping.

The Opera; Concerts and Recitals

hore," the "Largo al factotum" from "Barber of Seville," and two groups of Italian songs.

Maggie Teyte, the English soprano, who is well known to Chicagoans through her appearances here in opera, will be heard for the first time as soloist with the Chicago orchestra next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening in Orchestra hall. She will sing the "Voi che sapete" from "Marriage of Figaro," the "Depuis le jour" from "Louise," Duparc's "Invitation au voyage," and Chausson's "Le temps de lilas." An orchestral novelty on the program will be Charles Tomlinson Griffes' symphonic poem, "The Pleasure Dome of Kubla Khan" after the poem of Coleridge. The other instrumental selections are the Overture to "Marriage of Figaro," D'Indy's second Symphony, and excerpts from Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust."

Madeleine Brard, a young French pianist, who has claimed no slight public and critical attention and been the recipient of a large measure of praise since her arrival in the United States, will be heard for the first time in Chicago tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Blackstone theater in a concert given under the auspices of the Lake View Musical society, but open to public as well as members. Associated with Miss Brard on the program will be Arthur Kraft, tenor, and Isaac Van Grove, accompanist.

Frederik Frederiksen, violinist, and Gordon Campbell, pianist, will give the next program in the Carl Kinsey series in the Ziegfeld theater next Wednesday morning at 11. They will play three Sonatas for violin and piano—works by John Alden Carpenter, John Ireland and Emil Sjogren. The Sjogren Sonata will on this occasion have its first performance in Chicago.

Sarah Lessick, soprano, will make her professional debut next Wednesday evening in recital in Kimball hall. She has arranged a program which includes the "He is good, he is kind" from Massenet's "Herodiade," and songs ranging from the old Italian through the French and Russian to the present day American.

The Chicago orchestra will be heard in the third of its series of children's concerts in Orchestra hall at 4 o'clock next Thursday afternoon. Interesting is the statement of the management that all seats for this concert were sold on mail orders with the exception of a few gallery tickets. The program for Thursday's concert includes the Wedding March from Mendelssohn's music to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the Andante from Beethoven's Symphony No. 5, the Berceuse from Godard's "Jocelyn" (the violoncello obbligato of which will be played by Joseph Malkin), and three selections, "Puss in Boots," "The White Cat," and Waltz, from Tschaikowsky's Ballet Suite "The Thorn Rose."

Eric Delamarter has resumed his weekly organ recitals on Thursday evenings in the Fourth Presbyterian church.

A faculty concert of the Chicago College of Music is listed for next Tuesday evening in Kimball hall. The program enlists the services of Henry Selinger, violinist; Sol Heller, baritone, and Abe L. Shynmon, pianist.

IF a new motor comes out with a diamond-studded cam-shaft, Vanity Fair refers carelessly to the luxurious new cars.

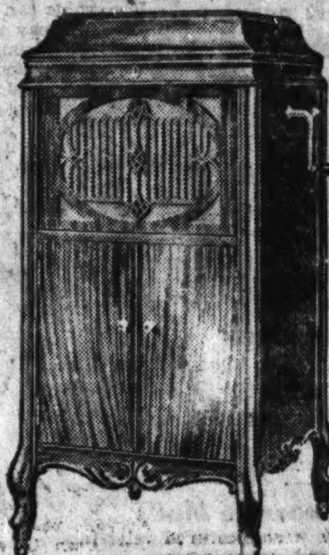
PHONOGRAPHS AND RECORDS



Method of Reproduction

THE story of the Brunswick Method of Reproduction is, to Music Lovers, the sweetest story ever told. For, it is the story of True Music. That method is the right application of musical and acoustical laws and accomplished by means of the Ultona and the Tone Amplifier.

The ULTONA—plays all records truer, finer, sweeter. It is not a makeshift contrivance but involves a genuine principle of sound. A slight turn of the hand presents the right needle, diaphragm and weight for playing any record.

The TONE AMPLIFIER—is an oval shaped vibrant tone chamber. Like the sounding board of a fine piano or violin, it is made entirely of wood and free from metal. Thus it gives the requisite tonal volume and eliminates all harsh, thin, metallic sounds. It meets all advanced acoustical and musical laws.

MOTORDOM

Ignition System Should Be Kept Up to Mark Now

Troubles More Frequent During Cold Weather Than in Summer.

BY HIGH SPEED.

WHILE the modern ignition system of either of the two popular types, battery and magneto, are so generally reliable that ignition trouble is almost a rarity, still, as most car owners will testify, there are occasions when the old evil shows its head, and when it does come —good night.

Moreover, ignition troubles are to a certain extent seasonal. By that I mean that while ignition trouble is not like hard starting, exclusively a product of winter, nevertheless, ignition troubles are more frequent in cold or wet weather than in summer, and so we say that this type of mishap has a somewhat seasonal character.

No matter whether the ignition system is magneto or battery, if the car is to enjoy satisfactory and efficient ignition depends on unhampered generation of current, correct interruption of the primary circuit, the free flow of current to the spark plugs, and plugs properly adjusted to furnish a hot spark that will cause efficient combustion.

In either system we must be sure that all these steps are properly taken care of, although naturally there will be some difference in the attention needed to produce correct functioning in the magneto and the battery.

We shall take up the battery system first, and here naturally the prime care must be to keep the battery properly charged and the cells filled with distilled water. The connections must all be kept clean and bright, for corrosion may be almost as bad as a missing connection. The wires from the battery to the ignition device must always be properly insulated; a broken intermittent contact with some of the metal work will cause an exaggerated case of misfiring.

The interrupter points in the ignition device must be separated by approximately .015 of an inch when they are fully opened. Also these points must always be kept clean and level. This may be done by the use of a bit of cuttlefish paper, finer than the finest sandpaper, and the trueing up may be done with a jeweler's file. When these points are allowed to become gummy, dirty, too far apart, uneven, or worn misfiring will be the result.

It is also vitally necessary to keep clean both the distributer arm, which passes the spark to the segments, and these latter.

The high tension wires which connect the distributer with the spark plugs must always make a good contact at both ends and must always be perfectly insulated. The spark plugs must be in condition to function properly, not cracked, nor with dirty points, nor with points too far apart or too close together.

Now we come to applying what we have learned to the running down and elimination of ignition troubles when they actually develop. One peculiarity of ignition trouble is that it usually develops in one particular cylinder and sticks to that one location, but this is not always so and must not be laid down as an absolute rule, though it may be taken as a fair test to begin on.

In trying to run down ignition trouble the first step to take is to make sure that a spark is occurring at the plug. To do this remove the plug from the cylinder and with the cable still attached lay the plug on top of the cylinder.

Next crank the engine by hand, the switch being turned to battery. If the plug fires well obviously the search must continue. If the spark is weak is is pretty certain that it is not firing at all under compression. If there is doubt as to which plug is at fault the familiar method of shorting the plug with a hammer or screw driver is a useful aid. With the engine running short circuit the plug by means of the hammer head or other metal tool, laying the latter against the top of the spark plug and the cylinder. If there is no change in the firing of the engine, as indicated by the explosions, then you have found the bad cylinder.

In engines that have separate inlet and exhaust pipes for each cylinder there is an easier way still. Simply put a few drops of water on each exhaust pipe while the engine is in operation. The exhaust pipe of the missing cylinder will be cool, a fact quickly demonstrated by the absence of steam.

Having located the missing cylinder the search now proceeds to find the cause. The first thing to do is to examine the plug, and next trace back the wiring to the ignition device. If a plug is suspected exchange it with another plug known to be firing properly.

Gum or dirt found on the interrupter points should next be removed with a drop of kerosene. If the points are uneven dress them down with a fine file. If they are too wide or too close adjust them.

In four unit coil ignition any maladjustment of the coil interrupters is likely to produce misfiring. In magneto ignition the interrupter mechanism is practically the same as in the battery and the same instructions apply. The magneto system, however, must be watched for weakened magnets and when this condition occurs the magneto must be remagnetized. Weak magnets will cause misfiring, particularly at low speeds.

Coil connections should be watched, in fact the prevalent ignition trouble is due to loose or dirty connections.

In cold or even rainy weather our present grades of fuel become so heavy that it is difficult enough to fire them even under the most favorable circumstances. If the ignition system is not functioning at full efficiency, delivering a hot spark correctly timed, the trouble begins at once.

It is for this reason that we have said that ignition trouble is somewhat seasonal and this is why extra care should be exercised to keep the ignition system right up to the mark in every way during the cold season.

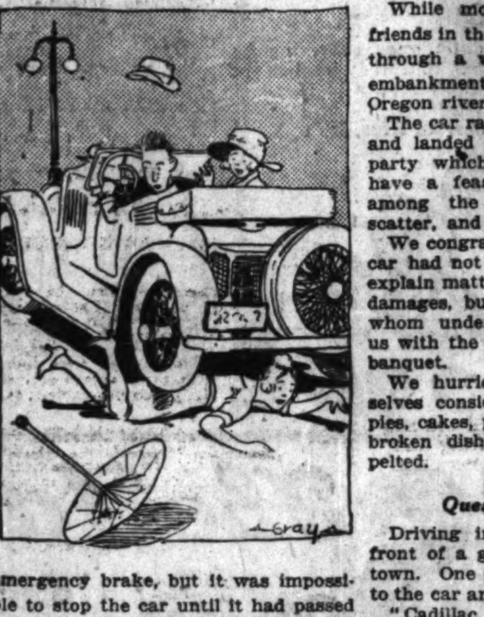
My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. Make a copy and keep it if you wish to preserve what you have written.

Obeyed Warning.

While motoring in the city I had just turned a corner, when two women, one carrying a parasol, walked almost directly in front of my machine.

The woman with the parasol threw it aside and dropped down on the roadway, while the other woman rushed to the sidewalk. We put on the emergency brake, but it was impossible to stop the car until it had passed over the woman who was lying in the road.



We got out and assisted her to her feet. She was hysterical, her hair was down and her clothing covered with dirt. She explained that when she saw our car all she could think of was a warning given by her husband, who told her: "Whenever you think you are going to be run over by a car, lay down in the road, and the chances are the car will pass over without injuring you."

This proved to be true, but she did not think of stepping out of the way, which she had ample time to do, and which the other woman did.

F. R.

Considerable Pelting.

While motoring with a party of friends in the far west our car crashed through a wooden railing on a high embankment along a drive near the Oregon river.

The car ran fifty feet down the bank and landed in the midst of a picnic party which was just beginning to have a feast. The big car dashed among the picnickers, made them scatter, and demolished the spread.

We congratulated ourselves that the car had not turned over and tried to explain matters, offering to pay for all damages, but the picnickers, none of whom understood English, assaulted us with the mangled remains of their banquet.

We hurried away and found ourselves considerably disfigured by the pies, cakes, pickles, jelly, chicken, and broken dishes with which we were pelted.

E. H.

Questioned Capacity.

Driving in Kansas we stopped in front of a garage in a small country town. One curious farmer walked up to the car and read on the radiator:

"Cadillac Eight."

Our car is a five passenger one, and when the man had looked inside he frowned and said:

"I don't see how you could ever pack eight in there."

G. J. M.

Chicken Trap.

While driving along a fine country road I ran into a flock of chickens. The owner claimed the price of two chickens for one I had killed, but I had to pay. When I arrived home I washed the car. As I was doing this I heard a peculiar noise. Imagine my joy when I found a fine chicken caught by a leg under the gasoline tank. I ate the chicken, as I had paid for it.

Use Registration Funds in Repairs as in New Paving

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 10.—"Miles of road which have much to do with the high cost of living may become untravelable in many states unless the tendency to divert automobile registration money to floating state bond issues is quickly arrested," asserted Chairman George C. Diehl of the A. A. A. good roads board, who today at A. A. A. national headquarters discussed the matter with highways advocates from various sections of the country.

"This is one of the most serious matters confronting farseeing advocates of highways progress," said Mr. Diehl, who has been making a survey of 1920 state road programs. "A fundamental in taxation is that it should be spread according to benefits, and it is ridiculous to say that motorists receive all avantages which accrue from improved highways. When the motorists consent to pay a large share of the maintenance charges that is as far as they should acquiesce in sharing present day road expenses. Keep it in mind that the motorist is also a citizen who pays the general taxes now exacted nationally and in the several states. This picking him out for supertaxation in connection with his vehicle ownership has reached the limit of acceptance and should be stoutly resisted.

"Short cuts lacking in true economic principles are always ferreted out by the financial expert, and this abuse of the motorist's generosity—for that is exactly what it is—is being shorn of its subterfuges. In his acceptance of a discriminatory tax, the car owner is entitled to an honest run for his money. This he doesn't get when the registration funds are used for construction and not for maintenance, a method which is not put forward in states that are willing to play fair in the premises.

"After an investigation of road building activities in certain states which are engaged in considering various forms of financing their highways building, I am more than ever convinced that the original investment in the road itself should only come from direct taxation or appropriations from general funds, or, when justified, through the issuing of short term serial bonds.

"Of course, those great highways into which numerous other roads discharge their streams of traffic must be exceedingly well built and cost a great deal more money than was the case years ago. But to divert goodly sums from the $50,000,000 which the motorists now pay throughout the country in yearly registration taxes for the construction of these main arteries is the poorest kind of judgment. There isn't a man, woman, or child in any community who doesn't benefit from improved highways, and those who profit from the increase in property values should pay proportionately.

"What causes me to utter this protest is that certain states just awakened to road building necessities are following the easiest way of obtaining popular support for legislation by placing the entire burden on the shoulders of the motor vehicle owner, who has got to the parting of the ways, and, in my humble opinion, is about to refuse longer to be the goat. However, my greatest objection to the proposition is on the ground that money which should be for maintenance is sidetracked and then no provision is substituted whereby the many miles of road which connect up outlying territory with a nearby market are neglected to the extent of adding thousands of dollars to transportation of food products."

Improved Roads Take Away Bars from Long Trips

Lengthy Motor Tours No Longer Hazardous, Says Bement.

BY A. F. BEMENT.
[Vice President the Lincoln Highway Association.]

LONG distance motor travel is no longer a novelty in this country; it is becoming the rule. A motor trip of 2,000 miles no longer creates comment.

Out of the way spots inaccessible by rail, once lonely trails whose heaviest traffic not long since was the occasional passage of the prospector with his ambling burro or the native in his swaying buckboard, have this season swarmed with tourists from every section of the union.

The average American of these days turns naturally to his motor car when planning his vacation trip, and it is even becoming more frequently the rule for business men to plan and make lengthy business trips by motor on as exact a schedule as rail connections would allow—this particularly in the east.

The volume of tourist traffic in all parts of the country is very difficult to estimate, but traffic on the Lincoln highway, where it is possible to obtain at many points very accurate statistics as to its volume, may be considered as a more or less accurate measure of the traffic on all of our through routes. Both passenger and freight, this travel is increasing with tremendous strides.

From 1913 until 1916 traffic volume on the Lincoln way, as indicated by careful count at points all across the country, never failed to double each year. In 1917 and 1918, due to the war, passenger travel by motor car was greatly curtailed and the travel of these two years closely approximated the volume of 1916, while the motor truck travel on the route, particularly in the east, where it was used as a federal transport route, increased tremendously.

During 1919 reports from all along the line and the volume of inquiries which has been received at the national headquarters of the Lincoln Highway association in Detroit indicate another doubling of the total traffic volume.

As an instance of the density of traffic volume on the Lincoln highway in the east, a careful traffic census made at the Lincoln highway bridge over the Passaic river west of Jersey City by county officials showed the passage of 11,000 vehicles in a period of fifteen hours on June 22 last. Of these 11,000 vehicles, 390 were motor trucks and the balance passenger cars. This volume of travel is a good indication as to why the state of New Jersey is reconstructing the Lincoln highway of the heaviest possible concrete at a cost close to $65,000 a mile.

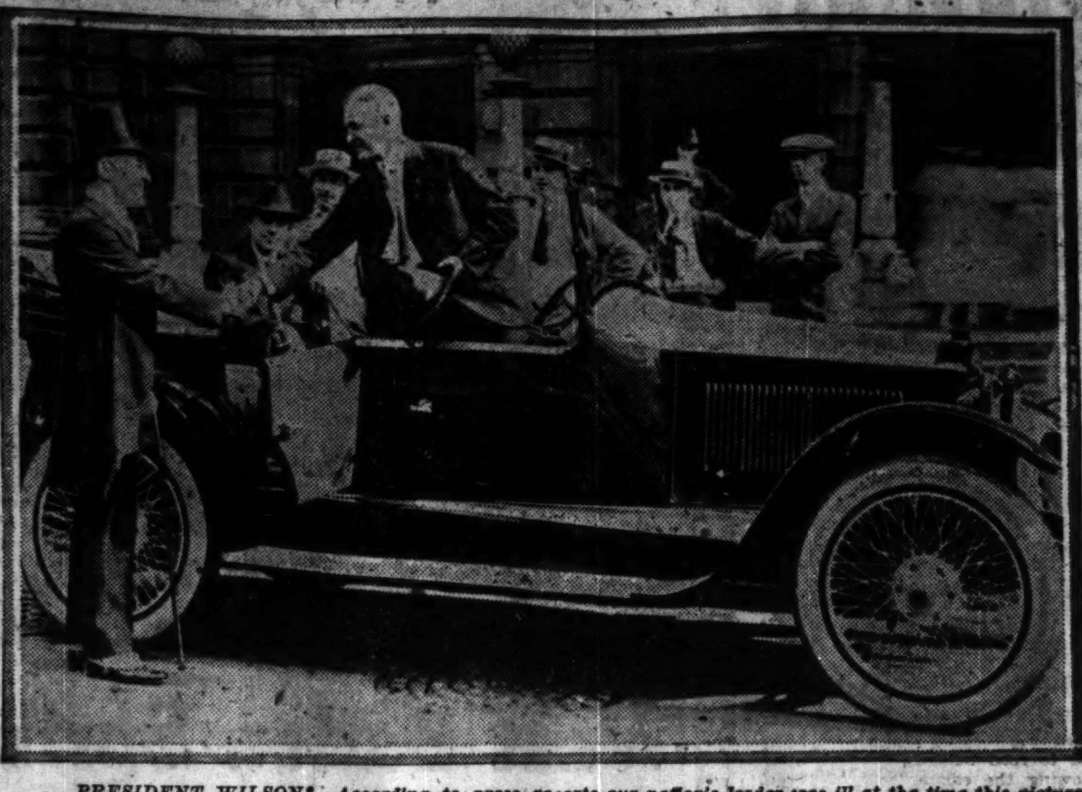
It is difficult at most points to sift out through travel from the local or interstate traffic, but the reports made from isolated desert ranches in the far west, where every car passing must stop for food, water, or supplies, and where records are taken indicating the state from which each car originates, can be taken as fairly accurate indications of the volume of long distance travel.

Hamilton Orr, Lincoln highway consul at Orr's ranch, near the edge of the desert in western Tooele county, Utah, on the Lincoln highway between Fisher pass and the Goodyear section, reports that 230 cars passed his ranch during May, 380 during June, 565 during July, and 911 during August. The vast majority of this travel originated from points east of Utah or west of Nevada and was headed for the Atlantic or Pacific coast. Five years ago twenty or twenty-five cars a month in the best seasons would have been unusual travel in this section, but continuous connecting highway improvement on America's first transcontinental road permits an outlet for the average American's desire for travel and exploration, and is accountable for the tremendous increase in coast to coast driving.

While estimates on this subject are more in the nature of guesses, information available indicates that between 5,000 and 10,000 motor cars, carrying between 25,000 and 50,000 persons, made trips of 1,500 miles or more on the Lincoln highway this season.

Improvements on the Lincoln highway this year, either already completed or now under way and to be finished this season, will cost approximately $[illegible], or practically as much as the total amount of improvement accomplished on the route during the five years ended Jan. 1, 1919.

Construction has been under way in nearly all of the counties traversed by the great road during this season, and the end of next year will find a permanently surfaced highway from the Hudson river to the Mississippi. Improvements in Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah, and Nevada will mean a greatly improved route next season. The rough spots in the west, however, can never be entirely eliminated until the federal government extends needed aid to these sparsely populated states with vast areas and meager funds for highway improvement.



PRESIDENT WILSON? According to press reports our nation's leader was ill at the time this picture was taken, but it is generally believed that the camera does not lie, and the picture shows M. D. Shawkey of the Shawkey Motor company, distributors of the Liberty Six in Pittsburgh, in the middle of a handshaking act with some one who looks decidedly like—well, use your own imagination. But it isn't Woodrow after all. No, it's R. C. Falkner of San Francisco, an actor friend of Mr. Shawkey, who was playing in one of the Pittsburgh theaters at the time and who is an exact double of the president. During the week Shawkey and Falkner drove up to the P. A. A. clubhouse, and for a time Shawkey had his friends in a quandary. First Falkner was on the receiving end of a handshake line and then was buried under an avalanche of questions pertaining to the league of nations, the fourteen points, etc. When the visitor was inroduced as R. C. Falkner of San Francisco Shawkey was forced to make a quick getaway in order to preserve a whole skin.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

My car jumps out of gear when driving on the level. Will you please explain the cause of this? Tell me how to remedy this. Also, how can I line up the drive shaft and the wheel?
R. B. B., Chicago.

The gear jumps out of mesh because the gears are not fully meshed, or the shifter rod does not engage far enough, or the shifter lever is bent. The propeller shaft is fitted with a universal and you don't have to line it up. If you mean a rear axle drive shaft, then the only way you have of testing is to run a known straight bar through the whole axle housing and taking measurements at the ends and center with the ground. To line up front wheels see that the tops of the wheels are about one-half inch wider apart than the bottoms and the fronts one-half inch closer together than the rears. The adjustment may be made by means of the tie rod.

I had my cylinders reground and new pistons and rings put in. I also put on a new timer, new wires, and new platinums on the coils. Since having this done I have not been able to get the amount of power I should out of the three and four cylinders. I took off the head of the engine and I found that in running the rings in three and four scored. When riding at high speed I do not notice any "yank," but at low speed (on high) there is a "yank." Do you think the scoring is what is making the "yank"? Is there any way of overcoming this except to have the cylinders ground again? The cylinders are scored quite a little and the "yank" comes regular with the firing of three and four cylinders. The cylinders were ground out to .025 oversize. If grinding is the remedy would it be practical to regrind above .025?
J. M. S., Champaign, Ill.

Badly scored cylinders cause excessive leaking of mixture, and it is possible that misfiring sets in, hence the "yank." Better have the cylinders rebored, but not any more than necessary to reduce the scoring. Better have the mechanic advise you if the scoring can be removed with a few thousandths overbore.

I have just bought a new car and want to know how the starter turns the motor over. Must I let go of the starter pedal quickly or what harm will be done if the pedal is pressed longer?
S. D., Chicago.

The starting motor is simply an electric motor with a quick acting screw thread on its armature shaft. Over this threaded portion fits a gear. This gear is threaded on the inside, so that it can progress along the screw. When the motor turns over the gear is forced along the screw and into mesh with teeth on the flywheel. Just as soon as the engine starts the gear is automatically kicked out of engagement. If you keep your foot on the starter pedal too long you are likely to break the starting motor pinion, or gear, or at least cause it to jam.

Will you please let me know how to set the valves and time the Bosch magneto on my Everitt 4-30 touring car?
W. T., Huntington, Ind.

In setting the magneto get the breaker box in retard position and move the armature shaft around until the breaker points are just about to separate. See that this condition exists when the distributor arm is on No. 1 segment. This sets the magneto so that it will send a spark to No. 1 cylinder. The valves of No. 1 cylinder should be closed and the piston on top dead center, or a small fraction, say one-quarter to one-half inch after center. The magneto slipped into place will be in time. I am not in possession of the exact valve timing figures. If you cannot read the marks on the flywheel set the intake to open about five degrees after top dead center and the exhaust to open about .445 degrees before bottom center.

DEPENDABLE USED CARS

TRANSPORTATION—That is the Packard idea of an automobile. Good cars are known quantities, capable of delivering so much work. Their worth to you depends upon how many undelivered miles of comfortable transportation they contain. Any car exchanged at the Packard showrooms is rated according to this surplus. Then it is rebuilt (not overhauled) to guarantee you will get it. Early buyers have a choice of 50 known values. Packards among them, attractively priced, are the most economical cars to be had for the money. Here are four representative values:

Packard 2-35 Twin Six enclosed car. Guaranteed. The body is brand new, generously proportioned 7-passenger, upholstered in gray cloth. Handsomely painted dark blue; is equipped with new cord tires and fitted with every appointment. Ready now. Price $5200.

1917 Marmon 34 Limousine. 7-passenger. Presents the appearance of new. A smart, low-hung, up-to-the minute enclosed vehicle. Ready now. Price $3500.

1918 Winton Berlin Limousine, 7-passenger. Elegantly upholstered in velour and refinished in a rich dark green. Mechanically excellent. A machine that will suit the most discriminating. Ready now. Price $3750.

1919 Paige Limousine 7-passenger, having had very little mileage. Upholstered in gray cloth. Complete equipment including spare tire. Practically a new car at the reduced price of $2750. Ready now. Price $2750.

The ONE-MAN TRACTOR For EVERY PURPOSE

It Really Replaces Horses and Mules

THE INDIANA ALL-ROUND TRACTOR
The World's Tractor

HERE is a one-man single unit tractor that every farmer can use not just 25 or 30 days a year but as many days as he now uses his mules or horses for field work. It costs about the same to buy as four large mules or horses and does more work than they do.

It plows with disc or moldboard and does as much work as two good teams And it cultivates row crops, pulls harrows, discs, drills, rollers, seeders, planters, potato diggers, orchard tools—every implement you now have on your farm. It uses the animal implements you already have, excepting plows, and no expensive hitches are required. No need to spend hundreds of dollars for new tools.

The driver rides on the implement, does all the work himself—you save the wages of one man.

The Indiana weighs no more than a farm team. That's why there is no waste fuel used to drag it around, and no waste material in its construction.

The Indiana does a year's work of four mules or horses at a gasoline and oil cost only a third as great as the cost of feeding four mules or horses for a year. It does light belt work economically.

Farmers who have big four-wheeled tractors are buying the Indiana to cultivate and work their row crops and to plow, prepare the seed bed and put in the crop when the ground is too wet to use a heavy tractor.

Farmers: Write us for book of pictures made from photographs showing the Indiana Tractor actually doing the work of mules and horses.

Here's the Biggest Tractor Proposition Ever Offered to a Dealer!

EVERY farmer is a prospect for this tractor—whether he now operates a tractor or not—because this tractor will do a great variety of work. Thousands of farmers who hesitate to buy a tractor because they don't want to junk or sell the tools they have are live prospects.

The INDIANA SILO is the greatest selling Silo in the world. More farmers like it and buy it than any other. There are now 75,000 in use. They know its quality and durability and they find the price is right.

Terms so liberal an Indiana Silo will almost pay for itself before the buyer has to pay for it. Special early buyers' proposition. We want local distributors for the Indiana Silo where we are not now represented.

Here is a tractor that you can sell as really replacing animals—saving its cost every little while—and doing all the field work the farmer has to do—not to mention the belt work no team can do.

Live energetic dealers who insist on making good money for themselves are wanted everywhere. Exclusive selling rights given. Inquiries from a big advertising campaign referred to you. Strong printed matter mailed to your prospects.

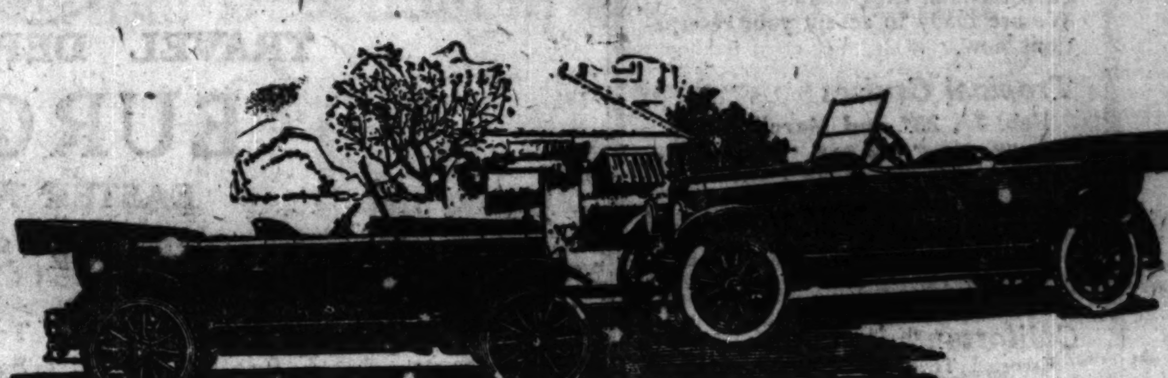
ESSEX MOTOR CARS



How to Guarantee Spring Delivery of Hudson and Essex Open Models

No Large Money Outlay Required. Make Your Choice Now. We Will Store It For You and Insure You Against Disappointment

In the light of the year just closed, it is not conjecture to assert that a shortage of Hudson and Essex cars is sure to recur this Spring.

More than 22,000 Essex cars were sold in the past twelve months. The factory capacity was increased time after time. Beginning with a daily production of 30 cars, it reached 125 cars daily.

Yet we were never able to overtake advance orders.

A similar condition was true with respect to Hudson.

You remember how scores waited in vain for delivery. Perhaps you were among those disappointed.

Practically our entire quota of both Hudson and Essex cars were sold weeks ahead. Few were able to get delivery who had not placed their orders ahead.

Settle the Delivery Worry Now

This year we have arranged a special plan to guarantee you delivery, during the acute spring rush of orders.

It will require no large outlay of money.

You can place your order now. We will have your car ready for you on the day you want it.

Thus you dispose of all concern about getting your Hudson or Essex when you want it. It will be a source of satisfaction to know you are insured against having to accept some less wanted car, when the season for open types crowds the market with more buyers than we can supply.

If your preference is for a light car what choice equals the Essex?

It represents a new, unexpected value. It brings to the light car field such quality and fine performance as was hitherto found only among large costly cars.

Note the Quality of the Essex

If speed is your requirement see if the Essex does not meet it. Where luxury and finish are demanded compare the Essex with any car.

It is needless to speak of the Hudson. All know what it has done. Its records, which prove supremacy throughout the range of performance, are confirmed by the satisfaction that more than 80,000 owners know in their Super-Sixes.

The supply of Hudsons and of Essex has never been sufficient for the demand.

You can only insure yourself against disappointment in getting either of these popular cars, by placing your order under the convenient plan we have set forth above.

Durant First to Enroll for Race at Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 10.—Clifford Durant, millionaire son of W. C. Durant, head of the General Motors company, registered the first entry for the eighth international 500 mile sweepstakes race on the Indianapolis motor speedway Monday, May 31.

Durant wired his entry from California, where in the Chevrolet factory at Oakland a special 183 cubic inch flyer is being built to the new specifications of the Hoosier contest.

Durant was also the first to enter the race last year, showing a decided partiality for the coveted No. 1 position on the entry list. Like all knights of the wheel Durant has his pet superstition, his particular brand being that No. 1 carries luck for him.

Durant is the direct descendant of a generation of millionaire racing enthusiasts that formerly boasted such illustrious names as Caleb Bragg, Erwin Bergdoll, Art Greiner, and the late David Bruce-Brown and Spencer Wishart.

He loves to drive racing cars, not for the financial reward, but for the thrill and glory of a victory well won. A millionaire in his own right many times over by virtue of his holdings in the Chevrolet Motor Car Company of California, of which he is vice president, he risks the dangers of the speed sport and jeopardizes his millions for the sake of the intense stimulus of high speed competition.

GOOD ROAD BONDS

Two million dollars are in sight for an extension of the good road system in Cook county, as that amount in bonds of $1,000 each was ready for the market Jan. 1. Five millions are available for this work, the voters having approved the issue at the election of Nov. 4. There was some disposition on the part of some of the county commissioners to delay issuance of the first series of bonds until March 1, but Commissioner Frank J. Wilson, chairman of the roads and bridges committee, made a pointed fight for immediate action and in this he had a warm second in President Peter Reinberg and Commissioner Robert W. McKinley. Commissioner Wilson is checking up the plans in the office of the county highway superintendent and will accompany surveyors over all projected roadways to be built. The bonds will draw interest of 4½ per cent, payable semi-annually.

Auto Accidents Are Not Always Due to Drivers

Automobile Industry Harmed by Unwarranted Attacks.

BY CHARLES M. HAYES.
[President Chicago Motor Club.]

ACCOUNTS of automobile accidents are taking up a great deal of space in the newspapers of late and it is advisable for us as motorists to go into this matter in a thorough and impartial manner. Let us determine where the fault lies and then apply the remedy.

No particular reason can be given for the increasing number of deaths; there are many contributory elements entering into the question. First and foremost, we must consider the fact, overlooked by many, that automobile accidents are not more prevalent than a score of other accidents. They are more spectacular, that is all, and they attach to themselves undue publicity. For instance, do you know that the coroners' records show that it is more dangerous to stay at home than it is to go out on the streets? Asphyxiation, people falling out of windows, and other accidents claim more victims than the automobile. But nevertheless it is our duty to help decrease the death roll as far as possible.

Reckless driving has been given as the prime cause of accidents. Is this statement founded on fact? The coroners' records do not substantiate it; in fact, the majority of motorists held for investigation have been exonerated of all blame.

Whenever a motorist is so unfortunate as to injure a child there are always people ready to attest that it was the driver's fault. The man who does not drive a car is prone to blame the motorist on all occasions, but he would soon be cured of this tendency were he to spend an hour or two riding around Chicago's streets. Children play in the middle of thoroughfares that are heavy with traffic. Often they move from the path of a car with a deliberation that makes cold shivers run down the motorist's back.

I have seen children seated in a circle on a dimly lighted street. If children allowed to do this escape injury it is a miracle. The schools and parents should instill in the minds of the young ones the important fact that the streets are made for vehicles to run upon and that they are a dangerous playground for children.

As the records show that two-thirds of the accidents to children occur in the middle of the block it is self-evident that a thorough course of safety instruction is a necessary part of the elementary school's curriculum.

Adults, too, are often in need of instruction. There is not a motorist in Chicago, we may be safe in saying, who has not had a few experiences with Jay Walkers. Out into the middle of the street they walk, looking neither to the right nor to the left. If they are lucky, a motorist, scared half to death, jams on his brakes and no great damage is done, but all too often the driver hasn't a chance.

A Jay Walker in France is fined, even though he is injured. A law of this kind would help to eliminate a great many accidents. Finally, we come to the reckless driver. This class is made up in great part by chauffeurs. They are not paying for damages to the cars they drive and an accident now and then is no source of worry to many of them. The motorist who drives his own car 999 times out of a thousand is a careful, law abiding citizen and he is sick and tired of the hue and cry against speeders and reckless drivers. "Reckless pedestrians are more of a menace than reckless drivers," he says, and if the pedestrian wants proof let him drive around town, any day in the week, at any time. There will be proof in plenty.

We are not trying to show that all motorists are blameless, or that all pedestrians are dolts, but there are two sides to the question, and we feel bound to present the motorists' side. In the case of the criminally careless driver, we urge, for the benefit of the community, swift, stern justice. We will not condone his fault, whether he is a member of the Chicago Motor club or an utter stranger. If we allow mawkish sentiment, rather than facts, to influence the mind of the public, we may prepare ourselves for legislation that will hedge the operation of automobiles with almost unbearable restrictions. It is our duty to realize this fact and to advertise to the world that we are law-abiding citizens, with the interest of our fellowmen at heart. If the general public knew of the trials of the motorist they would not be so harsh in their judgments.

Why not headline every street car and railroad accident, every home accident, in the newspapers?

Try and find out just who is responsible and then advertise the facts. Continual unfavorable and unwarranted attacks will undoubtedly affect one of the greatest industries in America and cause the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to our citizens.

The Experts Say...

IF a nut resists all ordinary blandishments try the following: Heat slightly an ordinary single spanner that fits the nut and let it rest on the nut for a few minutes. The heat transmitted from spanner to nut expands the latter, so that it can usually be run off without further trouble. Do not make the mistake of heating the nut with a blow lamp, as this expands the bolt also, so that the condition is unaltered.

There are several causes of oil collecting on the points of the spark plugs. One of these is the use of too heavy a lubricating oil. If this trouble is persistent try mixing a pint of kerosene with each gallon of oil. This may cure the trouble.

When the car is stuck in deep mud and the wheels cannot get any purchase try wrapping the tire chains bodily around the tire and rim of the wheel, so that they make a big bunch, and then fasten them with a strap or some wire. Turn on low gear slowly and carefully and generally the wheels will get grip enough to pull the car out.

If upon examination the crankshaft or connecting rod bearings are found to be worn a little more on the ends than in the middle it may be taken as a sure sign that the crankshaft is not quite true.

Frequent removal of the core of an air valve will generally impair the holding ability of the small rubber washer. A small screw having a groove lengthwise on one side and threads to fit the inner part of the valve may be run down so far as to press on the core and keep the valve open until the air can escape, without its being necessary to remove the core.

After it has stood for several days, even in a tight tank, gasoline will become dead and slow to ignite. This is partly due to evaporation and partly to chemical changes that take place.

The porcelain of a spark plug may be made almost as clean as new by soaking in carbon disulphide.

A persistent and irregular misfiring in a Ford car will sometimes result by the current jumping across from the connections which project through the wooden dash under the hood to grease and dirt nearby. Thick hard rubber washers will cure the trouble.

Trouble often results from carelessness in replacing the manifolds of the Ford car. This occurs when the small gasket collars do not make airtight joints. It is well to fasten these gaskets in the holes in the manifold by using small pieces of paper to wedge them in and then adjusting the manifold to the holes in the cylinder. This plan obviates dropping them or getting them out of true.

A car owner recently devised an ingenious automatic safeguard against overheating. The ground for the ignition current was made by soldering a copper wire to the top of the rear cylinder. Just as soon as heat enough develops in the cylinder the solder is melted and the engine automatically stops.

A GREATER VALUE STEPHENS A GREATER SERVICE

SERVICE Owners Buy More Than Dependable Transportation

The purchaser of a SERVICE Motor Truck receives two great assets. The Truck itself—and the service back of it.

The shrewd, sensible business man buys a Truck, not on first cost but on the basis of an investment—on the returns he will receive in performance, economy and mileage.

The fact, that 68% of all SERVICE Motor Trucks built, are sold on repeat orders, proves conclusively that they have upheld the Judgment of their owners.

Not as mere passive carriers, but as an aggressive means of transportation, these dependable trucks are creating prestige, overcoming competition, reaching new sources of supply and demand. In short, proving real "Builders of Business."

And the service back of them is more than ordinary. For a truck must not only be sold—it must continue to function perfectly. A spirit of loyalty to SERVICE owners is paramount with every man at the SERVICE station.

"Here with a truck by 10 P. M., on your way by 8 A. M." is the motto, which they constantly live up to.

There is a SERVICE Motor Truck that will fit your exact requirements—that will build your business. 7 models from 1 to 5 tons. We will be glad to give you complete details; or upon request a catalog will be mailed.

The aroma, the blend, the flavor of good COFFEE are present in high degree only when that coffee is fresh

COFFEE
STEELE-WEDELES COMPANY
CHICAGO, ILL.

FINE coffee beans alone do not make good coffee. Coffee must be blended—by an expert. And this alone is not enough. The coffee must be roasted with skillful and painstaking exactness to a point where its aroma is perfect.

Granted that these difficult operations are performed, coffee is delicious only if it is fresh. The best coffee on earth is unsatisfactory if it is stale.

It is interesting, therefore, to note that Savoy coffee is not only carefully selected, artistically blended and skillfully roasted, but it is shipped on a Common Sense Schedule.

We have figured, in this schedule, just how long coffee may stay on your grocer's shelf and still be perfect. We have figured how rapidly each grocer sells his coffee. And we allow no grocer to buy more than he can sell in a given period.

This may explain why Savoy coffee never is disappointing, why people who have once enjoyed the fragrance and deliciousness of Savoy coffee find consistent enjoyment in it for years. For it is always fresh.

And it may explain your grocer's unshakable confidence in Savoy—his sincere and enthusiastic preference for this supremely good, fresh coffee.

LIVE SALESMEN WANTED.

What is easier to sell than something there is a demand for? There is now an active demand for subdivision lots well located. The scarcity of homes and the high cost of living is compelling people to seek new home locations and build their own homes. In view of this fact we have set out to sell $7,000,000 worth of vacant lots during 1920. We now have $3,000,000 worth of excellently located property ready for sale. This means that we will pay an enormous amount in commissions this year to our salesmen. Those who join us now have the opportunity of making an enormous income this year. Prompt closing of sales insures immediate payment of commissions. Experience not necessary in our business. We teach you in our free school of instruction. Join us now for a successful year. Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMEN — EXPERIENCED TIRE SALESMEN. Our need is for men to aid in the rapid development of this company. Our business has reached the proportion where it is necessary for us to build up our own distributing organization.

Capable men, who really are producers, will be able to qualify for executive positions. In the next few years there will be more big jobs than big men.

Men who meet our qualifications must be above the average.

This opportunity is no way to sudden wealth. You would start with us on your present salary. It will be up to you to convince us.

But you will later receive salary in proportion to your earnings and your worth to this company.

We have no so-called starting salary, nor do we have a regular scale of increase. It is absolutely up to the individual.

Neither will you step into an executive job at once.

We promote men from our sales force and make our selection on ability that has been proven.

There are several territories open. They are all in the Middle Western States. In some territories the salesman will make his headquarters away from Chicago. He will find the work hard and calling for all his ability, but he will have the backing of intelligent sales direction and a product second to none.

The big field jobs are yet to be made. Our future executives are probably in our sales force. This opportunity is identical to that offered by the biggest companies in the early days of their expansion, but our expansion has been more rapid and the job will come quicker to those who make a success with us.

Tell us about yourself by letter. The way you present yourself on paper will decide whether or not a personal interview will be arranged.

All replies will be treated with the strictest confidence.

Address The Miller Rubber Co., 2329 Michigan-av., Chicago, Ill.

Farms on Credit

We offer for sale some 40,000 acres of as good land as can be found anywhere. It is located in Kalkaska and Antrim counties, Mich. "BACK TO THE FARM" investors from every section are coming into this district and snapping up the fine bargains. We offer these excellent lands at prices which are only one or two year's rent in the central states, and one can safely say that in less than five years these farm lands will be worth more than double the price you are asked to pay for them now.

Any crops that thrive in Indiana, Iowa, Illinois, and Ohio will do well on our lands, besides many other crops those states do not produce. It is also ideal land for orchards, vineyards, cattle, sheep, truck farming and poultry raising.

We are selling these lands at $15 to $35 per acre in 10, 20, 40, 80, 160 acres or more on very liberal terms, a small cash payment down and easy monthly payments, or annual if preferred. We loan money to settlers to build and buy livestock when the land is paid for. With each purchase we furnish insurance free, which protects your family in case of your death. We maintain expert farm advisers the year round for the benefit of our customers. Our big beautiful booklet will be cheerfully mailed to you upon request, and you need feel yourself under no obligations whatever in requesting it.

A FLORIDA HOG WON GRAND PRIZE

At international live stock show. Florida cattle also are prize winners. Jacksonville is center of live stock industry.

Book, Jacksonville "Aziz,"

Tells why the big Armour packing plant was located in Jacksonville; gives dependable facts about conditions which make stock raising profitable in Florida. Free. City Advertising Dept., Room 10-ER, City Hall, Jacksonville, Fla.

IS THIS YOUR IDEA OF FLORIDA? A little piece of land near the water, a boat, a garden, some strawberry plants, and perhaps a few chickens; a vine covered cottage among your own orange and grape fruit trees; fish and oysters in abundance; plenty of quail and game—a simple, natural, wholesome life in the open the year round—Home, Health, and Contentment. All this is within your reach at modest outlay in this beautiful land of sunshine and roses. We are on the gulf and a navigable river, also on the Dixie Highway, and we are only two hours by auto jitney from Tampa and St. Petersburg, and only eight miles from Tarpon Springs. Here we have the freedom, comfort, and economy of country life, yet are within easy access of the big cities and resort centers. Our community is new and prices have not gone sky-high; living expenses are moderate. Over 100 northern families already here. They like it—perhaps you will. May we send complete information? INSTRUCTION.

INDUSTRIAL OPPORTUNITIES.

Everywhere manufacturers are looking for men who have or are training themselves for the "job higher up." Production must be increased, costs reduced. The industrial waste in the United States is estimated by efficiency experts to amount to over $50,000,000 per day, most of which is due to lack of training of executives and lack of co-ordination.

The demands for men who can produce results and the call for men with a knowledge of factory management is growing greater every day. The requirements for the men who enter this field call for a sound knowledge of the underlying principles of organization, administration, production and the relationship between employer and employee. The man who gets the job must know the "how" and "why" of these things.

Men trained in the science of factory management command large salaries and a knowledge of these principles opens up opportunities not only for independent practice, but for high salaried positions.

ARE YOU PREPARED?

The Industrial Extension Institute of New York provides an organized course of home study and training in "Factory Management." This is the first and only course of its kind which has ever been offered, and it is being used today by such organizations as the General Electric Co., National Conduit & Cable Co., General Motors Corp., and many others as a means of training their men for the "bigger job."

If you are awake to the new opportunities which are open to you in this profession of Industrial Engineering, a postcard addressed to the Institute will bring you detailed information as to the Factory Management Course and Service and a free 100 page booklet entitled "Thinking Beyond Your Job."

MFG. OPPORTUNITY

A business and industrial opportunity exists for such man or group of men as are in a positions to identify themselves with a farm production implement undertaking which in scope is as far-reaching in effect as the self-binder was and is to the farmer. This is no accessory invention, but a comprehensive and exclusive labor saving implement.

For financial gain and industrial magnitude it should approach the country's big enterprises. The permanent plant location should also eventually mean for the community in which it locates, something akin to what the Ford or similar plants have meant for both owners and home towns.

Past experimental stages and with a perfected product, we wish co-operation of only responsible and active parties; likewise inviting the attention of cities seeking industries. See

C. J. COLEMAN, 14 E. Jackson, Harr. 1740.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

ATTIC TO HELP SOLVE HOUSING PROBLEM OF CITY

May Be Answer to 'Where Am I Gonna Live?'

BY AL CHASE.

Our old childhood playground and refuge on rainy days, the home of all the fascinating accumulations of boxes, trunks, magazines, and glory of bygone days—the attic—is now booked for a star rôle in our present unpopular domestic drama running in Chicago, entitled, "Where Am I Gonna Live?"

"Add a room" is the easily said, easily remembered new slogan boosting the latest movement to answer that dramatic query and incidentally try to help solve Chicago's housing problem, launched by Building Commissioner Charles Bostrom.

And the "Add a Room" slogan is based on our friend the attic, or, to be exact, the 26,000,000 square feet of attic space which Mr. Bostrom figures is adaptable to use as living quarters. The result, if consistently carried out, would add 180,550 rooms 12x12 to Chicago's present living accommodations, according to Mr. Bostrom.

Finds Plenty of Space.

According to the annual report of Mr. Bostrom, soon to be off the press, approximately 25,000 houses were built in Chicago between five and twenty-five years ago, averaging 22x48 feet. Commissioner Bostrom, in supposing that most of these houses have attics or other large spaces that can be converted into rooms by the use of cheaply constructed partitions, estimates that there are about 26,000,000 square feet of unused space that can be converted into dwelling rooms that would meet the proper building requirements. Houses built previously to our present age of high prices of labor and material, Mr. Bostrom points out, were much more lavish of space and dimensions than now.

"I believe that the movement will take hold rapidly in Chicago and other cities," said Commissioner Bostrom. "Desirable rooms are at a premium, and many families have found it necessary to take others into their houses to help out on the rent, and this 'add a room' idea could be worked out in attics and other unused parts of houses and add a tremendous total of living space to the city."

Other Cities to Act.

Building commissioners throughout the country will be urged to take a hand in boosting the "add a room" movement, and it is figured that in some of the older cities a much larger percentage of available attic space can be found and utilized.

One advantage of the attic idea is that partitioning off rooms can be done fairly economically and quickly with either wood, wall board, or plaster board.

"Partitions can be put up much less expensively than is commonly supposed by using wall board," said John R. Buckley, general sales manager of the Cornell Wood Products company. "It is strong, rigid, and moisture proof and is materially less in cost than lath and plaster. And every room made and used helps pay the rent for the householder and bring down by several notches the cost of his living."

Britigan Opens 100 Acre South Side Subdivision

Another new subdivision has been opened on the south side by William H. Britigan. Bernard B. Jones has transferred to the Chicago Title and Trust company as trustee the 100 acre tract between Ninety-fifth and Ninety-ninth streets, South Park and Michigan avenues, just west of the Illinois Central car shops, and half a mile west of the Burnside station of the Illinois Central. Mr. Britigan has subdivided it and named it Bermont Manor. The entire tract has been improved with sewer, water, gas, sidewalks and pavements. Several flats and houses have been built and more are under construction.

6 Acre Tract Bought by Wreckers of Army Camp

The American Housewrecking company has leased from the Peabody Coal company the six acres bounded by the Northwestern and St. Paul tracks and Milwaukee avenue and Grace street for ten years at $12,500 annually, with an option to buy at $125,000 and have rentals apply on purchase. The buyers will erect warehouses. At present they are wrecking Camp Oglethorpe, Georgia, and the buildings on the site of the big Balaban & Katz film house to be erected at the southeast corner of State and Lake.

Lease Birchmont Hotel for 10 Years at $200,000

Vernon C. McGill has leased the four story Birchmont hotel at 1456 Fargo avenue to Charles M. and William F. Sommers for ten years from Jan. 1, 1920, at a term rental of $200,000. The building, which contains fifty-seven apartments of two, three, and five rooms, was built six years ago. The new lessees have purchased the furnishings and will operate it as a family hotel after making considerable improvements. P. H. Reed & Co. were the brokers.

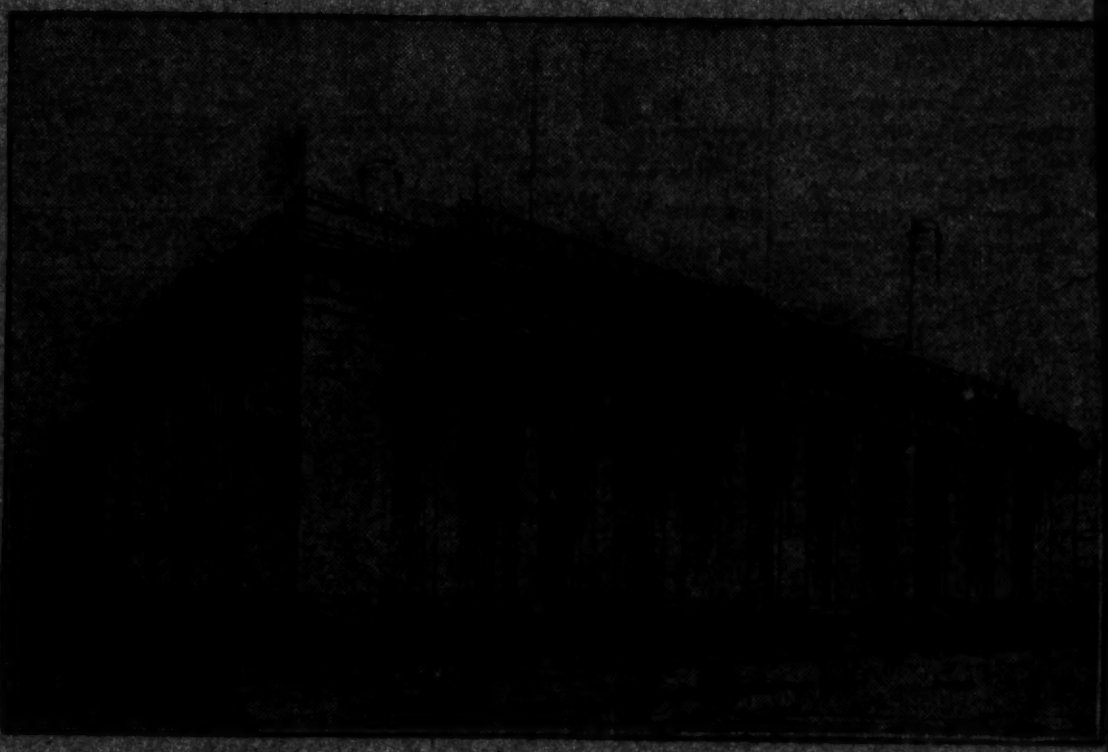
$2,000,000 HOTEL FOR STREETERVILLE BLOCK FROM LAKE

Streeterville is to have a new $2,000,000 eight story apartment hotel, to cover the entire frontage of 217 feet on De Witt place, west front, between Delaware place and Chestnut street, 85 feet on Delaware and 100 feet on Chestnut. It will be a block from the Lake Shore drive.

Richard T. Davis, 1664 Chamber of Commerce building, owner of the property and acting as his own broker, sold the hotel site to Joseph T. Schlacks, who took title for his brother, Henry J. Schlacks, for a reported consideration of approximately $115,000. There were two pieces of realty sold, the 102x100 at the northeast corner of Chestnut and De Witt, and the 85x100 at the southeast corner of Delaware and De Witt.

The owner is also architect of the new hotel. It will contain around 200 apartments of one, two, three, and four rooms, and, of course, the usual lobby, grill, restaurant, lounging rooms, etc., of the modern hotel. Work will start this spring and it is expected to be completed next fall.



HIGHER PRICES FOR BUILDING MATERIAL SEEN

Manufacturers Point to Labor Situation.

That prices of all building materials are going to keep on climbing to higher levels this year as a result of heavy underproduction caused by the labor situation is the opinion of leading manufacturers, according to the replies received by S. W. Straus & Co. to a questionnaire recently sent out. One reply has a ray of cheer in predicting slightly lower costs by the end of 1920. Another says the peak has been reached, but prices will stay up for several years.

There is a heavy demand indicated for all commodities used in construction work and it is expected that the amount of building activity this year will be limited only by the ability of the material manufacturers to keep up production.

Behind Normal Years.

The manager of one of the largest manufacturers of steel products replied to the questionnaire as follows:

"In our opinion the demand for building materials at the present time exceeds the available supply, at least in the eastern half of the United States. This is particularly true as regards steel products, such as reinforcing steel, expanding metal lath, and steel windows. We are not producing as much as in normal years.

"We believe the upward trend in general costs of building materials will continue and that there will be no recession during 1920. We are anticipating unusual activity in building and construction work, providing the building trade unions agree to produce instead of striking."

Demand Exceeds Supply.

The president of a terra cotta company said:

"In my opinion, the demand for building materials at the present time is greater than the supply, and we are producing only about 50 per cent of what we produce in normal years. The main cause of underproduction in the building material industry is the labor situation. The present upward trend in general costs in building materials will continue until there is greater production, which must be brought about by a very considerable increase in the available constant supply of labor."

Here's an Optimist.

The president of one of the largest sheet and tube companies said:

"I am of the opinion that there is sufficient material for present demand. Our production this year will be about 65 to 70 per cent of normal, due to a slackened demand the first half of the year and to the strike in the steel industry. I think that the cost of labor in most lines has reached its peak and for that reason I do not believe that there will be any further increase in the cost of building materials. I rather look for slightly lower costs in some lines the latter part of 1920."

VINEGAR PLANT SOLD.

The Spielmann Bros. company, vinegar manufacturers, has sold the four story plant it formerly occupied in North avenue, 216 feet east of Sheffield avenue, south front, 175x125, to Peter A. Lorenz for an indicated consideration of $47,500. The property was purchased for investment.

SKY HIGH OFFICE RENTALS IN N. Y.

New York, Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Downtown office space in New York is almost unobtainable, except at fabulous rentals. It is reported that a new lease running out next May at $7,000 per annum was immediately taken up at $18,000 per annum for a term of years. Shortly afterward some one said he would willingly have paid $22,000 for the same space.

Another instance is reported where the owners of a large downtown office building paid a tenant $75,000 to cancel his lease (made at time of construction) of an entire floor in order that a new lease might be made to a large corporation at an advance of $25,500 a year for ten years.

A report is current that Chicago interests have been trying to persuade big New York insurance companies to move uptown and finance a $25,000,000 land and building project, but without success. Too many of the large companies own their own buildings in lower New York and too many brokers have long term leases in this district to make possible the uptown [illegible].

Architectural Tribute Paid to Industrial God of Power

If Power is the god that rules our modern industrial life, then Power should be housed in the most monumental of structures, is the theory carried out by Architects Marshall & Fox in planning the new Commonwealth Edison company's $5,000,000 South Chicago power station, to be built on the east bank of the Calumet river between Ninety-eight and One Hundredth streets.

The new station, which will be one of the largest power plants in the world, will be approximately 500 feet long, 260 feet wide, and 96 feet high. It will be faced with Bedford stone and treated with pure Doric columns along the entire façade. This conception [illegible] new for power stations. It will have all the usual surrounding 'eyesores' eliminated as far as possible and the yards will be treated with gardens and shrubbery to make a proper setting for so monumental a structure.

Work is to begin at once and it is hoped to have it finished the early part of 1921, although it is possible it may be completed the latter part of this year. It will supply power to the entire Calumet district.

PENCIL COMPANY STARTS WORK ON $600,000 PLANT

Demand for a nationally advertised pencil made by the Wahl company has forced that concern to start work on a $600,000 addition to their present plant at 1800 Roscoe street on a lot 175x125 in Roscoe street, between Ravenswood avenue and Lincoln street. It will be four stories and have 150,000 square feet of floor space. The Wahl company also makes adding machines. The site was purchased through Charles Baumann & Co. for a reported consideration of $22,000.

Another good sized plant is planned on a site a mile eastward, lot 175x125, east front, just south of Roscoe street, in Clifton avenue, to be a three story addition to the American Colortype company, at Roscoe and Racine. The property was purchased through the same brokers for a reported price of $40,000, subject to $28,000.

K. B. BOSE & CO. MOVE.

K. B. Bose & Co. have moved their offices from the Otis building to larger quarters in the Ogden building, at the southwest corner of Clark and Lake streets, where they will occupy the entire bank floor formerly occupied by the National [illegible] bank.
